OUR NAVY NOT BALANCED AND WELL-ROUNDED, WRITES EXPERT, AFTER MANEUVERS

Frank J. Sprague, Member of Consulting Board and Noted Electrical Engineer, Says We Have Many Fine Ships, but That We Are Lacking in Certain Types of Vessels That Are Absolutely Essential to Make Our Fleet a Perfect Fighting Machine.

By FRANK J. SPRAGUE.

Graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy and Member of the Naval Consulting Board of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers.

MY opportunity to join the Atlantic Fleet on its Winter cruise was incidental to my being a member of the United States Naval Consulting Board, and the result of my expressed conviction that as such, despite my early naval training—perhaps, indeed, because of it—it was my duty to become intimately acquainted with the present conditions of the personnel and material of the service as evidenced in actual battle maneuvers, drills and target practice at sea.

So when Capt. Hugh Rodman of the United States superdreadnought New York, one of the navy's best officers and navigators, invited me to be his guest — conditioned, of course, on the readily given consent of the Secretary of the Navy—and to make so much of the Winter cruise as my time would permit, I dropped business and social engagements, packed my grip, and joined the ship as she was getting under way at Tompkinsville.

On the run from New York to the drill grounds off Cape Hatteras, thence to the vicinity of Bermuda, and on to Culebra Bay, east of Porto Rico, which took about a fortnight, battle maneuvers, with the attendant drills of the crews, were constant day and night. They included attempts to prevent the junction of an enemy's squadrons, the convoying of a supply train, its cutting adrift and the reunion of its protecting ships with their own squadrons, an attempt to join a constructive squadron at an oppointed rendezvous, and failure to do so because of the interruption and giving of battle by the enemy's squadron.

15 Line-of-Battle Ships in Maneuvers Off Culebra

THE actual fleet assembled included 15 line-of-battle ships, dreadnoughts and superdreadnoughts, 18 destroyers and their scout, a train of two colliers, a supply and a repair ship, the latter being picked up off Bermuda after causing, as did the appearance of one of our squadrons, something of curiosity at least on the part of the ever-watchful English cruisers on duty there.

Arriving at Culebra Bay, where the ships came to anchor in splendid fashion at their appointed places as the shadows were marking the close of a tropical day, the daily drills were immediately followed by spotting and target practice with the main turret guns, as well as by incidental drills with the secondary battery, and searchlight and torpedo exercises, interspersed with the necessary periods of relaxation for the men.

Toward the close of the month, the destroyers and some of the auxiliaries having been sent to their various destinations, the main fleet, under the lead of Admiral Frank Fletcher's flagship, the Wyoming, proceeded to Guantanamo Bay, at the eastern end of Cuba, where, on Jan. 28, occurred, for the first time in our service, competitive firing of salvos of the complete batteries of 10 14-inch guns on the New York and Texas, in which, on the former, the firing was from a directorscope in the conning tower, while on the latter it was by the individual turret gun pointers, all under the critical eyes of the representative gunnery officers from the fleet.

FRANK JULIAN SPRAGUE, representative in the Naval Consulting Board of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, is one of the world's recognized authorities in all matters pertaining to the application of electrical power. He is an honor graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, was associated with Thomas A. Edison in the development of the electric light, built some of the first of modern electric railways, and developed the multiple unit system of electric railway control now in use throughout the world.

Because of his membership in the Naval Consulting Board Mr. Sprague was invited to witness the 1916 battle maneuvers and exercises of the Atlantic Fleet in Southern waters, and he is one of the few civilians, if not the only one, to whom that privilege has ever been granted by the Navy Department. In the article Mr. Sprague, for the first time since his experiences with the greatest of all American fleets, and indicates what, in his opinion, should be done to make that fleet one of the most powerful offensive and defensive fighting organizations in the world.

Although full two or three months actual target practice and drills were scheduled, personal matters made it necessary for me to say good-by to the Admiral and my host, and at the end of the month I left for Santiago on the Yankton, and, crossing Cuba, returned home via Havana, Key West and Washington, where I made a brief report to the Secretary of the Navy, supplementing it later with a written one, which contained not alone some of the general features therein permissibly outlined, but others of a purely confidential nature.

During the four weeks I was on board the New York there was scarcely an idle waking moment, for, as I had been invited to do, I haunted every part of the ship, from keel to fighting mast, from magazine and torpedo rooms, engine and fire room, to turrets and conning tower. The opportunity to become intimately acquainted with the actual life and conditions on board ship were such as are rarely vouchsafed to a civilian.

As I had been originally largely instrumental in the introduction of electricity on board our ships, its extraordinary development in connection with not alone all the ordinary affairs of daily life, but in connection with steering, ship and battery control, and gun fire, interested, and, in fact, amazed me.

It was especially gratifying to note the success of the gyro-compass and its accessories, the invention of Elmer Sperry, in its practical and revolutionary application to navigation and gun fire, as well as the unquestioned success of the first application of electricity to propulsion, as exemplified on the collier Jupiter, and now adopted on our latest authorized ships.

Favorably Impressed With Both Officers and Crews

IT was, of course, inevitable that certain impressions should be formed, some favorable, others less so when considering not so much a single ship as a fleet from a battle standard—its readiness, in short, if called upon to meet any first-class power.

With regard to the officers, I could not but feel a new pride in my alma mater, the United States Naval Academy, and more than ever convinced that no school in the world was turning out a finer body of men, or one more fitly representing the best democracy of its country. These men, ignoring all questions of politics, are devoting themselves, single-minded, to their profession, with an eye to maintaining at all times the efficiency of the service; and if ever the time of trial comes they will, so far as lies in their power and with the means at their command, uphold the best traditions of an honorable service.

So, with regard to the crews, my impressions were distinctly favorable, for they represent a picked and

"The Great Shakspeare Mystery"

By Col. Henry Watterson

Name Only a Trademark, Says the Editor; Marlowe, Not Bacon, Probable Creator of Plays

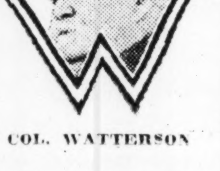
Real Shakspeare Lived and Died a Nobody, and All the Contemporary Facts Go to Prove That He Had No Literary Knowledge and No Mention Is Made in His Elaborate Will in Which He Included Everything, Even Down to His Dog, of Books or Rights in Plays.

In view of the fact that throughout the English-speaking world this week is to be devoted to exercises in memory of the three hundredth anniversary of Shakspeare's death, the following article by Col. Watterson is of great interest.

By COL. HENRY WATTERSON.

The Famous Editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal.

I.



COL. WATTERSON

WHEN Ignatius Donelly was a member of Congress—morbidly obessed by the Baconian theory of the Shakspeare authorship and on that account avoided by many of his colleagues as a literary bore — Proctor Knott resolved that he should have a hearing, and with this purpose in view asked a distinguished company to meet the Minnesotan at dinner.

Inevitably the then Kentucky Representative, Joseph C. S. Blackburn, and the renowned Kentucky humorist, Col. Richard C. Wintersmith, were of the party.

Delighted with his opportunity, the Baconian enthusiast proceeded to state and elaborate his hypothesis and expound and elucidate his cryptogram. Col. Wintersmith listened with the courteous attention which was his characteristic. But, as the story lengthened and the argument thickened, the wine, which at a certain point usually made the Colonel at least abruptly frank, got in its work. At length he could stand it no longer. "Mr. Donnelly," he said, "I cannot allow you to go any further on this line, because I know, as a matter of fact, that William Shakspeare of Stratford-on-Avon, wrote those plays—every one of them." Donnelly, startled, said: "How could you know that, Col. Wintersmith?" And, without a moment's hesitation, but with an air of finality, the Colonel replied: "Because I was there, sir, and I saw him write them." Though knocked almost speechless, Donnelly found voice to murmur, "Why, Col. Wintersmith, it was 300 years ago," and, turning placidly to Mr. Blackburn, the Colonel said, as if exchanging a pleasantry, "Joe, how time passes!"

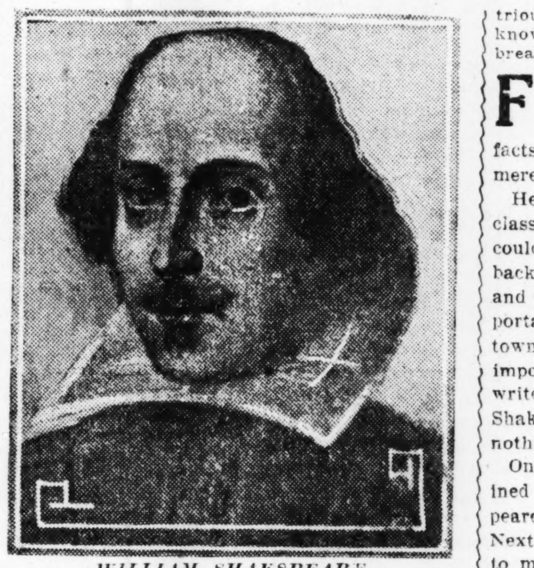
A more famous humorist of Kentucky origin, the late Samuel L. Clemens, equally as positive as Col. Wintersmith, was sure that William Shakspeare of Stratford-on-Avon, did not write the plays which stand in his name.

People Like to Be Fooled.

ONE of the last things Mark Twain did in life was to write and publish a book to prove this latter contention. It is a rambling, colloquial, reminiscential essay—broken here and there by autobiographic interruptions—spite of which, however, no one can read it without being seriously impressed. Mark Twain was not a Baconian. "Did Francis Bacon write Shakspeare's works?" he asks, and promptly answers, "Nobody knows." At the same time he is confident that the "Claimant of Stratford," whom he laughs to scorn, did not write them, and adduces proof which ought to be regarded as conclusive that he did not and could not.

We scarcely need Mark Twain to tell us that the world loves a mystery and dotes on a paradox. The author of "Tom Sawyer" has a chapter upon the fakes and fakers of history from Perkin Warbeck and Lambert Simnel to the Count Cagliostro and Arthur Orton. He calls them "claimants," putting Satan at the head of the list, as with the "Bard of Avon," the greatest of all. "The Golden Calf, claimant; the Veiled Prophet of Khorassan, claimant; Louis the XVII, claimant; William Shakspeare, claimant," and so on, never one of them "that couldn't get a hearing, that couldn't collect a rapturous following, no matter how flimsy his pretension and obvious its absurdity."

It is but too true. There are people who credit Dumas' fiction about The Man in the Iron Mask. There are people who believe that John Wilkes Booth was not killed near Bowling Green, Va., but that he made his escape and died at last under an assumed name in Texas. What wonder that, with the title pages of 10,000 editions to sustain the assumption, the world accepts the preposterous Shakspeare fake? That Shakspeare himself, the producing theatrical manager of London and thrifty money lender and land speculator of Stratford-on-Avon, set no store by the authorship, is shown by the circumstance that, though the plays were frequently pirated, he made no protest. That the public of his day and generation held him and his alleged authorship in no great account is shown by the circumstance that his death was not made the occasion of particular remark in London, or ceremonial in Stratford-on-Avon. Barring Ben Jonson's apostrophe appended to a collection of the plays in 1623, seven years after his death, not a line of contemporary evidence can be found that Shakspeare was other than a trade mark.



WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.
(From the "Droeshout Print).

This engraving was prefixed to the first great folio edition of Shakspeare's plays issued in 1623. With the "D'Avenant" and the "Stratford" busts, neither of which resembles the other and both of which are unlike this picture, it rounds out the group of three portraits that are classed as "genuine and authoritative."

A Nobody When He Died.

NOR was he heralded as a poet—of whom nothing was locally remembered—until he had lain in his grave three-quarters of a century. On this point Mark Twain's observations are striking. I quote as follows:

"When Shakspeare died, in 1616, great literary productions attributed to him as author had been before the London world and in high favor for 24 years. Yet his death was not an event. It made no stir, it attracted no attention. Apparently his eminent literary contemporaries did not realize that a celebrated poet had passed from their midst. Perhaps they knew a play-actor of minor rank had disappeared, but did not regard him as the author of his works.

"His death was not even an event in the little town of Stratford. Does this mean that in Stratford he was not regarded as a celebrity of any kind?

"He had spent the first 22 to 23 years of his life there, and of course knew everybody and was known by everybody of that day in the town, including the dogs and the cats and the horses. He had spent the last five or six years of his life there, diligently trading in every big and little thing that had money in it; so we are compelled to assume that many of the folk there in those said latter days knew him personally, and the rest by sight and hearsay. But not as a celebrity? For everybody soon forgot to remember any contact with him or any incident connected with him. The dozens of townspeople, still alive, who had known of him or known about him in the first 23 years of his life were in the same unremembering condition; if they knew of any incident connected with that period of his life they didn't tell about it. Would they if they had been asked? It is pretty apparent that they were not. Why weren't they? It is a very plausible guess that nobody there or elsewhere was interested to know.

"For seven years after Shakspeare's death nobody seems to have been interested in him. Then the quarto was published, and Ben Jonson awoke out of his long indifference and sang a song of praise and put it in the front of the book. Then silence fell again.

"For 60 years. Then inquiries into Shakspeare's Stratford life began to be made of Stratfordians. Of Stratfordians who had known Shakspeare or had seen him? No. Then of Stratfordians who had seen people who had known or seen people who had seen Shakspeare? No. Apparently the inquiries were only made of Stratfordians who were not Stratfordians of Shakspeare's day, but later comers; and what they had learned had come to them from persons who had not seen Shakspeare; and what they had learned was not claimed as fact, but only as legend—dim and fading and indefinite legend; legend of the calf-slaughtering rank, and not worth remembering either as history or fiction.

"Has it ever happened before—or since—that a celebrated person who had spent exactly half of a fairly long life in the village where he was born and reared, was able to slip out of this world and leave that village voiceless and gossipless behind him—utterly voiceless, utterly gossipless? And permanently so? I don't believe it has happened in any case except Shakspeare's. And couldn't and wouldn't have happened in his case if he had been regarded as a celebrity at the time of his death."

II.

Shakspeare Parallels Satan in Biographical Details

DWELLING upon the ease, as well as the prevalence of the preposterous, in that queer little book of his, Mark Twain says:

"How curious and interesting is the parallel—as far as poverty of biographical details is concerned—between Satan and Shakspeare. It is wonderful, it is unique, it stands quite alone; there is nothing resembling it in history, nothing resembling it in romance, nothing approaching it even in tradition. How sublime is their position and how overtopping, how sky-reaching, how supreme—the two Great Unknowns, the two Illustrious Conjecturabilities! They are the best-known unknown persons that have ever drawn breath upon the planet."

FOR the instruction of the ignorant he then proceeds to make a list of such details of Shakspeare's history as are facts—verified facts, established facts, undisputed facts—and not mere assumptions.

He was born on April 23, 1564. Of good farmer-class parents who could not read, could not write, could not sign their names; at Stratford, a small back settlement which in that day was shabby and unclean and densely illiterate. Of the 19 important men charged with the government of the town, 13 had to "make their mark" in attesting important documents, because they could not write their names. Of the first 18 years of the Shakspearean life thus ushered into the world nothing is known. They are a blank.

On Nov. 27, 1582, as Mark Twain, having examined the official records, shows, William Shakspeare took out a license to marry Anne Whateley. Next day William Shakspeare took out a license to marry Anne Hathaway, who was eight years his senior. He actually married Anne Hathaway. By grace of a reluctantly granted dispensation there was but one publication of the banns. Within six months the first child was born.

Two years followed, during which nothing at all happened to Shakspeare, as far as anybody knows. Then came twins—1585. Again two blank years, when—1857—he takes himself off for a 10-year visit to London, leaving the family behind.

A Grasping Money Changer.

FIVE blank years following. During this period nothing happened to him, as far as anybody knows. Then—1592—there is mention of him as an actor. Next year—1593—his name appears in the official list of players. The following years—1594—he played before the Queen, a detail of no consequence; other obscurities did it every year of the 45 of her reign and remained obscure. Three fairly full years are next accounted for; full of play-acting. Then in 1597 he bought New Place, Stratford.

Thirteen or fourteen busy years ensue; years in which he accumulated money, and also reputation as actor and manager. Meantime his name, liberally and variously spelt, had become associated with a number of great plays and poems, as, on the outside, author of the same. Some of them, in these years, and later, were pirated, but he made no protest.

Then—1610-11—he returned to Stratford and settled down for good and all, and busied himself in lending money, trading in tithes, trading in land and houses; shirking a debt of 41 shillings, borrowed by his wife during his long desertion of his family; suing debtors for shillings and coppers; being sued himself for shillings and coppers, and acting as confederate to a neighbor who tried to rob the town of its rights in a certain common, and did not succeed.

He lived five or six years—till 1616—in the joy of these elevated pursuits. Then he made a will, and signed each of three pages with his name. It was a thoroughgoing business man's will. It named in minute detail every item of property he owned in the world—houses, lands, sword, silver-gilt bowl and so on—all the way down to his "second-best bed" and its furniture.

Will Didn't Mention Book.

IT carefully and calculatingly distributed his riches among the members of his family, overlooking no individual member. Not even his wife; the wife he had been enabled to marry in a hurry by urgent grace of a special dispensation before he was 19; the wife whom he had left husbandless so many years; the wife who had had to borrow 41 shillings in her need, and which the lender was never able to collect of the prosperous husband, but died at last with the money still lacking. No, even this wife was remembered in Shakspeare's will. He left her that "second-best bed." And never another thing; not even a penny to bless her lucky widowhood with. It was eminently and conspicuously a business man's will, not a poet's.

It mentioned not a single book. Books were much more precious than swords and silver-gilt bowls and second-best beds in those days, and when a departing person owned one he gave it a high place in his will. The will mentioned not a play, not a poem, not an unfinished literary work, not a scrap of manuscript of any kind.

"Many poets have died poor," sententiously interjects the creator of "Pudd'nhead Wilson," "but this is the only one in history that has died this poor; the others all left literary remains behind."

"If Shakspeare owned a dog," he goes on to say, "I am sure he would have mentioned it in his will. If a good dog, Susanna would have got it; if a cur dog, his wife would have got a dower interest in it, sometimes I wish he had owned a dog, just so we could see how painstakingly he would have divided that dog among the family, in his careful business way."

He signed the will in three places.

"Pulitzer School of Journalism No Longer Experiment, but An Achievement," Says Its Dean

Dr. Talcott Williams, on Visit to St. Louis, Says That Success of Institution Founded by Late Owner of the Post-Dispatch and the New York World With $2,000,000 Bequest Proves That It Can Do Great Service in Raising Standards of Newspaper Work.

DR. TALCOTT WILLIAMS, dean of the School of Journalism, on the Pulitzer Foundation, in Columbia University, New York, was in St. Louis Thursday, on his way to a conference of teachers of journalism, in Lawrence, Kan. He told a Post-Dispatch reporter of the work which the school has done, in the nearly four years of its existence, in training men and women for newspaper work.

The School of Journalism was founded with a $1,000,000 gift of the late Joseph Pulitzer, and on plans outlined by him. Mr. Pulitzer's will ratified the gift of $1,000,000, and contained a bequest of a second $1,000,000, on condition that, after the school should have been in operation three years, the trustees of the Pulitzer estate should decide that it had been successful in its purpose. The trustees have made a decision favorable to the school, which will accordingly double its resources.

Another provision of Mr. Pulitzer's will, which will be carried out by the trustees and the university authorities, is a list of nine annual prizes and five annual scholarships, amounting to $16,500 a year. The prizes are to be awarded for various forms of literary work and journalistic achievement. The scholarships are for European travel and study, and three of them are for graduates of the School of Journalism, one for a student of art and one for a student of music.

Dr. Williams was in St. Louis four years ago, when the School of Journalism was about to be opened, and told, in an interview in the Post-Dispatch, of the plans for the institution. He is now able to tell how those plans have worked out.

No Longer an Experiment, It Is an Achievement.

"THE Pulitzer School of Journalism," said Dr. Williams, "is no longer an experiment. It is an achievement.

"We will send out, in June, our fourth class. The first, in 1913, was made up of college graduates, who were admitted to advanced standing in the School of Journalism. In the class of 1914, one-third of the men had two years' training in the school. In this year's class, one-half have had the whole four years' training in the School of Journalism, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Literature in Journalism.

"The school has an enrollment of about 140, having more than doubled its enrollment since it was opened. It is graduating 20 to 25 a year.

"It is now clear that the intensive training in the fundamentals of the journalist's education, insisted on by Joseph Pulitzer in his plans for the school, gives a preparation which secures for the student a capacity for the work of a journalist, from the time he begins as a reporter, and on through his promotions. This training is more efficient, for his special work, than can be had where the courses are not taken with reference to the immediate work of the journalist.

"The drill in writing, given in the four years' course, taking men direct from the high school, beginning in the first year, and carried on until graduation, gives, first, the ability to write the 'clean copy' which a newspaper office demands. I mean copy free from blunders in spelling, accurately punctuated, with an arrangement which puts the most important topic first, and a sense of news value which enables a man to know the length a story should have, and to emphasize by spirit and style, as well as by arrangement and presentation, the points of a narrative which count. This alone is a large endowment for the future newspaper man.

"A school of journalism can no more make the newspaper man than a school of medicine can make the physician. A professional school can prepare, but not create, the professional man. Practice alone can do that.

"But the course of the School of Journalism does give that equipment as a newspaper writer, which every city editor knows to be indispensable, and difficult to secure in several years during which the average man is receiving more in training than he is giving in efficiency. This equipment, this training in writing and arrangement, is supplemented, in the graduate of the School of Journalism, by wide knowledge of the newspaper. He has not only learned to read the news, but he understands the work of the financial and market page. He has done careful work in dramatic and art criticism, and has learned the methods by which a man can prepare himself to deal intelligently with a new performance or a fresh exhibition. He has worked at editorial writing, and has learned the sources from which the information editorial is written. He has acquired the knowledge, important in all branches of newspaper work, of what must not be written. He has made a close study of libel laws, and he is schooled in the care with which a newspaper writer must avoid needless affronts to one great share or another of the readers of a newspaper, which so often flaw and render less valuable the work of a new man.

"Above all, the graduate of the School of Journalism has gone out on assignments in our greatest city, New York. He has learned how a big meeting is handled. He has chased down the details of news. He has clearly in his mind the human interest side of a story, and the weight which attaches to important news, whose interest has to be made clear to the average reader by the way it is told and explained.

Making the Important News Interesting

"SOME newspapers give chiefly important news, some give chiefly news which is interesting, whether important or no. The true and complete newspaper makes important news interesting, through its presentation, and interesting news important through the way it is handled and put in relation with life and society.

"Four years' experience shows that this can be taught in a school of journalism, so that when a man enters the newspaper office, he understands what is wanted of him, and the city editor or assistant city editor is relieved of mere detail in breaking in the new man.

"Back of all this his acquaintance with recent history abroad, recent politics in the United States, books of reference and the broad facts of legislation, business, finance and other great fields of human activity, which prevent a man from blunders, on one hand, and, on the other, from ignorance as to the

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Our Mexican Policy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Regarding the Mexican question, I am a great admirer of President Wilson and think he has been entirely right in his non-intervention policy, but differ with him and his advisers on the action taken following the Columbus, N. M., raid. When the raid occurred, the Carranza de facto Government had been recognized by us and Ambassadors exchanged. That Government should have been held strictly accountable for any acts of depredation and murder committed on American soil by outlaws operating from Mexico, who, after the deed return to that country, whether such outlaws be led by Villa or anyone else. Our patrol along the border should be strengthened to prevent a recurrence and a competent fleet of warships sent to Vera Cruz or some equally important Mexican port and said port seized and the Carranza Government notified that it would be held (and others, if necessary), all customs, etc., collected, until Villa and other bandit leaders, who were responsible for the raid, were captured and delivered to the authorities at Columbus, N. M., to be tried for murder in the first degree.

The burden of capture should have been put upon the Mexican Government. This would have prevented the embarrassing situation that now exists on account of the presence of our troops in Mexico, that will perhaps cost the lives of hundreds, possibly thousands, of our soldiers and the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

PHIL OSSIFER.

Volunteer System vs. Conscription.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Having read the recent statement of the anti-preparedness advocates, in which they condemn those who want the country to efficiently prepare for defense and where they charge the press of being influenced by the manufacturers of munitions, will say that any well-informed person knows that the populace are demanding of the press and of Congress that we be more efficiently prepared and that while the volunteer system is patriotic, it is also unjust, as well as cowardly, to sacrifice the patriotic, and it is un-American and is not dependable. Why should we volunteer while the coward and the scallawag stay at home to have a good time? OLD VOLUNTEER.

Why Recruiting Is Slow.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

After reading the article in the Monday evening paper concerning the wants of the American soldiers in Mexico, I have decided to write this letter. I have seen the recruiting officers posted at street corners, and also small billboards placed beside them trying to tempt our young men to enlist in the hunt for Villa. Now, do they think that the young men are anxious to join in the ranks when they read of their enlisted brothers suffering privation as they are in Mexico? Why, that, in my estimation, is only a skirmish, a man hunt, and when America can't supply the boys for that, what would they do if they went to war with a well-equipped nation—Germany for instance? Why, the boys would starve to death unless they could seize to the enemies' food and exist on that.

I was born and reared in America and have always been proud of the fact, but pride dies a violent death when we Americans see our nation's inferiority to other nations being advertised and proclaimed aloud to the world.

Why not all get together and make the big noise that spells preparedness and prove that we are a big, a very big, unit, on the face of the earth.

LET AMERICA BE FIRST.

Vivisection—A Protest.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A recent news item in regard to the Michigan State University professor's experimenting upon living persons, recalls the vivisectionists' statement of some years ago, that if the secretive, vicious and cruel thing our country tolerates as vivisection, goes unhampered, it will not be long till human victims are required and obtained.

Some experimentation upon animals may have been necessary, but the unnecessary torture and neglect, connected with it, the repeating of the same operation by students, merely to get the practice, the absolute withdrawal from report or explanation or observation, by the medical fraternity, the fighting of any and all laws regulating or defining its practice are all of them evils it is time we should overthrow. Dr. Wile expresses the attitude of them all when he says: "You may quote me as having absolutely no interest in what the people may wish to think regarding my experiment." If such persons can and do operate on the bodies of the insane without the consent or knowledge of the guardians of such persons, if they say it is nobody's business what they do, where will it all end?

In any case, does it look as though such men are going to give any helpless, innocent animal a fair deal? If vivisection is for the good of the public, let the public know and approve. If it is a shameful thing, let the public know that and stop it.

L. M. C.

OUR CAUSE OF WAR.

One of the criticisms of the President's ultimatum to Germany on the submarine issue, expressed by several newspapers which support his stand, is that he has weakened his protest by basing it largely on the ground of "humanity."

In our opinion the President strengthened his position by including in his indictment of Germany's submarine warfare not only the violation of American rights under international law and the breaking of pledges to us, but the disregard of international law and the rules of humanity. We not only assert American rights and Germany's obligations to us, which are fundamental, but we assert the rights of all neutrals and of all weaker nations which are powerless to uphold their own rights. We stand in this great controversy for international law in its broadest sense, for the limitation of the frightfulness of war by considerations of humanity in the treatment of the weak and the helpless; we stand for the protection of the noncombatant and the unoffending nation.

If we should be compelled to go into the turmoil that is devastating Europe we shall not enter it to feed any sordid ambition of our own, or of any belligerent; we shall not take up arms to support England's or France's or Russia's special ambitions or ends; we shall not enter to remake the map of Europe to suit any belligerent or set of belligerents; we shall not enter merely to punish for attacking and killing Americans on the sea or for destroying American property and violating American rights. These are sufficient reasons, but our issue goes beyond them. We shall fight, if fight we must, for larger ends—for right, law and civilization.

Entering the turmoil upon this high ground our policy will be in accord with American ideals and traditions. The object will be worthy of the labor and sacrifice of the American people. We shall be able to adopt a policy and frame a platform which will invite to our standard all those who cherish the vital interests of mankind. Our quarrel with Germany will cease the moment that nation agrees to our international platform. Our bond with the allies will be limited to these ends. We will not join with them to crush Germany, but to maintain civilization—the rights of all men and of all nations.

Standing on this ground the United States can become a powerful factor for permanent peace. We will be in position to insist that the results of the war shall not embody selfish gain or perpetuate wrong, but shall establish right. We shall be in a position to contribute potently to the organization of a league of nations to maintain national rights and enforce international law and international arbitration.

We do not doubt that President Wilson has this vision and sees the nation's opportunity. It is indicated in his German note. It was foreshadowed in his speech when he appealed to the American to go in, if they must, not for selfish interest, but for the interest of humanity.

It is this note of American idealism that holds out the chief hope of peace, inspires American spirit and exalts the purpose with which we undertake at any cost to maintain our cause. It is the only hope of substantial gain for mankind in the orgy of destruction.

AS ILLUSTRATED BY MR. GOBIN'S CASE.

A decision of an Illinois Appellate Court enables Edwin Gobin to collect, along with $3200 interest, a judgment awarded him against the Southern Railway for the loss of his left leg in 1891. Judicial delays, an error by a court clerk, appeals, all the time-consuming intricacies of a faulty system, explain this monstrous delay of 25 years in doing justice to a handicapped citizen.

The result of the typical attempt under the old procedure to make the industry rather than the victim bear the cost of accident was only a little less shocking. We are doing some things better than we used to do them in the past. Nearly a score of states have equitable compensation laws. Missouri must be added to the number.

ITALY'S JEWELS.

> The Americans will gladly buy Giotto's Campanile, and take stone for stone of the Coliseum, fetch it to America and rebuild it somewhere in New York or the West. Why, the Pitti palace and the Uffizzi palace alone will bring over a billion dollars, if we consent to sell their treasures to Americans.

This appeal to the Italian people by the "futurist" Marinelli is the foremost topic in European newspapers at present; and, as the Paris Temps says, the notable thing about it all is that every Italian paper discusses the proposition. "Had anyone dared to suggest such a thing a year ago," says the Figaro, "he would have been stoned to death."

The general tone of the Italian press is antagonistic to the futurist idea. La Tribuna concludes a lengthy editorial with the words: "What would we gain, if we disposed of all our art treasures? We no doubt would find purchasers; but then who would come to denuded Italy? We have adjusted ourselves to great numbers of visitors yearly; we expect them; we need them."

Il Pensamiento tears to pieces the utilitarian and materialistic view of Marinelli. It says in part:

> Money we do indeed want. Italy is poor and is getting poorer each day. But must we therefore sell our artistic soul, and turn it into coin? True, the picture of the poverty-stricken lady who sells her jewels to continue life, is a mighty argument to us in the days of our national distress. But Italy cannot, will not forget her history. Rather let her die.

L'Intransigeant thinks that Italy may not now think of selling her treasures; but the stone has been put in motion and will get momentum as the days go on. "Surely," the writer adds, "a moment will come when the despised suggestion will be remembered—and followed."

CARDINAL AGAINST GENERAL.

Gen. von Bissing, the Governor-General imposed on Belgium by its German conquerors, lately protested against the pre-Lenten pastoral issued by Cardinal Mercier and warned him that he must cease "political agitation."

In a reply worthy of a militant father of the primitive church in defense of an imperiled flock, the Cardinal reminds the General that he cannot and will not relinquish full liberty of judgment in the troubled hours through which his country is passing.

The authority of Princes whose will is in opposition to divine law and who exceed their power and corrupt justice is not binding, he declares. Faced by the alternative of breaking the commands of God or those of such a Prince, the Cardinal declines to obey the Prince.

He pays the General "the silent homage due to strength"—implying that strength constitutes the only title to homage—but adds that he keeps closed to his "encroachments the sacred domain of our conscience, the last refuge of the righteous oppressed." He further challenges the German Governor in this brief but solemn inventory of Belgium's wrongs:

> It was not, your excellency may be sure, without deep reflection that we denounced to the world the evils with which our brothers and sisters are overwhelmed—frightful evils, indeed, atrocious crimes, the tragic horror of which cold reason refuses to admit.

What will Von Bissing do? Of his long series of executive blunders in Belgium, the greatest seems to be in stirring this venerable prelate to righteous protest. A Krupp blade is no match for the sword of the Spirit. The Cardinal invites martyrdom from his oppressor, not truculently, or vaingloriously, but affirming his reliance on the justice of heaven and still sorrowing over his burned library at Louvain.

To a sub-Caesar backed by the legions of Germany, the infirm and helpless but indomitable pastor of a subjugated race asserts the predominance of his own spiritual office and speaks bold words of defiance. Is there anything finer in history? A war that affords this spectacle of moral force sustaining itself so dauntlessly and splendidly in a struggle with physical force brings good as well as evil to the world.

LIBELING A FAITHFUL ALLY.

The Rev. Charles T. Riggs, editor for some years of the Constantinople Orient, returns to this country with first-hand information about Turkish domestic policy and the Armenians. His statement shows that earlier reports about violent deaths among the Armenians since the war began have been grossly exaggerated. Only about 500,000 Armenian men, women and children have been slaughtered by the Turks to date.

Persistent, industrious Turkish effort may approximate the first estimate if not interfered with, but that is not in point. The charge that 1,000,000 had been massacred is damaging and unjust and undoubtedly is to be attributed to the efforts of entente propaganda agencies and their subsidized press in this country to create prejudice against Germany's faithful ally.

A million murdered, or nearly 3000 a day for the space of 12 months! That it was preposterous ought to have been perceived from the start. The number really falls a little below 1500 a day. The news is gratifying and the fair-minded, unpurchased press will promptly and cheerfully make the correction.

BATHING MADE EASY.

A peculiar interest always attaches to Chicago's annual bathing styles, as prescribed by the police. It has been only a few years since official prudery there required a complete covering up of the person almost to the point of wearing ear muffs in the water. Chicago created a special officer whose function was to snoop along the sands, and titled him "Superintendent of Bathing Beaches." (Incidentally, we think it was this Snooperintendent who startled the world with the discovery of September Morn in an art store window.)

Public policy, however, reacted against the discouragement of bathing and this year the effort is distinctly to make bathing easy, comfortable, even attractive if possible. This year's permissible costume, which answers the last objection of the great unwashed, may consist of "only blouse and bloomers, without stockings or skirts," with the mere restriction that bathers thus attired shall keep to the beach and not parade the streets.

Chicago is to be warmly congratulated on the sanity of its officials, who thus at last have brought about the opportunity for everybody to enjoy a bath.

JOURNALISM AN-HUNGERED.

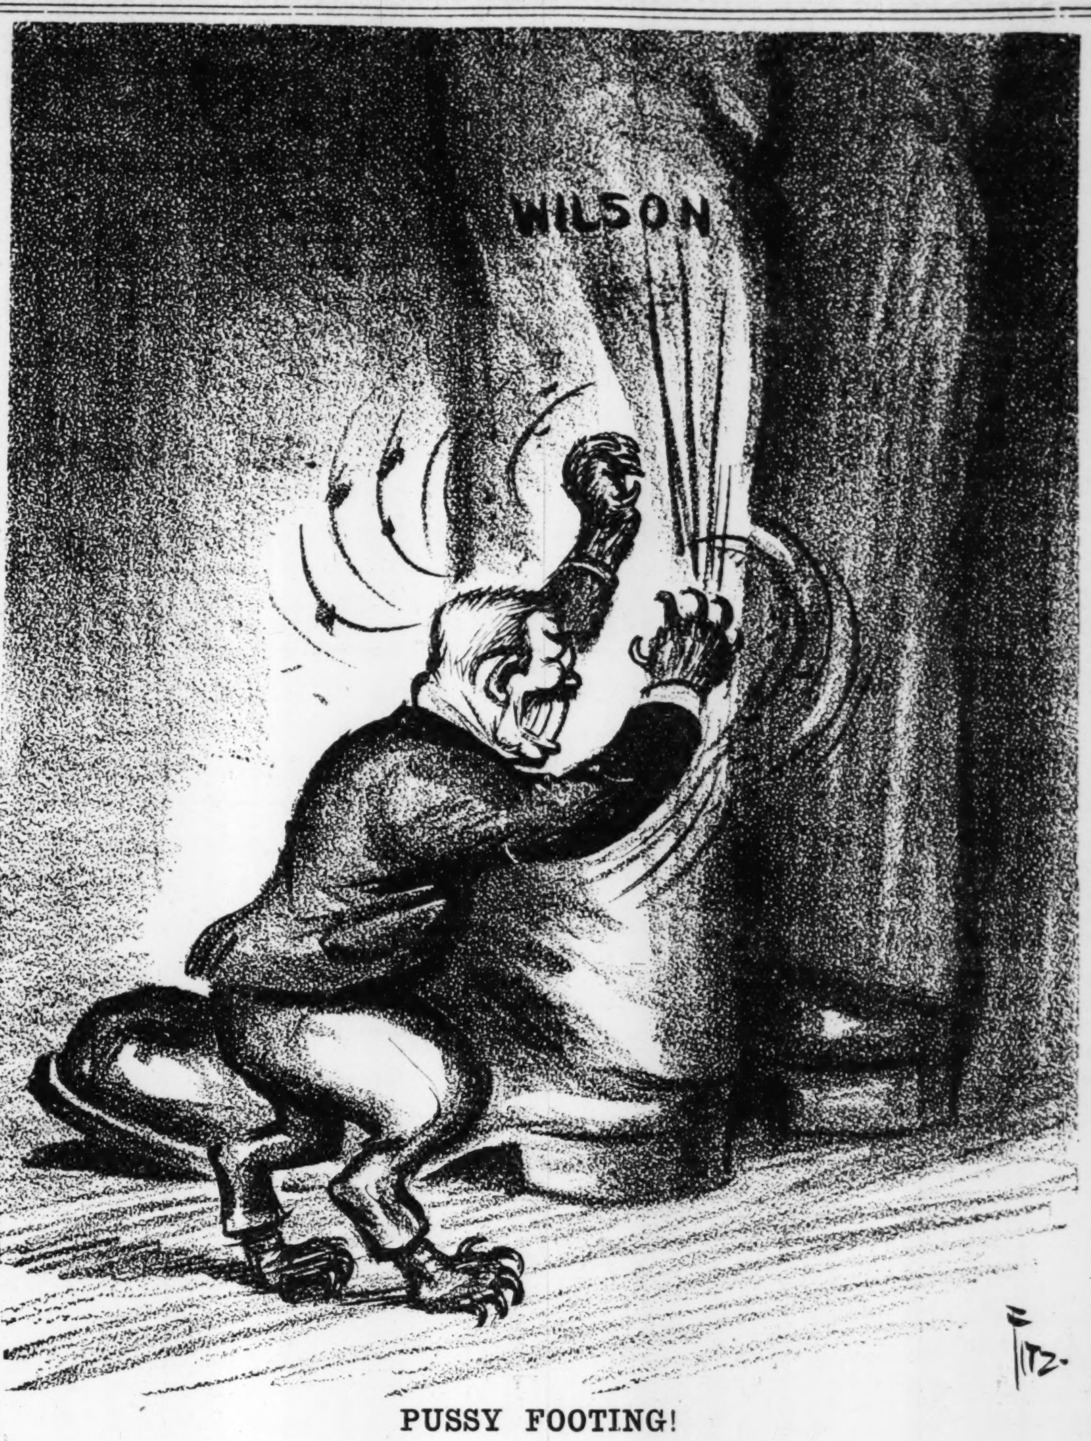
Says Bro. John Hall of the Salem (Ark.) Sun:

> The Republicans are not awake. For nine years and four weeks the Sun has blazed constantly with Republican editorials which has been copied in many of the big city dailies, and also in the papers of Canada and the London dailies. But Republicans right here in Fulton county don't know that we are trying to run a paper. Yesterday a comrade struck us for a $2 loan, said he didn't know we were editin'. We guess he felt like he was hunting perfume and had struck a reduction works.

Not only is he short of the $2, but he is asking subscribers to fetch him in "spuds," known to the initiate as Irish potatoes; and elsewhere intimates that his appetite is zestful not to say painfully sharp by this challenge, which it is our privilege to herald on behalf of a deserving brother:

"If anybody wants to join us in a salad-eating contest, we will furnish the greens and half the appetite if they will furnish the other ingreasyments."

It recalls the advertisement of a riverman who wanted 40 men who owned their own skiffs to come and catch driftwood for him "on the shares." But it all goes to show the high principle and noble courage of a man who will fight for his Republican convictions in Arkansas where there are no loaves and fishes, where indeed there are no Republican readers who can read and write. John Hall is virtually a prisoner of the enemy, the Democrats—and they ought to do better by their prisoners.



PUSSY FOOTING!

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
by Clark McAdams

"FOR MEMORY."

"TODAY I strolled
Into a picture show,
A "movie" where,
Sandwiched in between
Of Charles Chaplin
And a sordid view
Of Tyrone Power
As a drunken sot,
A woman,
Faded, old and wan
And but a ghost
Of what she once had been,
Stepped out before the curtain
While the lights within
The showhouse
Were turned low
Through mercy
As she sang.
Her voice, or what there was Still left of it,
Was faded, too;
But as she sang
My thoughts
Went back to you.
For in her way she crooned
The selfsame songs
You used to sing
To me
When you and I
Were all there was
To this wide world
And neither reckoned
On tomorrow.
I wondered,
As I heard her voice
And those about me jeered,
If she was ever young
As you are,
And if some youth,
Whose only hope of life eternal
Lay centered but in her,
Sat still and dreamed his dreams
While soft she sang
Just to him and just for him
As I once did when you
Sang "Baby's Boat's a Silv'ry Moon"
And "Love's Old Sweet Song"
And all the other lullabies
I loved to hear.
I wondered where he was
And where his dreams
Had led him.
And if a duty, such as mine,
Had beckoned to him
Just when the voice
Of his whole soul—his very life—
Had sounded sweetest.
And so I slipped
Away and sent her
Flowers from a nearby store—
Sweet peas, the kind I used to send
To you—
With just a card
On which I wrote
"For memory."
Then later I went back
And heard her sing again
And on her breast
Were pinned the simple flowers
And her face
In the dim light
Looked younger and I felt
She knew.

WHY DRY COUNTIES ARE DRAINED.

Dear Sir: A friend of mine, dealing in stocks and bonds, cannot understand why so many drainage bonds are issued in "dry" counties.

H. M. W.

It sounds puzzling, but it is really simple enough. Drainage bonds come from counties largely occupied by swamps. When the people in the swamps are trying to conquer malaria with whiskey they are too far incapacitated by both to drain any land. Deprived of the whiskey, they get over the malaria, and the drainage project readily follows. A swamp county must be voted dry before it can be drained. After it gets rid of the swamp, it can vote wet again. That is the usual proceedure.

A St. Louisan who has been in Florida says one may be able to get something to drink in most dry states, but having gotten back to his midday toddy he doesn't propose to invite another such experience trying to find out if the state he visited is an exception.

The people of Pike County will of course hotly resent Mr. Roach's proposal to throw them out of public office and put them to work.

However, if the Browns can really beat the White Sox, the umpires cannot very well prevent it eventually.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

CLEANSING.

A. R. S.—White plumes: Place in basin of soapsuds made with cold water and leave to steep an hour or two. Then remove, plunge into boiling water and allow to remain in at least a quarter of an hour. Each feather should then be taken out, spread on a cloth and every particle of dirt which may still cling to the fronds removed by rubbing with soft piece of silk dipped in soapsuds. They must then be rinsed in several changes of hot water and finally laid on a towel across the knee, the fronds being then dabbed gently with a towel made into a ball, the object being to regain the curved shape of the feather before it is returned to the hat. When almost dry, the feathers should be well shaken until they appear perfectly soft and fluffy, when they should be immediately inclosed in tissue paper and placed in a cool oven or on the plate rack of the stove, so as to complete drying operations. To curl, no tool is more effective than an ivory paper knife. Each frond should be picked up separately and with a sharp but gentle turn of the wrist given the requisite curl, this being continued as long as necessary.

YANTIS.—Silks: Get 3 gallons first quality gasoline. Put into foot bath 1½ gallons and thoroughly wash in this, rubbing lightly on a board in soiled places, and even occasionally applying a very little pure, white soap by rubbing the bar against the soiled places. When silk seems clean, press out soiled gasoline and put garment at once into a little tub in which a mixture of two parts gasoline and one part water. Rinse all soap and soil away in this, then press out till dry as possible, and put into the third gallon of gasoline; rinse thoroughly, lifting the garment about and making sure every part is thoroughly washed. Press out gasoline between palms of hands, shake out what remains, and then hang out of doors to dry. Press with a warm, not a hot, flatiron, using it on the wrong side and laying a piece of oiled paper, or a linen cloth, between the silk and the iron. Naphtha may be used instead of gasoline, but it is more expensive and gives no better results. The liquid that remains should be poured into a can or jar, and after a few days, when the dirt settles, it should be poured off into a clean can, it is then ready to be used again.

HEALTH HINTS.

A.—"Blood trouble" is indefinite; so is "stomach trouble." Never overload your stomach, choose food carefully, exercise all muscles daily in pure air. We have no reason to suppose that distilled water caused the bumps on your tongue. (No such word as fatigueness.)

SUFFERER.—Catarrh: Eat less meat, butter, cream, sugar, white flour and combinations thereof; eat more fruit. Have it stewed quickly, boiling. Let saucepan remain over moderate heat until sugar is dissolved. Never stew fruits in tin saucepan nor in enamel-lined one which has places in lining that have begun to flake off. Earthenware is best. Jellies and rich preserves should not be classed as fruits. Drink more water, pure spring or well water, or else distilled water; three pints a day—an hour or more before or after eating—never with meals unless a meal should consist entirely of dry foods. Breathe more air. Pure air—not air saturated with impure matter thrown off from your own or other people's lungs. Take more exercise in a way that you may enjoy it, if possible. Have enough rest, but not too much, and enough sleep—two or three hours before midnight, with windows open all night. These things, and an active mental condition that keeps the blood circulating freely, will insure pure blood—and pure blood is the only real cure for catarrh.

THE NATIONAL FLOWER.

L. E.—Some years ago, when the choice of a national flower was left to the children in the schools, the wild rose was chosen. But Congress has adopted no flower. The columbine, already the State flower of Colorado, has many friends, because: 1. Red, white and blue are the natural colors of the flowers, and they may be found wild in any one of these, our national colors. 2 It is a native of every state in the Union. 3. It is never and nowhere a pest. 4. Its botanical name is "aquilegia" ("aquila" means eagle), thus harmonizing with the eagle, our national bird. The plant is thus named from the similarity, in some species, of the flower's hollow petals to the spurs or claws of an eagle. 5. Its popular name "columbine," also appeals to us, for it immediately suggests to us the name of Columbus, the discoverer of America; and as the word means "dove," which is the emblem of peace, so it should be very acceptable to us, being in harmony with our best traditions. This name was given to it from the resemblance, in some species, to doves sitting face to face in a small circle. It is distinctive and unique in appearance, no other flower resembles it at all. If used on postage stamps, coins or for any other nationally representative purpose, even in a generalized form, its outlines could not possibly be mistaken for any other flower. In this respect it is like the flower de luce, the national flower of the French, and the thistle, the national flower of the Scotch, and unlike the rose, the national flower of England, which when so used may easily be mistaken for the chrysanthemum, Japan's national flower, the dahlia, the aster or any one of a dozen other flowers. 7. The foliage is delicate in color and outline. The leaf, which is of a peculiarly soft, velvety green of several shades, is composed of leaflets, frequently 13 in number, thus suggesting the 13 original states. 8. Its elementary parts also appeal to us, for the uncultivated flower is a five-pointed star with a cornucopia between the points. The star is an important part of our flag and great seal, and surely the cornucopia is very fitting. 9. Having a leaf and flower composed of many separate parts, each complete in itself, it illustrates our national motto, "E Pluribus Unum." 10. By cultivation the number of cornucopias can be increased, and this suggests that by industry the wealth of our country can be increased. But here, in the language of flowers, the columbine raises its voice in an admonishing sanction and says simply but fittingly: "Hopes and fears." 11. The flower, from every point of view, with its various colors—and some of them are rarely beautiful—and its separated parts, and the plant itself readily lend themselves to the artist for the purposes of decorative art. 12. The seed is very small, emblematic of the very small beginnings from which our nation has grown. 13. It is a perennial plant, living year after year in peace with its neighbors, knowing its place and keeping it, persistently holding its own and asking no more, emblematic of our hope and faith in our nation's future.

MISCELLANEOUS.

WEBER.—Earning your living, having left home at 18, and being of good conduct, parents cannot compel you to return.

SIMPLE SIMON.—File schedule only of your own property and do not include anything else. Court does not go to extreme you mention to collect costs.

CLERICUS.—Defendant in Arkansas, notified by publication, in divorce suit, may make an affidavit as to all the facts he knows, and forward it to the court in Kansas City.

A. B. C.—St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph and Chicago have been the leading horse markets of the world for many years. In these cities the traffic is handled through the stockyards, and various dealers are engaged in the industry. At Fort Scott, Kan., is the largest private horse and mule market in the world. At National Stockyards, East St. Louis, where the Missouri mules are offered to buyers of the world, the annual records have been growing by leaps and bounds, making that market the largest and most prosperous in the country.

BACKYARD FENCE.—Government formula for rough fence or stone work: Take of fresh Rosendale cement 3 parts, by measure; of clean white sand, 1 part by measure; mix perfectly with water. Makes a sort of granite color. To make it much lighter in color, use 2 parts of fresh lime, slaked, then add 1 part of cement and 1 part of white sand. For brick color add Venetian red, dry, to the first formula. For buff, add yellow ochre, dry. Make the wash quite thin, putting it on with a wide whitewash or calcimine brush. Wet the surface first.

THE END OF THE PATH.
—Nelson Harding in Brooklyn Eagle.

American Press Loyally Supports President

NATION WILL APPROVE.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: The President has been patient, more than patient, in the face of unprecedented provocations, of intolerable injuries. The position he has finally taken will have the united and whole-hearted approval of the nation. The account with Germany has been running many months; the items reach a staggering total. It is now closed. Nothing is left but settlement in full.

THE NATION IS DETERMINED.

New York Tribune: If there is a definite result at last—whether diplomatic relations are broken off or intercourse is continued on the basis of German disavowal of the policy of murder on the high seas—we shall owe nothing to the long orgy of words which has passed in Washington for the last 14 months as modern American diplomacy. Our issue with Germany can be settled now only by a display of determination backed by force. And it should have been settled that way without parley or faltering as soon as it became clear last August that Germany never intended to respond to Mr. Wilson's words with an adequate offer of reparation for the Lusitania massacre.

PRACTICALLY AN ULTIMATUM.

Philadelphia Inquirer: The note is practically an ultimatum, although it admits of an answer. Indeed, a reply is expected.

Germany must squarely satisfy our demands or deliberately spurn our official friendship. The choice is here. We should have made the issue immediately after the sinking of the Lusitania. What the President said today to both Congress and Germany he should have said a month ago.

OUR PLAIN DUTY.

Philadelphia Record: It is our duty not only to ourselves, but to mankind, to save what little remains of international law and to demand that the rules of civilized warfare be respected or to cease to have diplomatic relations with the nation that flouts them and affronts us.

FIGHT NOT OF OUR MAKING.

Pittsburg Post: Germany at last has been put in the position of having to make plain whether she wants the friendship of this country. Should a break come, it will not be a matter of our choosing. Should war follow it will be a fight forced upon us.

WE ARE UNPREPARED.

Detroit Free Press: It is with a feeling of relief that the citizenship of the country must peruse his (the President's) utterances, relief combined with regret that almost a year has been lost in vacillation and uncertainty and in neglect to prepare for the crisis that Mr. Wilson and every other student of events has known must come sooner or later.

We are not prepared to back up any quarrel that may develop out of the new situation. * * * There is scant likelihood that the Government in Berlin will agree to the conditions laid down in the President's note.

"THE LONG STRIDE OF DARING."

Wichita (Kan.) Eagle: The President struck the long stride that only the daring among world figures attempt. Germany cannot continue her methods of undersea warfare and keep comity with the dominant nation of the Western World, the largest and most powerful of the neutral nations, to which mankind looks and which history will record as sponsor of human rights.

"A COURAGE TRULY SPLENDID!"

Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier: With a courage truly splendid, with a faith in his countrymen which is inspiring, President Wilson has taken the path of right, of honor and of duty. The future rests now with Germany.

PATIENCE EXHAUSTED.

New York World: No other country in the world, with the wealth of the United States, with the population of the United States and with the resources of the United States would have taken from Germany what the United States has taken. Nor do we think that it is from a spirit of fear that the American people have submitted to these wrongs. Rather it is from that spirit of incorrigible optimism which has compelled them to hope against hope that Germany could be brought to its senses and that right would vanquish might in the conflict with frightfulness.

They will still hope, and hope will not cease unless the German Government deliberately takes the fatal step that ends all possibility of an honorable and amicable adjustment of vast wrongs and all possibility of future guarantees. It is for the German Government to say whether it wants the United States for a friend or for an enemy. It knows the terms.

THE SOLEMN ISSUE.

St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer Press: In the solemnity of a moment in which it may be determined whether our beloved nation shall emerge in bloodless triumph from her unwavering stand for humanity, civilization and the reign of international law, or whether it shall be plunged into the dread maelstrom of death and devastation which spell war, let every American be true to the traditions of the land of his birth or adoption.

German-American View

GERMANY CANNOT COMPLY.

New York Staats Zeitung: It is unthinkable that the German Government should recognize these credentials (the President's as the representative of all neutral nations) and grant the peremptory demands of the President as long as the cause for the inauguration of this submarine warfare—the illegal British blockade and interference with the commercial rights of neutrals—remains in force, and as long as British inhumanity against the civilian noncombatant population of Germany is continued. The President's demands seek to permanently guard British sea trade and would, if complied with, make England proof against injury. Can Germany agree to that? The answer remains with the individual.

BLAMES "BIG INTERESTS."

New York German Herald: If war comes, we should not accept a contributory cause like the submarine issue as the real reason for a break with Germany. We should not close our eyes to the fact that certain "big interests" have prepared the ground for just such a step ever since August, 1914. Of course, the final word has not been spoken. That is left to the representatives of the people.

QUESTIONS PRESIDENT'S MOTIVES.

Illinois Staats-Zeitung: America has prolonged the heartrending horrors of the great war. It is by bullets made in her factories and sold to create profits for her munition makers that the awful slaughter of Europe has continued. In the face of this fact President Wilson, who does not stop the shipment abroad of these munitions when he has the power to do so, says he is moved by "considerations of humanity" to send his ultimatum to Germany. We can understand Mr. Wilson's attitude only in the light of absolute servility to the British Government and a desire to coin German blood into British gold given in payment for munitions.

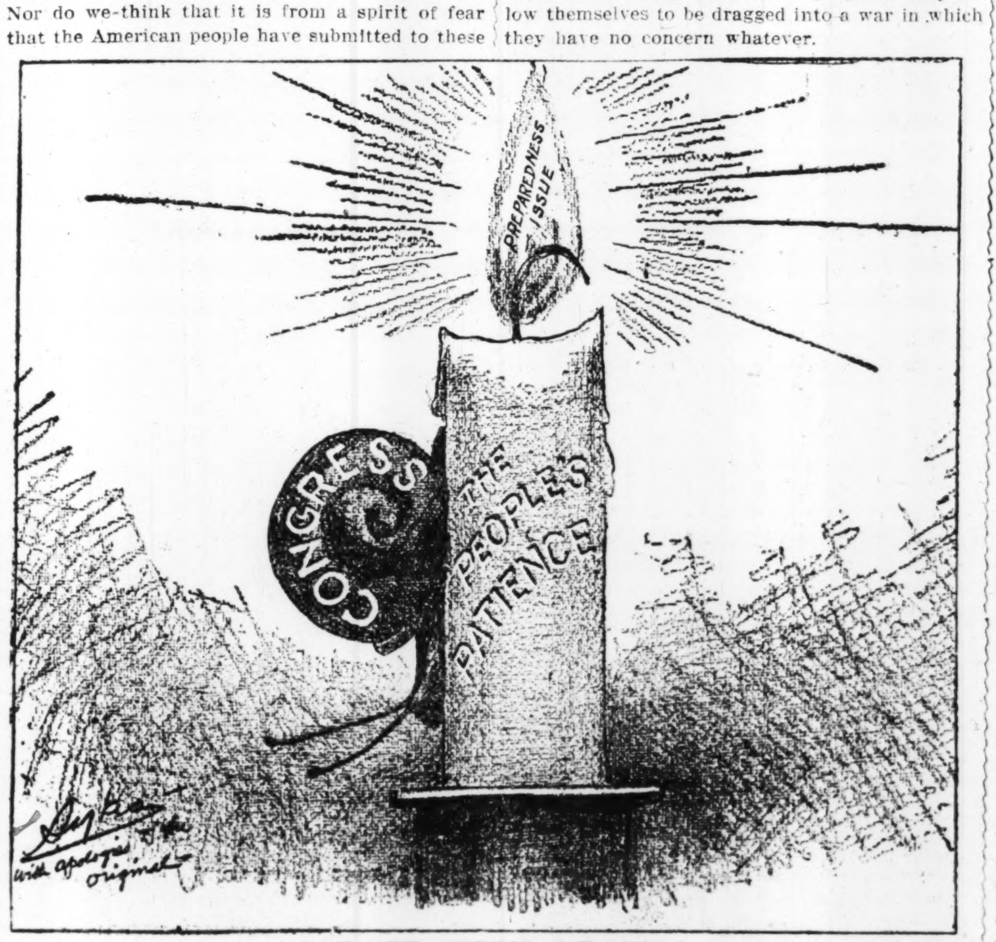
BLAMING IT ON MORGAN.

St. Paul Daily Volks Zeitung: The President apparently intends to force Germany to conduct its submarine warfare in such a manner as to do the least possible damage to the allies' cause. Shall this country be turned into a collection agency for J. Pierpont Morgan?

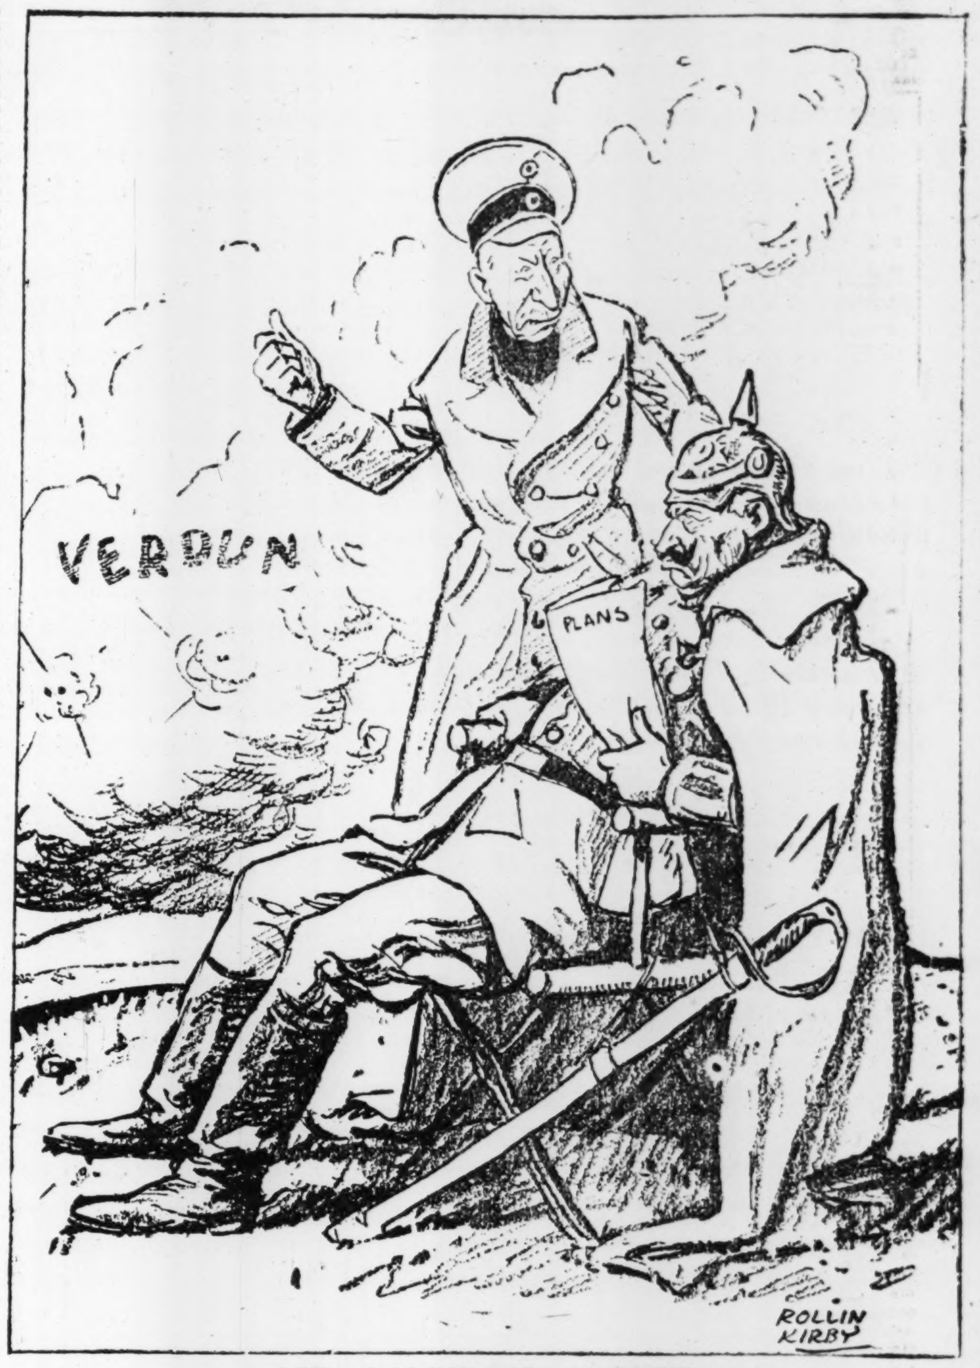
"WALL STREET WANTS WAR."

Cincinnati Freie Presse: President Wilson's speech does not explain the change from his previous note to all nations regarding submarine warfare. The reason is that Wall street wants war. The majority of the American people want none, especially with a nation that has been our friend for more than a hundred years.

We should be greatly deceived in the good judgment of the Congress and the people if they allow themselves to be dragged into a war in which they have no concern whatever.



A RACE WITH DEATH.
—Sykes in Philadelphia Ledger.



OUR GALLIPOLI, FATHER.
—Rollin Kirby in New York World.

What Must Be Done About Mexico?

GUARD THE BORDER.

St. Joseph News-Press: Should Villa be dead will the trouble in Mexico end? No; not while Obregon and Zapata and Felix Diaz have facilities to oppose Carranza. But these possibilities have nothing to do with the presence of American troops in Mexico at this time. Our business is with Villa and his band. That being finished, the United States may gracefully accept Carranza's request for withdrawal across the border. But not far from the line, for now is the time to guard the border. If unscrupulous agitators believe they can bring about intervention through a repetition of the Columbus affair, they will not hesitate a moment to patterns after Villa. Instead of a few more than 18,000 troops offering service at the border, there should be an adequate number. Wherever an American community is near enough to be assailed by lawless Mexicans, there should be enough soldiers to offer assurance of adequate protection.

ALIVE UNTIL PROVED DEAD.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The report that Villa is dead and his body recovered will be read with a skepticism born of past deceptions. If the bandit has indeed perished it will put a new aspect upon America's problem in Mexico. But nothing will be gained in the long run by a too eager acceptance of news which investigation may prove false.

It should not take many hours to determine beyond question whether the body exhumed from a mountains grave is that of the bandit who set the army of the United States in motion to avenge his crimes. And while American officers in Mexico are trying to fix the identity of the exhumed body the pursuit of the Villa bands, led by Villa or leaderless as the case may be, will be pushed with all vigor. The bandit must be presumed to be alive until he is proved dead.

Meanwhile, every consideration of safety demands that the search for the outlaw shall not be slackened nor precautions neglected. The unfortunate incident at Parral has its lesson for the American troops engaged in the man hunt—a lesson that intimately concerns the safety of the punitive expedition and the success of its object.

There appears to be a general agreement now that the pursuit of Villa shall not end till its purpose is fully accomplished. There is no thought of turning back. But public interest shifts for the moment from the tracking of Villa alive to the examination of the supposed Villa dead.

DRIFTING TO INTERVENTION.

Minneapolis Journal: The country is drifting helplessly on the tide of events. There is no strong hand on the helm. Opportunism is the watchword. We wait watchfully, and are swept into Mexico without being ready to go, for all our boasted watchfulness.

We send a puny expedition to catch a murderous bandit in a country populated by ignorant folk who hate us, because they do not understand us. We maintain a tenuous line of communications 400 miles long, that may be severed at any instant by some of the bands of soldiers, whose commanders are held to the First Chief by the weakest ties of loyalty.

We palter with the First Chief in his endeavors to keep firm hold on the ramshackle Government he has set up, and at the same time to make what concessions to us he can without losing his chieftainship. We let him refuse us the use of the railroads on which the very lives of our expeditionaries depend. We agreed that our soldiers shall not enter any Mexican towns, for fear of what may happen, though military necessity requires that they do enter. And then comes the Parral affair to furnish the spark that may set off the tinder.

We are drifting toward intervention in Mexico. And just now the drift seems very rapid. The worst of it is that it is mere drifting—no preparation for emergencies, no grasping of opportunities. Apparently, our expeditionaries are in a most precarious position.

ARMING POSSIBLE ENEMIES.

Philadelphia Evening Star: Instead of the President calling on all the military forces of the country and asking for a volunteer army of half a million to clean up Mexico as a result of this brutal affair and what has gone before, we find him doing exactly and precisely nothing—nothing, excepting preparing to "treat" with Carranza.

One of the most astounding things, in these days of astounding things, is that since the Carranza order to get out was issued and since the Americans were fired on at Parral, arms and ammunition have gone into Mexico from this country, consigned to Carranza forces.

If we had not become accustomed to unheard of pusillanimity, cowardice of the lowest sort and inaction in the face of incidents which would make a rabbit fight, this would not be believable. It is a fact, however, and it is a fact, also, that no order has been issued yet to stop the furnishing of Carranza troops with arms and ammunition.

VILLA DEAD—RECALL TROOPS.

Omaha Bee: If Francisco Villa indeed be dead, the mission on which the American forces entered Mexico is accomplished. The bandits have been so scattered that their pursuit will be an almost unending task, while the death of their leader will make their reassemblage in a formidable group unlikely. Naturally, some distrust is felt as to the tale so circumstantially reported from remote Chihuhahua, but verification should lead to the recall of the troops under Pershing.

Senor Carranza's task is thus made much lighter. His most formidable opposition has been dissipated as a result of the American expedition, and it is now incumbent on him to show that he can pacify his country, restore order, and again get Mexico on the road to civilization and progress. All cause for complaint against him has not been removed, the Parral incident being of such nature as will require some satisfactory explanation and proper amend by the provisional Government.

Relations between the peoples of the two countries have not been greatly improved by recent events, and yet quite a little of hindrance to a better understanding has been removed. The Mexicans of the troublesome sort have now a better notion of American temper, and the turbulent among them will be inclined more seriously to consider casual forays across the border. Their home troubles are their own, and constitute the problem Carranza will have to deal with after his own fashion.

German Leaders Differ on U-Boat Policy

Discussing the new German submarine warfare, an editorial in the Frankfort Zeitung says:

"There are two different views of the situation. The one which is supported by the majority of our statesmen is that a complete breach between Germany and America would be very perilous; not on account of the military power of the United States, but for other reasons. A contrary view is supported by the majority of our naval officers, and is to the effect that the present war could be brought to a victorious end much sooner, but only on condition that every possible advantage were taken of a breach with the United States.

In order to make this clear I will detail the two opposing views. Statesmen say that America could, in the event of a breach, do the following things:

"1. Confiscate our merchant ships now lying in her harbors, the value of which represents at least $250,000,000. Thereby we should be robbed of the kernel of our merchant marine, while, by the same token, the Americans would automatically become possessed of a fine merchant fleet. In the early period following peace this would be deplorable, because America would then be in a position to usurp Germany's former sea commerce.

"2. America could place a further $3,000,000,000 or $4,000,000,000 at the disposal of the allies for the continued prosecution of the war.

"3. She could supply our present enemies with double the quantity of munitions they now are getting from her.

"The naval officers, however, put against these theories the following: As soon as we are relieved of the necessity of having any further regard for the United States we can conduct our naval war with the same ruthlessness that the British hitherto practiced, and, like them, we can set up our own sea law. This would enable us to declare all Great Britain and Ireland forthwith as blockaded and notify all concerned that any and every ship, no matter what flag she might carry, which still attempted to reach English harbors, would on entering the war zone be considered as a blockade runner and destroyed without warning. Thus we might avoid being made the victims of such trickery as has been used against us hitherto, more especially since our experience has shown that every merchantman is armed.

"This proposal, it is true, conflicts with the provisions which hitherto have prevailed at sea, but as the British themselves since the beginning of the war have not bothered themselves about any of the sea or international law regulations that have been in force, we must arrogate to ourselves the same right and set up regulations in our own interest. The natural consequences would be that in the first few weeks hundreds of ships would be destroyed in their attempts to reach English harbors, and in a few weeks the result would be that no ship would again dare take the great risk of running our blockade. England would, therefore, actually be cut off from every source of sea supply, and inasmuch as it has been calculated that in peace times the food supply was only large enough to last three weeks, it may be assumed that now because England, thanks to our hesitation, has been piling up food supplies at an inordinate rate, she would be starved out in perhaps two months.

To these views of our naval officers statesmen reply that it would be dangerous to incite by such means the universal indignation of neutrals; that the whole world would at once send up a chorus about German barbarism if neutral ships were sunk without warning and their crews perhaps sent to their doom. To this we say that the indignation of neutrals in a matter which concerns our existence is to us an affair of just as complete indifference at it is at present to the British, who are continuously trampling all rights of the neutrals under foot.

"As to the charge of barbarism, this already has been raised against us with such violence that the cry can hardly become much louder than it already is, and finally it is a much greater act of barbarism to sacrifice hundreds of thousands of our own people through this immeasurably prolonged war. It is at any rate more humane in a position of emergency to sacrifice a couple of thousand lives than hundreds of thousand. If England, then, is left to the fate she at first planned for us, namely, when she is confronted by starvation, she will be compelled to surrender unconditionally, unless she wishes to be starved out. With the fall of England, however, Russia and France will also automatically collapse like the organs of a body whose heart has been bored through.

"As to points Nos. 2 and 3, which the statesmen make, we reply that the speedy ending of the war would not even give the Yankees time to supply the money and munitions to Europe, especially as such deliveries presuppose the possibility of ships being able to enter enemy habors, and this is just what would be prevented by the utmost ruthlessness with which our U-boat warfare would be waged.

"To this again the statesmen reply: Who guarantees that things will happen as you say? It is easy for you to talk, as you do not bear the responsibility. However, we who must shoulder the terrible responsibility have the feeling that we shall start in on an incalculable gamble if we do as you advise.

"As to that, of course, we naval men naturally have nothing to say, for if we ourselves are firmly convinced that things will happen just as we say they will, we cannot be expected in advance to provide the proofs. And if one prefers the mixim 'caution is the mother of wisdom' to the maxim 'he who dares wins,' there is nothing to be said.

"WITHOUT WARNING"

MURILLO PORTRAIT.

MISS GRACE WILSON

WHO HAS RETURNED FROM NEW YORK AFTER AN ABSENCE OF SEVERAL MONTHS.

Easter Week Opens Spring Season With Many Delightful Affairs—Four Charity Entertainments—Several Weddings With Their Prenuptial Festivities—National Convention of Drama League, Elizabethan Plays by Washington U. Students in Honor of Shakspeare Ter-Centenary and Reading of Ode to Shakspeare by Faversham, the Actor—French Orphan and Blind Boys' Benefits at Wednesday and Liederkranz Clubs.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

FOUR notable charity entertainments, one the "Garden Fair," an entirely new idea, and a number of weddings with their pre-nuptial festivities, will start the spring social season, which is getting to be more delightful each year.

And added to all this will be the convention of the Drama League of America, which will be held here this week, and which will bring much gayety with it.

The Drama League here, a part of the national body, will be very busy entertaining the visitors and in celebrating the ter-centenary of Shakspeare, which will be continued all week.

Among the entertainments for the Drama League will be a reception Wednesday evening at Central Library, the Elizabethan Pageant at Washington University, Thursday and Saturday afternoons, a reading by William Faversham of Sara Teasdale's Ode to Shakspeare, at the Shakspeare statue in Tower Grove Park, Friday afternoon, and a banquet Saturday evening at the Buckingham Hotel when "The Dark Lady of the Sonnets" will be given.

A number of interesting persons of the dramatic world and its latest acquisition, the "Silent Drama" world—the movie makers—will be here.

THE first big affair to open the post-Lenten season will be one tomorrow night, for charity, at the Wednesday club auditorium. Tickets may be had at the door. It will be given for the benefit of the French orphans, by the St. Louis Committee, of which Mrs. Charles Parsons Pettus is the head, and to which a number of socially prominent women belong, so it is sure to be a success.

Two plays will be given, and those who have seen the last rehearsals say they are "immensely clever," and the amateur actors who are cast in them are just as clever as the plays.

Miss Mary Crunden is taking the part of Mrs. Carfax in "Just As Well," which Mrs. Samuel W. Fordyce Jr. was to have taken, but had to give up on account of her going away.

Miss Eleanor Dozier, with a delightful lisp, is "Doleen" in the same play, and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom, and Walter M. Crunden, as "Capt. Trowbridge," who stutters, are both dandy.

"Phipps," the other play, has Mrs. David R. Calhoun, who always is good and who is one of the best actresses in the Dramatic Club. William W. La Beaume, who is in the same class with Mrs. Calhoun, and Harry B. Wallace, are in the cast.

The audience promises to be a brilliant one.

A lovely assortment of spring models, specially reduced for this week. New Sport Hats moderately priced. Sally Meagher Millinery Co., 801 Century Bldg.

A "GARDEN FAIR," something new in charity affairs, will be given Saturday afternoon in St. Regis Park, at Lindell boulevard and King's highway, when everything connected with a garden or the making of a garden, from attractive "smocks" and hats to baskets, implements and seeds, will be on sale—all for the benefit of Miss Helen Gregg's settlement house.

The hours will be from 2 o'clock until sunset and all the while there will be tea and other refreshments.

Miss Gregg's house is in one of the most crowded districts, and she has sewing classes, carpenter classes and all sorts of interests for the girls and boys who are her neighbors.

A number of girls always have helped her during the nine years she has been carrying on the work and among those assisting Saturday will be Misses Frances Reid Jones, Frances Filley, Helen Wood, Dorothy Collins, Constance Scudder, Martha Pittman, Kitty Guy, Ethel Gamble and Mrs. Clarence Gamble and Mrs. Harold M. Bixby.

ST. MARY'S GUILD of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, will give a tea Thursday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins, 20 Lenox place, from 2 to 6 o'clock.

Among the members of the guild are Mesdames Laurence Sturgis Day, E. J. Overstreet, Richard Morey, G. Lacey Crawford and Miss Elizabeth Breck.

On the evening of May 2 the Park Theater will be taken over to St. Mary's Guild when Crystal Herne will play "The Marriage of Kitty." Already a number of boxes have been subscribed. Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins is in charge of arrangements.

THE big bridge and 500 party for the benefit of the blind boys of St. Louis will be given at the Liederkranz Club Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The object is to raise money enough to make a first payment on what use to be the Blind Girls' Home, so when the boys finish school where they learn to make many kinds of useful things they may go into a factory and be self-supporting. It is an appealing cause and it is hoped the card party will be a huge success.

Mrs. L. C. Hermann of 3455 Longfellow boulevard and Mrs. R. L. Kahle have it in charge.

The Cummings Shop of Corsets and Lingeries, suit 804-805 Century Bldg., offers all the special service and privacy of a high-class "Specialty Shop," at prices no higher than the ordinary store.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Morey of 5509 Clemens avenue have gone to Sedalia, Mo., to stay over week end with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Hollenbeck of 4509 Washington boulevard have gone to Little Rock, Ark., to remain until Wednesday.

Mrs. Kent Jarvis of Webster Groves and her daughter, Miss Carol Jarvis, entertained the senior class of the Mary Institute and the faculty at a luncheon yesterday afternoon. The table was decorated in the class colors, purple and yellow. Miss Jarvis is the class president.

At a luncheon given at the Hamilton Hotel, April 14, by the Friday Club, Mrs. Alphonso Howe of 5152 Raymond avenue was unanimously elected president of the club for the year 1916-1917. The other officers elected were Mrs. W. P. Erhart, vice president; Mrs. R. A. Burns, treasurer; Mrs. W. A. Hoel, recording secretary; Mrs. Lillie Wilcox, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Joseph Jamison, the retiring president, and Mrs. Scott Parsons were elected directors of the club. The next meeting of the club will be at the home of Mrs. Lanterman, 5839 Berlin avenue, April 28. Mrs. W. A. Rein will be assistant hostess.

The St. Elizabeths Guild of St. John's Episcopal Church will give an entertainment in the parish hall of St. Peter's Church, Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue, Tuesday evening at 8.15 o'clock. The proceeds of this entertainment are to go to the building fund of St. John's Church.

La Croix Girls have issued invitations for a reception and Leap Year dance to be given at the Danse Studio, 4517 Olive street, on Saturday evening. Those who will receive will be: Misses Marjorie Taylor, Catherine Trotier, Inez Parrish, Marion Witte, Irene Bussman, Harriet Lamoureux, Melba Westcott, Meta Small, Ida Ketterer, Edna and Peggy Sward.

The Black Feather Girls announce their third informal dance to be given at St. Leo's Hall, Twenty-fifth and Mullanphy streets, Wednesday evening.

Arthur Goette, Fred Frese, George Hacker, Francis Schmitt, George Schuetzel, Fred Gaebler, John Letter, Leslie Simpson, J. Ralls, Francis de Long; Mr. and Mrs. de Long.

Miss Frances Blaha of 3200A Cherokee street entertained last Sunday afternoon with a surprise miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Martha Groetch, whose marriage to Hartwig Dierks will take place May 3. Those present were: Misses Frieda Aufterheide, Frances Blaha, Mabel Clauss, Olga Doerste, Cecilia Fienel, Elizabeth Groetch, Martha Groetch, Anna Haller, Anna Newcomb, Pearl Newcomb, Josephine Stein, Ruth Tebeau.

The Friendship Girls were entertained at the home of the secretary, Miss Loretto Owens, 1916 Laflin avenue, last Sunday afternoon and evening. Those present were: Misses Florence Kavanaugh, Margaret Owens, Marie Helwig, Minnie Stumpe, Flora Frerking, Lucy Owens, Ina Saterfield, Marie Kavanaugh, Esme Saterfield and Loretta Owens.

The Minerva Club was entertained at its last meeting by Mrs. George F. Coleman. The president, Mrs. Fred Armstrong, appointed Mrs. E. E. Williams of Kirkwood delegate and Mrs. George F. Coleman alternate to the general federation convention to be held in New York City, May 23 to June 1. Election of officers followed: Mrs. J. A. Urquhart, president; Mrs. George C. Richardson, vice president; Mrs. J. C. McKean, recording secretary; Mrs. W. A. Goodall, corresponding secretary; Mrs. U. S. Cowdy, treasurer; directors, Mrs. Fred Armstrong, Mrs. C. S. Jones, Mrs. J. A. Weaver, Mrs. E. H. Hewgill.

Mrs. Joseph Berger of 5087 Kensington avenue has as her guest her daughter, Mrs. Abe Henning of Nashville, Tenn., who will be home to her friends on Wednesday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock.

Miss Ruth O'Neil entertained with a farewell party at her home, 4036 Shaw avenue, April 15, in honor of Miss Catherine Malone, who departed Sunday evening to spend the summer with her aunt, Mrs. Harry Selle McGraw of Silver City, N. M. Those present were: Misses Nellie O'Neil, Genevieve Murphy, Genevieve Malone, Grace McCue Clara and Ursula Yorger; Messrs. John O'Neil, Richard Flannery, William Hennessy, Joseph Murphy, William Cahalin, Joseph Howard, Edward O'Neil.

The Woman's Auxiliary to the Railway Mail Association elected officers Tuesday. The hostesses were Mmes. Gordon and Owen of Webster Groves. The officers elected: President, Mrs. G. M. Whitson; vice president, Mrs. H. F. James; recording secretary, Mrs. Guy Whitehead; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. E. Dameron; treasurer, Mrs. Earl Mullins. Next meeting will be held May 2 at the home of Mrs. H. M. Worthington, 7817 Grove avenue, Webster Groves.

A 500 and euchre party will be given by Mrs. A. J. Bentzen for the benefit of the Queen's Daughters at the home, 2730 Lindell boulevard, on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. She will be assisted by the following: Mmes. Wahlert, Sellmeyer, Cicardi, Halloran, Baggermann, Gazzolo; Misses Agnes and Clara Kayser, Lilly Hanson, Mamie Bentzen, Mary Meagher and Ethel Carr

The Corona Club will entertain members and their friends with a "cap-party" Thursday at 8 o'clock at 3730 Lindell boulevard.

The engagement of Miss Minnie Oventhrop to Herbert Kreuter was announced April 18, at a supper given by Miss Oventrop's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Oventrop, at her home, 3500 North Ninth street. Covers were laid

MOTHERS' MEETING AT COLUMBIA

University Professors to Address Sessions Beginning Tuesday.

The Missouri Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teacher Associations will hold their fourth annual convention in Columbia, Mo., for three days, beginning Tuesday. Sessions will be held at Christian and Stephens Colleges and Columbia churches.

Among the lecturers are members of the faculty of the University of Missouri. Dr. A. Ross Hill, president of the university, will deliver the opening address. A conference on "Child Hygiene," conducted by Prof. M. P. Ravenel, and a lecture on "Occupations for Children in the Home," by Ella Victoria Dobbs, assistant professor of Manual arts, are included in the program.

Murder Trial Indefinitely Postponed.

GALVESTON, Tex., April 22.—The trial of George Tier of Marshall, Tex., charged with complicity in the murder of William Black, an anti-Catholic lecturer, in Marshall during February, 1915, which was to have been called here Monday, has been postponed indefinitely. The case was brought to Galveston on a change of venue. Tier has been at liberty on a $5000 bond. The cases of George Ryan and John Copeland, also indicted for the murder, are set for June 5. Ryan and Copeland are under $10,000 bond.

AFTER-EASTER MARK-DOWN

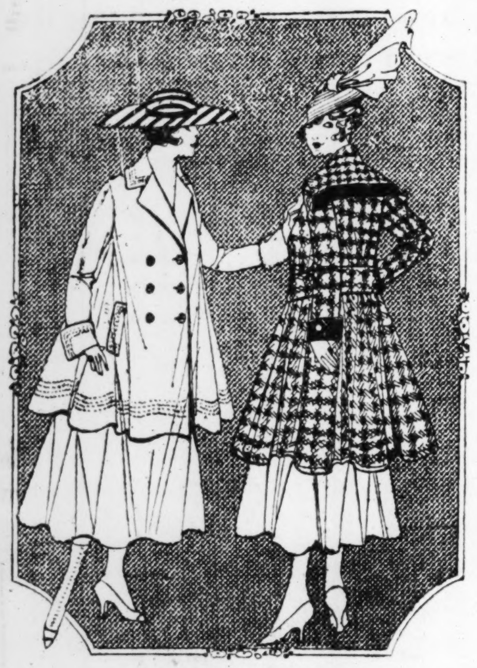
Sale of Coats

Not because it is after Easter are we announcing this mark-down sale—but because we have too many Coats for after Easter—especially as late an Easter as this. While we have had the biggest Spring Coat business in our history, we're overstocked. The late Easter mislead us, in a way. We didn't realize how near we were to the end of Spring.

We continued placing orders for Spring Coats, because during the past 10 days there were so many tempting prices held out to us, until we found ourselves with over a thousand Coats more than we should have at the end of April. And now we must sell them. Even at a loss, they must go.

1145 Coats Have Been Marked Down

Priced heretofore up to $45. We have arranged them in three groups. We'll only describe them briefly. You are familiar with Coats here at $45, $35 and down to the more popular priced lines. The assortments are large in each lot, and plenty of all sizes.



These two Coats, $7.75

LOT 1—471 in This Lot—

$12.50 to $17.50 Coats

Reduced to

$7.75

A wonderfully comprehensive assemblage of smart styles, for sport, motoring, country club and general service wear.

Golfine, serge, Summer flannel, wool poplin and gabardine in dark and medium navy, cape and rose. Velour checks and English mixtures. All lengths. All sizes, $7.75.

LOT 2—398 in This Lot—

$19.95 to $25 Coats

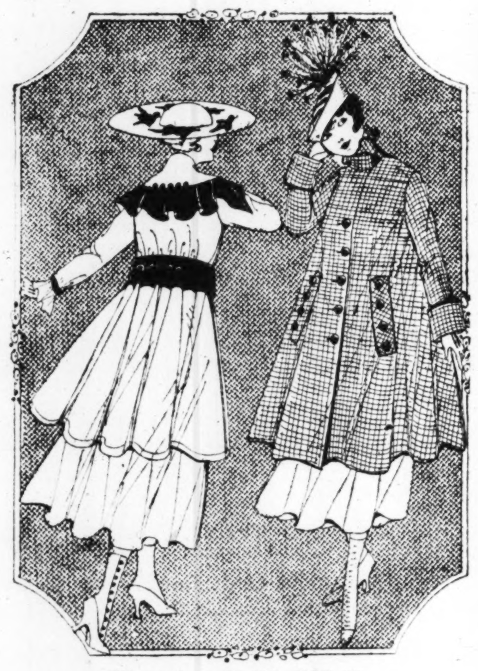
$12.80

Individualized types for Sports, afternoon and general utility wear, in velour cloth, heather mixtures, plaids, checks, white chinchilla, wool poplin, gabardine, tweeds, homespuns, taffeta silk, etc. Flare models with wide collar of contrasting color, flare cuffs, etc. Over 50 styles. All sizes.



These two Coats, $12.80

LOT 3—276 in This Lot—

Up to $45 Coats

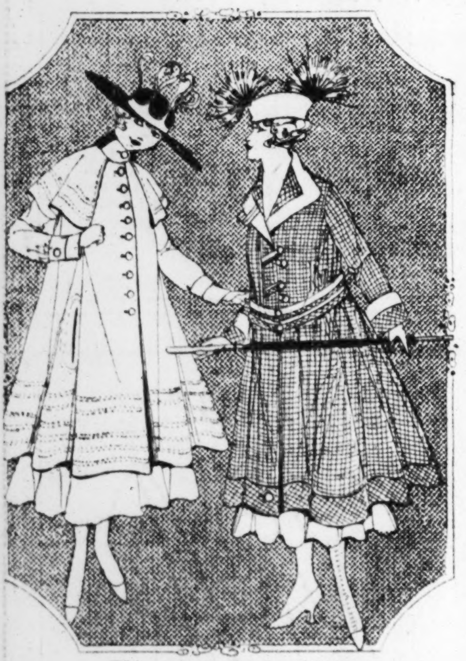
$22.50



These two Coats, $22.50

Their smartness of line is enhanced by satin, hand embroidery and suede trimmed collar and cuffs, forming a note of bright contrast, while ample and picturesque sleeves, swaggering capes and wide flaring effects are made doubly effective by elegance and generosity of materials.

Choose from faultlessly fashioned Gabardines, Silk Poplins, Taffetas, Twills, Velours, Covert Cloth, Tweeds and Serges. Only a few of a kind.

See Globe-Democrat for a parallel event in Suits.

Sample Blouses—Special

Just received an exceptionally smart lot of Blouses, exclusive and original styles in fine Georgette crepe, Pussy-Willow silk and crepe de chine. The best styles and newest colors and but one or two of a style. Every one fresh. In Monday's sale at about half actual value.......... $4.95

Nemo NEWS

Devoted to the HEALTH, COMFORT and BEAUTY of WOMEN

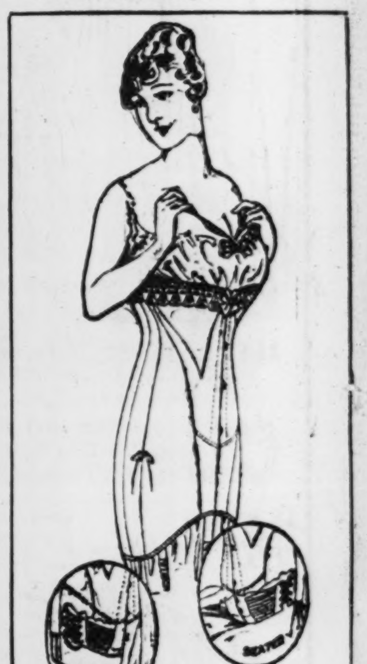
Showing how health makes style and style makes health—in Nature's way

To defy Nature is to invite defeat. To follow the ways of Nature promises victory.

The Nemo Wonderlift Bandlet gives perfect support because it works in Nature's way.

Let us explain how:

The abdominal walls are the chief support of the abdominal organs. When healthy and tense, they do their appointed work. When weakened, by weight of excess fat, or otherwise, they fail to perform their duty.



No. 555

DIAGRAM

Showing the Wonderlift Bandlet before and after adjustment, and the smooth, stylish lines of the corset.

Like the abdominal muscles, the Wonderlift Bandlet is elastic but firm; when tense (laced up) it lifts the abdomen and its organs into proper place; and, like healthy abdominal muscles, it promotes health. It lifts upward and backward—just as Nature does.

Invaluable as the Wonderlift is in doing the work of the weakened muscles, it is even more valuable in PREVENTING such weakness.

Health Makes Style

Furthermore, this uplifting and supporting service, done in Nature's way, also produces the lines of fashion; for, by restoring the fallen organs to their proper places, the figure is actually made smaller and more symmetrical.

No corset is more stylish than the Wonderlift. Its marvelous health service, though priceless, is incidental.

Wonderlift Models For Normal Figures

No. 554—For full figures, short or of medium height	$5
No. 555—For taller full figures; higher bust and back
No. 556—For slender to medium figures, average height

Two Unique Models for Abnormal Figures

No. 998—For very large, fleshy women, with heavy, hanging abdomen, much excess fat everywhere. The greatest corset ever made for this type. Big sizes only—30 to 44 ...... $10

No. 557—The other extreme—for very slim figures, sharp hip bones, concave abdomen. A distinct novelty. Sizes 18 to 26, $5

Wonderlift Corsets are correctly fitted in most good stores. Be sure you get the right model in the right size, and that you adjust it correctly.

TODAY'S BEAUTY HELP

You can keep your hair at its very best by washing it with this simple, inexpensive shampoo, which cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly of all the dandruff and dirt and leaves a clean, wholesome feeling: Just use a teaspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water, afterwards rinsing thoroughly with clean water. One finds that the hair dries quickly and evenly, is unstreaked, bright, soft and fluffy, so fluffy in fact that it looks more abundant than it is, and so soft that arranging it becomes a pleasure. All scalp irritation will disappear and the hair will be brighter than ever before.—ADV.

VASSAR ALUMNA LIVED HIGH AT INN, BUT DIDN'T PAY

Borrowed $1 Tip for Waiter, $10 for Self, and Entertained Faculty With Lavish Hand.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Aprill 22.—"Does a college education educate" is the question propounded by Mary Swain Wagner, proprietor of Vassar Inn, fashionable resort of faculty, graduates and undergraduates at Vassar College, herself a Vassar alumnus and an enthusiastic suffragist. She asks this question after the departure of a prominent alumnus of Vassar, who has been the guest at her hostelry for the past week and who omitted to pay her bills before going. Stated in Miss Wagner's words it is:

"Would anyone else but a college graduate take the best room in the inn, order meals served upstairs, keep the long distance telephone busy, entertain the faculty sumptuously, borrow a dollar to tip the waiter and $10 cash to be put on her bill, and then—walk out giving the bookkeeper a smile and a 'charge it, please?' "

"Of all the people who come to the Inn, the college women alone think the obligation is all on one side," Miss Wagner continued. "Is the trouble inside the college, or are the people who do business with the college girl lacking in moral courage? Are we the ones who should be responsible for a college girl's education?"

AD EXHIBIT TO BE SEEN HERE

Will Be Open to Public This Week in Chemical Building.

The traveling exhibit of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which was shown at the Chicago convention last June and since that time has been displayed in a number of cities, will be shown this week in the quarters of the Advertising Club of St. Louis in the Chemical Building. No charge is made for the exhibit, which will be open to the public each day from 8:30 a. m. until 5 p. m.

The exhibit is divided into 24 parts and suggests uses for advertising that may be made of newspapers, billboards, magazines, street cars, illuminated signs and specialties.

180 TO GO ON RIVER TRIP

SOCIETY TO TRAIN DOGS FOR SERVICE IN THE ARMY

Effort Will Be Made to Have Them Ready for Red Cross or Other Work When Needed.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Organization of a movement to breed and train dogs for the use of the United States army, the American Red Cross Society or other military or relief organizations was announced here today. Promoters say the movement has the approval of the War Department.

One kennel is to be located at Scranton, Pa., and a branch of the club has been formed at Pasadena, Cal. Other clubs are to be formed throughout the country where private owners can have their dogs trained and registered for national service when needed.

There are now in this country about 75 dogs which have been trained for use in military campaigns including French and German dogs for Red Cross work.

SERVIAN NEWSPAPER RESUMES

CORFU, Island of Corfu, April 22.—Publication of the Servian newspaper Journal Official, which had been suspended since the departure of the Servian Government from Nish, was resumed here today.

The first issue contained a long official communication expressing the gratitude of Servia towards the University of France and the French Minister of Public Instruction for receiving and assuring the education of Servian children and young men during the war.

[illegible] AGAINST PICKING A WIFE BY HER SILK STOCKINGS

Oklahoma Judge Thinks Young Men Should First Observe What Married Women Are Like.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., April 22.—"Sometimes I think the young men of today give too much attention to a slim waist, shapely ankles covered by silk stockings, and pretty faces. If they'd take a look at some of the women married 10 or 20 years they would know better what kind of a wife to select." This is the way Judge R. P. de Graffenreid looks at the hasty manner in which people rush into matrimony, after a long and active experience in passing upon petitions for severance of the marriage tie.

"Young people should not marry unless they each feel that life withopt the other would be an utter blank," the Judge holds. "Even then they should be certain that the feeling is not due to infatuation or something else as fleeting."

A law providing that a marriage should be advertised in the newspapers at least three months before it takes place would remedy many of the divorce evils, Judge de Graffenreid holds.

FIFTY STUDENTS IN A RECITAL

At Strassberger's Conservatories in the South Side Auditorium Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock a novelty program consisting of violin, vocal and piano ensemble numbers is to be presented by the students belonging to the classes of Professors C. The program is under the direction of Bruno Strassberger and more than 50 students of music in all its branches are to take part.

"Brownatone" Tints Your Hai In a Minute

Preferred to Slow Acting Dyes.

The straightest road and the shortest cut to the certainty of an attractive and beautiful appearance is the use of "Brownatone" Hair Stain.

This preparation will instantly change gray, streaked or faded hair to the softest and richest golden brown, medium, dark brown or black—just as you wish.

Just comb or brush it into your hair.

Impossible of detection, will not rub or wash off and needs retouching only as the hair grows out.

"Brownatone" hair stain is far superior to "dyes," and is absolutely harmless in every way.

Sold by all druggists, in two sizes, 25c and $1.00. If you are offered a substitute, save annoyance by refusing it and ordering "Brownatone" direct from the makers.

Insist on "Brownatone" at your hairdresser's.

A trial bottle and interesting booklet will be mailed for 10 cents. Mention shade desired.

PLANTS MENTIONED BY SHAKSPEARE IN SHAW EXHIBIT

Miniature Garden Along Elizabethan Lines to Be on Display Today.

The Easter offering of the Missouri Botanical Garden (Shaw's Garden) is a Shakspearean Garden, in which are the flowers, herbs, vegetable, fruits, nuts and trees mentioned in the writings of The Bard of Avon. The Shakspearean garden is in the floral display house of the new plant range. It will be open to the public today and throughout the month of May.

The garden is not an attempt to copy any particular garden of Shakspeare's time. The lateness of spring and the unsettled weather conditions prohibited an outdoor garden, and the limited space made impossible anything but a garden in miniature. However, it embodies most of the features that characterized the gardens of the Elizabethan period. The big floral display house has been divided into three squares, each 50x50 feet, the parterre, the trellised garden and the topiarian garden, each dominated by several Elizabethan motifs.

The balcony of the floral display house, with the pool and fountain below, lends itself admirably to the scheme, giving the effect of the Kenilworth gardens, which had a terrace walk 12 feet wide, and raised 10 feet above the garden. The balcony affords a good view of the parterre—a series of beds arranged ornamentally, with intervening spaces of gravel or turf—and the gardens beyond. The pattern used in this parterre was popular in Shakspearean times. The flower beds along the sides, as well as the parterre itself are bordered with a hedge of privet and juniper.

The trellised garden is inclosed by a high trellis with arched entrances, over which are trained climbing roses and other vines. This garden is terraced, with turfed slopes, and flower beds and graveled walks above. The plan of the interior was taken from the lower garden at Montacute, the central portion being depressed, a fountain, junipers and small flower beds forming a part of the design. All woodwork in the parterre and trellised garden is painted in green and white.

The topiarian garden is devoted principally to box trees trimmed into various shapes, an arbor of trellis work, covered with vines, terminating the main axis of the three gardens. The motif for the arbor was taken from the plans of the old Wilton House gardens, designed by Isaac de Caux.

In the "Nosegaie Garden" grows March violets, bachelor buttons, carnations, columbines, cornflowers, daffodils, daisies, eglantines, flag, flower-de-luce, lily, marigold, pansy, pink, peony, poppy, primrose, "canterburie bels," oxlips. In the "Garden of Herbs of Good Smell" will be found the bay tree, camomile, caraway, ginger, hyssop, lavender, marjoram, mint, mustard, parsley, pepper, rhubarb, rosemary, rue, saffron, savory, thyme, wormwood.

The plants in the Shakspearean Garden are all plainly labeled with both the common—as appear in Shakspeare's writings—and with the scientific name; together with the reference. The Shakspearean Garden is attracting wide attention. Dr. George T. Moore, director of the Missouri Botanical Garden, is receiving inquiries daily regarding the contents of the garden and its arrangement.

MEASLES BREAKS UP PARTY AT A QUARANTINED HOME

Kansas City (Kan.) Health Commissioner Drops in On Guests of Sister of the Patient.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., April 22.—In order to cheer Miss Jessie Rodgers, who had been under quarantine for several days because her little sister had the measles, three of her girl friends and one married woman went to her home as guests at an afternoon tea. The measles patient had so far recovered that she was able to mingle with the party.

Someone telephoned Dr. C. W. McLaughlin, Health Commissioner of the function in progress, and he hurried to the Rodgers home in an automobile, accompanied by two policemen. They arrived just as the hostess and her guests, also the measles patient, were sitting at the table for the refreshments.

"This party will have to break up immediately," the Health Commissioner declared. The girls demurred, but soon were convinced that the order would have to be obeyed, so they decided to conclude the function at the home of one of the guests. They have all had the measles.

VIKINGS' RELICS ARE FOUND

Armaments Are Uncovered in the Hebrides Islands.

LONDON, April 22.—Children playing on the mound which had probably been raised over the grave of some Viking leader at Valtos in the island of Lewis, one of the Hebrides group, recently discovered a number of Viking relics of the ninth century.

They consisted of a pair of large oval brooches of a noted Scandinavian type, a small brooch, a round, disc-shaped ornament with a central boss and a decoration of interlaced loops, a small buckle, a portion of a bronze chain probably used to connect the large oval brooches and a single big amber bead.

122 Voyages to South America.

LIVERPOOL, England, April 22.—Commodore George Hayes, Liverpool's foremost sea captain, is dead at his home here, aged 68 years. Commodore Hayes was called in shipping circles "the best known man in South America." He had made 122 voyages to South American ports. For many years he was commodore of the Pacific Steam Navigation Co.'s merchant fleet. He navigated his ships two and a half million miles, taking them 4000 times into different ports.

GRAND-LEADER SIXTH WASHINGTON SEVENTH & LUCAS SAINT LOUIS

SYMPHONY SOCIETY TO HAVE ANNUAL ELECTION TUESDAY

Officers and Board of Management to Be Chosen at the Artists' Guild.

The St. Louis Symphony Society will hold its annual election Tuesday evening at 8:15 o'clock at the Artists' Guild, Union and Von Versen, when the officers and board of management will be elected for the ensuing year. The board of management consists of 40 members, from which the president appoints the executive committee of 15 members.

Every subscriber to seats and every person making a subscription of $5 or over, is entitled to attend this meeting and take an active part in the election of the officers and board of management.

The 1915-1916 season was the most successful for several seasons. The total receipts for the year were $50,160.51; total expenditures, $82,994.17. There was a deficit of $32,833.66, which was covered by the guarantee fund, $21,51[illegible].65. This amount is being collected and subscriptions up to March 31 are in hand to cover the balance.

The guarantee fund of $50,000, which the Symphony Society is endeavoring to raise for the 1916-1917 season, will enable the society to increase the size of the orchestra to 14 additional strings, which will place it, in numbers, on an equal with the Cincinnati and Minneapolis orchestras, and in efficiency, second to none.

The society has already engaged a number of its soloists for the next year among whom are the most eminent artists who can be secured. Among them are: Ernestine Schumann-Heink, contralto; Joseph Hofman, piainst; Micha Elman, violinist; Efren Zimbalist, violinist; Alma Gluck, soprano; and Mrs. H. H. A. Beach, pianist, and America's foremost woman composer, who will play her own concerto.

GREAT ABATEMENT OF SMOKE EVIL REPORTED IN LONDON

Improvement Attributed to Regulations Affecting Factories and Wider Use of Gas.

LONDON, April 22.—The increasing clearness of the atmosphere in London is noticed by Prof. F. J. Brodie of the Royal Microscopical Society in a book just published on the "Incidence of Bright Sunshine Over the United Kingdom During the Past 30 Years."

There has been a great abatement of the smoke evil, he says, owing to the regulations affecting factories, to the improvements in the construction of domestic fireplaces, and to the largely increased use of gas for cooking and heating purposes. The air in London, he shows, has in recent years become much cleaner and the duration of sunshine, more particularly in the winter months has steadily increased.

At all the stations in the British Isles where regular observations are made there is a steady tendency toward increase in the amount of bright sunshine. The increase in London is far greater than at the two nearest suburban stations, Oxford, in the Thames Valley, and Hastings, on the coast. The number of foggy days registered shows a steady decrease.

N BREAD-MAKING RECORD

Italian Plan Makes 400 Pounds of Dough from 300 of Grain.

ROME, April 22.—A new method of making bread recently adopted in Italy has proved a great success. It is found that 300 pounds of grain produces 400 pounds of what is termed "natural bread."

In the process the grain is sifted and washed; it is then left for 48 to 60 hours in a warm bath, where it germinates and begins to sprout. When the germinating process has gone far enough the grain is crushed in a machine and made into dough, which is passed into the oven. The natural bread is grayish in color, with an agreeable odor, and has much higher nutritive properties than white bread, according to the Corriere Della Sera.

BODIES OF COUPLE IN RIVER

Clothing of Virginia Doctor and Wife Torn; Case Investigated.

HOPEWELL, Va., April 22.—Two weeks after Dr. E. E. Supplee and his wife disappeared when rowing on the James River, the body of the wife was found floating in that stream. That of the husband had been found a short while before.

Clothing on the body of Dr. Supplee was badly torn, but no particular significance was attached to this fact at the time. When the body of the wife showed a similar condition suspicion of foul play arose and investigation is under way.

BROPHY OPERATION ON BABY

Jaws Broken and Bent to Form Roof for Mouth.

WICHITA, Kan., April 22.—Elizabeth Treffus, a few weeks old, was born with a cleft palate. To overcome this speech-destroying defect, Dr. A. D. Updegraff broke the jaws of the infant and bent them into the shape of an arch to form a roof for the mouth, and it is expected that the power of speech will result.

The process is known as the Brophy operation, and it was the first time it has been performed in this State, so far as known.

Copyright Office Pays Way.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The Copyright Office is one of the few Government institutions which pays its own way. In 1915 its expenses were $102,589, and fees received were $9042 more than that amount.

HANDLING OF CHEMICAL KILLS BRITISH MUNITIONS MAKERS

Tri-nitro-Toluol Seriously Affects Health of Others; Sedra-Chlorethane Found to Be Dangerous.

LONDON, April 22.—The manufacture of the high explosive known as tri-nitro-toluol is seriously affecting the health of thousands of munition workers. It causes unusual drowsiness, frontal headache, eczema and loss of appetite and sometimes jaundice, according to a committee which has been devoting much study to the health of the munition workers. In a few cases even death had resulted.

The committee also found that tetra-chlor-ethane, a noninflammible liquid, an ingredient of the varnish applied to aeroplanes, is also having a dangerous effect. It seems in vapor form like chloroform and is a powerful anesthetic leading to death. The committee learned that the heads of the munitions department have found an effective varnish which does not contain the poisonous chemical, but that the supply of its ingredients is at present insufficient.

The committee found overwork a source of waste and says that proper attention earlier in the war to the need for weekly rest would have prevented a large part of the diminished capacity that has appeared, and would have averted much costly and wasteful expenditure upon imperfect work.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases, for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, as dangerous as ever. The acid must be neutralized, and its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.—ADV.

How to Look Years Less Than Your Age

The most aged face will look years younger after the use of ordinary mercolized wax for from ten days to two weeks. This remarkable substance, because of its peculiar absorptive power, actually removes the thin veil of faded or withered outer cuticle, a little at a time. Gradually the fresher more youthful skin underneath is revealed. This absorption process being a purely hygienic one, an entirely natural complexion is acquired—quite different from the artificial complexion, which appears anything but girlish, though often bearing painful evidences of childishness. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is sufficient to rejuvenate any complexion. It is put on like cold cream at bedtime, and removed mornings with warm water.

To eradicate such age marks as wrinkles and furrows, make a wash lotion by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. This has wonderful astringent and tonic properties. It quickly effaces all kinds of wrinkles, no matter how caused, making the skin firm, smooth and young looking.—ADV.

Opportunity Against Values—

Pulitzer School of Journalism Has Proved Its Worth

questions he ought to ask in getting news.

"The fruit of all this is apparent in the record of the men who have gone out from the Pulitzer School of Journalism. Beside the 46 men who have received the degree of the school, a score of others have remained long enough in the fourth, or professional year, to have caught its spirit and shared its training.

"In Berlin, a graduate of the school in 1913 occupied the responsible position of a correspondent whose dispatches appear in a large group of American newspapers. A more recent graduate has charge of the telegraph desk of a New York morning newspaper. Another is assistant dramatic critic of one of the foremost New York papers. Another is office editor of The Independent. Among New York morning dailies, the World, the Tribune, the Times, the Herald and the American have our graduates on their staffs. In a recent news story of the first magnitude—the caving-in of Broadway for three squares over a section of the subway—18 graduates of the school were on the job from these five papers.

"I have been a reporter, and I remember well, when I began my work on the World, the difficulty I had on assignments because of my lack of acquaintance with other reporters. It was six months or a year before I acquired enough acquaintance to be sure that I got everything that was going on an important assignment. Every good newspaper man will realize the far-reaching advantage of beginning his work, in a city like New York, with a school acquaintance with the reporters who appear on an assignment of importance with him, even if it is his first assignment. It is already plain that one great advantage of the School of Journalism, to the men graduated from it, will be that they will enter their calling with the acquaintance ordinarily needing a half year or a year, and themselves known to those who work with them.

Newspapers Welcome Its Graduates.

"About one-half the men who have left the school are working in New York. The others are scattered over the country. Three have gone to country weeklies. The whole policy of the school is directed to the task of teaching men to understand the news, not merely in New York, but to the country. The newspapers of St. Louis and other leading cities are studied and analyzed. In time, the graduates of the Pulitzer School of Journalism will be in every important city in the United States.

"Many were in doubt four years ago whether the men from the school would be wanted by newspaper offices. This doubt is over. Last year there were more applications for men from the school than the school could fill. The school refuses to recommend for a position any student who has not completed its course.

"The school has both men and women students, and it proved more difficult, at first, to get places for the women than for the men. But the prospect now is that it will be practicable to get places for women as well as men, as offices come to know the trained woman in journalism—the woman who has knowledge as well as sentiment, accuracy as well as emotion, and poise and judgment, which prevent her from forcing the note in one direction or another. Such a woman, every city editor will want in his office. Women who have this training are certain, in time, to end the use of the phrase 'sob sister'—a term which is a gross injustice to the clear-headed, industrious and news-getting woman who works in the city room of American newspapers.

Creating New Journalistic Standards.

As compared with other professions, ours is a small one in numbers. From the 1910 census, there are now 40,000 to 45,000 newspaper men in the United States, including the editors of small weekly papers. The School of Journalism in Columbia University, with its 20 to 25 graduates a year, and its 140 students enrolled, furnishes but a small share of the men who annually enter the Eastern newspaper offices; but even the existence of such a school, supported as it is by the munificent gift of Joseph Pulitzer—the largest gift ever bestowed by any man on any calling in which he himself had first won his wages, and last his fame—is creating new standards for the man who enters a newspaper office.

"The American newspaper 80 years ago took its men from the printer's case. Sixty years ago, the training of the public school was the requirement. Forty years ago, the men who entered newspaper work needed a high school education, and here and there a college man was among them. The number of the latter has grown, but a school which bases its four-year course on the preparatory course of the high school, and trains both men and women, offering all the advantages of New York in instruction, knowledge of life and opportunity for reporting important events, will gradually come to be the standard of the requirements for the training of the journalist. Each of our great cities will have one of these schools, in connection with its university, as the Universities of Missouri, Kansas, Texas, Wisconsin, Ohio and Illinois have schools today.

Forty Newspaper Training Schools Today.

"In addition, nearly 40 institutions of learning are now offering courses in journalism, and in training in newspaper English. Today, 3700 undergraduates in these schools are taking courses in the writing which the newspaper demands. Of all the influences multiplying these schools, the Pulitzer School of Journalism has been the greatest and most important. It is not only educating its students; it has led in an educational advance both in the college and in the newspaper, on a scale which would have been looked on as incredible when Joseph Pulitzer provided the endowment for the school at Columbia University.

"To the trustees of the Pulitzer estate was left the responsible duty of deciding, three years after the opening of the school, as to the success of the school in operation. On this decision rested the receipt by the school of the second $1,000,000, the first $1,000,000 being devoted to its founding and opening. This duty has been discharged by the trustees, in the unanimous conclusion that the school is meeting Mr. Pulitzer's purpose, desire and design. This establishes the school for all the future, and in that future, it is already clear that its influence on the training of journalists elsewhere will be as great as through the work of its graduates."

CAUGHT IN TREE 17 HOURS

TOKIO, April 22.—Driven to attempt to kill herself by the failure of her father on the Stock Exchange and consequent poverty, a young Japanese girl recently threw herself to the ocean from the topmost cliff of the sacred isle of Enoshima. She was caught and pinioned by the branches of a giant tree which leaned far out over the sea.

It was not until 17 hours later that her cries were heard by a fisherman passing in a sampan and she was rescued, seriously but not mortally hurt.

Shakspeare Name Only a Trademark Says Col. Watterson

In earlier years he signed two other official documents.

These five signatures still exist.

There are no other specimens of his penmanship in existence.

Was he prejudiced against the art? His granddaughter, whom he loved, was 8 years old when he died, yet she had had no teaching, he left no provision for her education, although he was rich, and in her mature womanhood she couldn't write and couldn't tell her husband's manuscript from anybody else's—she thought it was Shakspeare's.

When Shakspeare died in Stratford it was not an event. It made no more stir in England than the death of any other forgotten theater actor would have made. Nobody came down from London; there was no lamenting poems, no eulogies, no national tears—there was merely silence, and nothing more. A striking contrast with what happened when Ben Jonson and Francis Bacon and Spencer and Raleigh and the other distinguished literary folk of Shakspeare's time passed from earth. No praiseful voice was lifted for the lost Bard of Avon; even Ben Jonson waited seven years before he lifted his.

So far as anybody actually knows and can prove, Shakspeare of Stratford-on-Avon never wrote a play in his life.

So far as anybody knows and can prove, he never wrote a letter to anybody in his life.

So far as anyone knows he received only one letter during his life.

So far as anyone knows and can prove, Shakspeare of Stratford wrote only one poem during his life. This one is authentic. He did write that one—a fact which stands undisputed; he wrote the whole of it; he wrote the whole of it out of his own head.. He commanded that this work of art be engraved upon his tomb, and he was obeyed. There it abides to this day. This is it:

"Good friend for Iesus sake forbeare
To digg the dust inclosed heare:
Blest be ye man yt spares thes stones
And curst be he yt moves my bones."

Beyond the details thus given we know not a thing about him. All the rest of his vast history, as furnished by biographers, is built up, course upon course, of guesses, inferences, theories, conjectures—an Eiffel Tower of artificialities rising sky high from a very flat and very thin foundation of inconsequential facts. As a matter of fact, there was nothing to tell. He had no history.

Thus Mark Twain briefs the case. Not

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.—ADV.

How Any Woman Can Remove Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture)

It is not longer necessary for a woman to visit a beauty specialist to have superfluous hairs removed, for with the aid of a plain delatone paste, she can, in the privacy of her own home, remove even a stubborn growth in a very few minutes. The paste is made by mixing some water with a little powdered delatone. This is applied to the hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes removed and the skin washed, when it will be left clear and hairless. Be sure you buy real delatone.—ADV.

Kansas City Women Opposed To Giving Children Medicine

They Find "External" Treatment Better Than Internal Medicines for Children's Colds.

We give below letters from a number of Kansas City (Mo.) ladies who were selected by their druggists to try out Vap-O-Rub, the "outside" treatment for cold troubles, introduced in Kansas City last winter. Vap-O-Rub is the invention of a North Carolina druggist. It comes in salve form, and has a two-fold action—first, the body heat releases the ingredients in the form of vapors, that are inhaled with each breath—second, Vap-O-Rub is absorbed through and stimulates the skin, aiding the vapors inhaled to relieve the congestion.

Mrs. James Hollens, 1926 Tracy Av., has used Vick's herself for colds in the chest and asthma, and has also used it on her children, and "finds it excellent."

Mrs. Almira Turner, 1314 E. 24th St., relieved her husband of bronchitis with two nights' applications. She also used on her four months' old baby for cold and on the other children, and says: "I find Vap-O-Rub does everything you say."

Mrs. T. L. Marshall, 159 N. Lawndale Av., has two children, one six years old and one eight months old. The baby last winter had an obstinate cough for quite a while. Mrs. Marshall used Vap-O-Rub and writes: "The cough soon yielded to this treatment after several different cough medicines had been tried with no effect." Mrs. Marshall also writes: "Vap-O-Rub appeals to us because the delicate little stomachs are not being loaded down with medicines containing opium and other harmful ingredients."

A Forest Av. lady, whose name we withhold by request, used Vap-O-Rub for "a terrific cold—could not breath through my nose at all—impossible to go to sleep. Used Vick's Vap-O-Rub and in five minutes was asleep and breathing easily."

Mrs. W. A. Winkler, 4223 E. 18th St., says—"My baby had a cold, almost pneumonia. I used Vap-O-Rub on him as directed, and in one day's time he was better."

Mrs. Anna Taylor, 6040 Walrond Av., has four children, and says: "I have never used anything as good for coughs and colds as Vap-O-Rub."

Mrs. Harry Webb, 2128 E. 27th St., says: "Our little girl is very susceptible to colds, and in fact this is the only winter and spring that she has escaped pneumonia, and we believe it is Vap-O-Rub that has kept her from a spell this year." Three sizes—25c, 50c and $1.00.

a single statement can be gainsaid. The conclusion is dead against Shakspeare.

III.

Bacon's partisans have various arguments in favor of their theory, including a few startling coincidences. Among these are certain passages in the plays that point to Bacon. In "Henry the Sixth" use is made of French historic archives that were unknown to the public of Shakspeare's day, but could have been known to Bacon, whilst Woolsey's famous speech in "Henry the Eighth," "Farewell, a long farewell to all my greatness," does not appear in any of the earlier editions, but does appear in the folio of 1623, two years after Bacon's fall and seven years after Shakspeare's death. I shall presently undertake to account for this.

Once, whilst I was visiting Whitelaw Reid, at Wrest Park, I spoke of it. "I don't believe it." Reid said. "Well," said I, "you have here in the library the means of verifying or refuting it." He raised his hand in deprecation, and exclaimed, "I would not if I could," meaning, of course, that, as American Ambassador, charged with affairs of moment, he could not afford to meddle with such a controversy; that he would make himself persona non grata to the English people if he did; wherein he was clearly right. I did not pursue the matter, nor look into the books, not caring a button who wrote the plays. Or, shall I say, knowing who did and not wishing or meaning to precipitate a contemplated scoop of my own?

The trouble with the Baconians is that they seek to prove too much. Their "cryptogram" is absurdly fanciful and far-fetched. It carries no weight with thinking people. It may be dismissed indeed as a figment of learning run mad.

During the spring and part of the summer of 1873 Sam Clemens and I were wandering in and about London, making occasional excursions into the Warwick country, regaled the while by the queer proceeding of the Tichborne trial, which was being reported every day verbatim in the London papers and creating a prodigious sensation all over the world. In his and my family, closely connected by marriage (a great-uncle of his had married a great-aunt of mine, his mother named after and reared by this great-aunt) there was a legend that the Lamptons sprang from the peerage and were entitled to English estates and titles.

We had a common cousin of the name of Leathers, who bred back to the oldest of the Lampton brothers of Virginia, and who called himself "The Earl of Durham." One day Sam Clemens, putting aside the Times, from which he had been reading the performance of Kenealy and his Fat Boy the day before, said in that irresistible drawl of his—inherited, by the way, from Jane Lampton, his mother, and not affected by himself—I'll tell you what I'll do; you put up $500 and I'll put up $500, and we'll bring Leathers over here and set him in as a claimant to the Earldom of Durham."

He was so pleased by the conceit that he afterward wrote a novel entitled "The Claimant." Another time, during that season, as we were browsing among the rookeries of Fleet street, he suddenly broke in upon a philosophic discourse of mine—"Say, I went down to the Herald office yesterday and looked into this Durham business; nothing to the story whatever; the Lamptons not in it at all; went out a hundred years ago; the present Earldom a new creation; a rich Quartermaster of the Peninsula War of the name of Brown, or Robinson; but, all the same, we could have lots of fun bringing Leathers over and it would be worth the money." I have related elsewhere how, upon a hotel register in Rome, many years later, I came upon the entry, "The Earl of Durham—the Honorable Reginald Lambton—Lady Anne Lambton," indicating that Mark Twain was merely incubating his story—there having been no visit to the Herald office—the Lambtons, spelling it with a "b" instead of a "p," still in the peerage—with which I taxed him, but not in the least disturbing his equanimity.

Pursuing the line of surmise applied to the Shakspearean controversy, is it conjecturable that during this, or some succeeding, visit to England, roaming around Leicester Square—maybe along the muse-brooding banks of the Wye—I found—But let me not anticipate. All in regular order.

To come directly to the point, there is a simple but perfect thesis in explication of the Shaksperean mystery. This relates that the plays were written by Christopher Marlowe. They were revised by Francis Bacon. Thus prepared for the stage, they were produced by William Shakspeare.

It is not true, as tradition reports, that Marlowe was killed in a tavern brawl at Deptford, June 1, 1593. It was his antagonist who was slain. He and his friend, Shakspeare, one of the managers of the Globe Theater, had gone for a lark across the Thames to the Surrey side after the successful performance of "The Tragedy of Dido." They fell in with a gay party, drank deeply, and in a tipsy quarrel between Marlowe and an actor named Herrick, who ventured to criticise certain passages in "The Passionate Shepherd," recently published and greatly admired, Marlowe, finding himself outclassed and underneath, used his knife to release himself, having no murderous or other serious intention. The incident seemed trivial and good humor was quickly restored. The company drank again and again. Suddenly poor Herrick staggered and fell to the floor. When they stooped to pick him up he was dead. An artery had been severed, unknown to him or to anyone, and he had bled to death.

Here was a situation, and what might have come of it no one can tell if at the moment of their dilemma young Francis Bacon had not driven by in a coach-and-six belonging to the Earl of Essex, on his way to the Privy Council.

Bacon as Marlowe's Editor.

Francis Bacon and Christopher Marlowe were the best of friends. They had been classmates at Cambridge. Marlowe was a poet and scholar. Bacon was a philosopher, a lawyer, a statesman and a courtier, a man both of affairs and letters. There was mutual appreciation and genuine regard between them. But they had to keep apart in public. They could not be even seen together without hurt to Bacon.

At once Bacon realized the gravity of the case. Kit Marlowe was but a vagabond author hanging on to the theater and keeping company with the players, who were little better than outlaws. But he was a man of genius and promise; his chance victim an obscure varlet. Nevertheless, a gibbet loomed ahead. Bacon, ever fertile of resources and invention and prompt to action, suggested that the living man exchange his clothing with the dead man, and fly—fly for his life—and, to make assurance doubly sure, it being nightfall, he took him in the Earl's carriage to a point, whence his escape from England was easy. Next day it was given out that Marlowe had been killed, and, the penalty death for him in case he came to life again, it was ever after thus proclaimed.

Christopher Marlowe went first to Paris. Then he journeyed into [illegible]. Finally, all individual traces lost, he repaired to Italy and settled down in Padua. This will account for his love of Italian plots and characters, his familiarity with Italian scenes and themes, and his sometimes Latin tone of thought and turn of expression: though a Cambridge education would also have tended his mind in that direction. Be this as it may, he went to work as soon as possible with his handicraft of play-making, sending each play as it was written to his friend, Francis Bacon. The purely fanciful needed no revision. But, when the fruitful Marlowe genius was brought to grapple with medicine and law—when it had to deal with history, philosophy and court etiquette—the splendid technical equipment of Bacon was required to supplement and enrich the original text. Thus, by the way, "the wisest, brightest, meanest of mankind," shared authorship with the sublime dramatist and inspired poet, William Shakspeare, theatrical manager, now and then contributing a practical hint to their stage production, and—the names of Marlowe and Bacon in that connection out of question—giving his own name alike to the play-bills and title pages.

Bacon left no cryptogram. No more did Marlowe. But, in an early edition of the Lemounier Vasari, the Comte de la Borde, correcting one of the many errors of the Guida de Bassano, refers to a recluse of Padua, Pietro Basconi by name, who claimed to have nursed Marlowe in his last illness (Marlowe died in 1627, just a year after Bacon's death), and to have had from him the story and reduced it to writing. This strange composition came into the possession of Andreas Basconi, a descendant of Pietro, and was read, we are told, as late as 1843 by no less a person than Washington Irving, who, thinking it a doubtful yarn, and, with Whitelaw Reid, knowing it dangerous for a man of importance (he was then American Minister to Spain) to tamper with a subject so sacred to the British heart, wrote nothing about it, nor, indeed, spoke of it except to one or two intimate friends.

The original Pietro Basconi manuscript may or may not have been burned in the great conflagration that visited Padua in 1860, but why might not a rough, rather incoherent minute of this have been made from memory by Joel T. Hart, the Kentucky sculptor, long resident of Florence, and communicated by him to me, when in 1859, visiting his native land, the two of us shared an apartment on the south side of G street, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, Washington City, which is susceptible of proof? Or why, in 1873, when Mark Twain and I were rambling about London—he making pretended researches into British heraldry—may I not have fallen in with a ragged Italian in Leicester Square, who, born and reared in Padua, had an inkling of the truth and who tried to sell me a plaster cast of Christopher Marlowe, declaring that, if I would go with him on a dark night into a wood by the River Wye, he would produce from the hollow of an old oak tree the identical Basconi manuscript, which had escaped the flames, and was hidden there by a Gypsy relative of his and——?

Go to! Go to! I am not on the witness stand making oath to anything—only pursuing the usual Bacon-Shakspeare method. If our dear George Madden Martin can reconstruct out of the insubstantial pageant of a dream the boyhood of the Warwickshire lad who is known as the Bard of Avon, why may not I call from the shadows and the stars the strange story of Christopher Marlowe—the friend and schoolmate of Francis Bacon—at the moment of his supposed death the greatest of English poets and dramatists, who, in "The Jew of Malta," anticipated both Shylock and Othello, and in "The Lascivious Queen." Cleopatra—who preceded Goethe in the idea, the philosophy and construction of Faust—many of whose early conceits, and some of his actual phrasing, to be found in the plays later ascribed to William Shakspeare? Did not Ben Johnson, cited in praise of Shakspeare, write also of "Marlowe's mighty line?"

Hazlitt quotes a number of single verses "struck out of the heat of a glowing fancy" that, as he says, "leave a track of golden fire behind them." The following are a few that might readily be ascribed to Shakspeare:

> "I know he is not dead; I know proud death > Durst not behold such sacred majesty."

• • • • • •

> "Hang both your greedy ears upon my lips, > Let them devour my speech, suck in my breath."

• • • • • •

> ——"From discontent grows treason,
> And on the stalk of treason death."

• • • • • •

> "Tyrants swim safest in a crimson flood."

• • • • • •

The two following lines—

> "Oh! I grow dull, and the cold hand of sleep > Hath thrust his icy fingers in my breast"— are the same as those in King John—

> "And none of you will bid the winter come
> To thrust his icy fingers in my maw."

And again the Moor's exclamation:

> "Now by the proud complexion of my cheeks, > Ta'en from the kisses of the amorous sun"— is the same as Cleopatra's—

> "But that I am with Phoebus' amorous pinches black," etc.

Eleazer's sarcasm,

> —"These dignities
> Like poison make men swell; this rat's-bane honor,
> Oh, 'tis so sweet! they'll lick it till they burst"— shows the utmost virulence of smothered spleen, and his concluding strain of malignant exultation has been but tamely imitated by Young's Zanga:

> "Now, tragedy, thou minion of the night,
> Rhamnusia's pew fellow, to thee I'll sing,
> Upon a harp made of dead Spanish bones,
> The proudest instrument the world affords,
> To thee that never blushest, though thy cheeks
> Are full of blood, O Saint Revenge, to thee
> I consecrate my murders, all my stabs," etc.

"Comparisons are odious" and "Love me little, love me long" are epigrams of Marlowe, and it must be allowed that he who wrote "The Passionate Shepherd," could have written "Venus and Adonis."

What boots it? Not a scrap of manuscript remains. This side of the Judgment day there will be none to tell us—perhaps not then when all are busy. As Daniel Webster observed of "the past," may we says of the plays, "they are at least secure," whoever wrote them. We have them. They will not get away from us. Being immortal, they will never die.

peare tercentenary, notwithstanding that war has interfered with the more ambitious plans outlined by the committee two years ago.

April 23 (equivalent to May 3 under the new style calendar), will be the central date in the celebration. On that day 300 years ago the great dramatist died at Stratford-on-Avon. His exact birth date is more obscure, but there is some ground for believing that he was also born on April 23, although the date may have been anywhere between April 22 and May 4, of the year 1564.

The National Tercentenary Committee, under the patronage of the King and Queen, has arranged for Shakspeare services in practically all the churches of the kingdom on April .0, with the principal service in Westminster Abbey. On Monday, May 1, a meeting will be held in the Mansion house, with an address, it is hoped, by the Prime Minister, and other speeches by various notables celebrating the national memory of the poet.

On May 2 there will be a gala performance of "Julius Cesar" under royal patronage at the Drury Lane Theater, with all the great English Shakspearean stars as actors.

Schools' Celebration.

May 3 will be celebrated in the schools as Shakspeare day. On the same day, Prof. John W. Mackail of Oxford will deliver the annual Shakspeare lecture at the British Academy, and a national committee will meet to arrange for a permanent memorial of the occasion in behalf of the school children of the nation. On Friday, the 5th, a pilgrimage will take place to Stratford-on-Avon, where the chief actors of the day will give a performance of scenes from Shakspearean dramas at the Memorial Theater.

In London, a series of memorial lectures will be given by Sidney Lee at London University beginning March 14, while a similar course will be given at Gresham College by Prof. Foster Watson.

The London Shakspeare League has arranged for the unveiling of a memorial in Curtain road to mark the site of Shakspeare's Theater in Shoreditch. Under the same auspices there will be lectures on Shakspeare and a reading of Hamlet by Ben Greet. Greet is also to be in charge of the presentation of 20 Shakspeare plays at popular prices in the old Victoria Hall.

The British Empire Shakspeare Society will strike a commemorative medallion likeness, which will go to all parts of the world.

Several of the London boroughs will have celebrations of their own. Hampstead, for example, will have a series of lectures and readings, under the chairmanship of the Mayor.

"A Book of Homage."

A national committee is preparing "A Book of Homage," which will contain tributes to the poet from various corners of the globe.

At Stratford-on-Avon there will be a fortnight of Shakspearean performances, and a long series of special celebrations, including a procession to Shakspeare's church and a floral decoration of the tomb in the chancel.

Oxford is to have a tercentenary exhibition at Bodley's Library, opening on April 24. Manchester has a committee of its own which has arranged an elaborate series of lectures, recitals, performances of songs, prize competitions and exhibitions. A permanent memorial will be provided at Manchester in the form of a Shakspeare garden, laid out on lines parallel to that at Stratford-on-Avon.

There will be less important tercentenary perfor: ances and observances in practically every city of importance in Great Britain and Ireland. The feature at Dublin will be a gala performance of "Henry V."

The little group of enthusiasts who maintain that Bacon really wrote most of the works attributable to Shakspeare are reported to be preparing a "ceremony of derision," of which, however, no details have been announced.

"LIKE a Pup to a Root," do they hang on to the Earth, when you throw in the Clutch, or throw on the Brakes.

But,—instead of merely grinding against said Earth,—for Traction,—they CLING to it, much as your bare foot clings to slippery surfaces.

This new and wonderful Goodrich discovery, called "Barefoot Rubber," is as stretchy almost as a pure Rubber band, and as Light-weight as Rubber in its native amber color when it comes raw from the forest, but stronger, tougher, longer-wearing (in Tires) than pure Rubber could ever be.

That Lightness, Stretch, and CLING-quality is due, in part, to the absence of the heavy and inert white substances which, in other Tires, provide the "sandpapery" texture designed to give effective, but grinding, Traction when Clutch or Brakes do their work.

TO provide its maximum Traction with minimum Friction (which means minimum Heat, minimum Tread-Wear, and lessened Strain on the rubber adhesive between fabric layers.)—

—That's the Mission of the new Goodrich "Barefoot Rubber."

How well it does this work,—how much more Resilience, Comfort-in-riding, and Mileage, it gives,—(without a farthing more cost to you) may be known and realized by putting on your Car even one pair of BLACK-TREAD Goodrich Tires, for test.

"Barefoot Rubber" can be had in Goodrich FABRIC Tires,—Goodrich "Silvertown" Tires,—Goodrich Inner Tubes,—Goodrich Motor-Cycle Tires,—Goodrich Bicycle Tires,—Goodrich Truck Tires,—Goodrich Rubber Boots, Overshoes, Soles and Heels, and in no other make but Goodrich.

Stretch it till you are tired, but tear its fibres you can't.

With all this,—observe that the best Fabric Tires in America—made of this TENACIOUS "Barefoot" Rubber,—cost you no more, and usually less, than ordinary Tires made by other responsible manufacturers.

This, comparison of Goodrich "Fair-List" prices with others will prove.

There are no "larger-sized" Tires (taken Size for Size and Type for Type), made in America than Goodrich Black-Tread Tires.

Why, then, should any Business Man pay more than the Goodrich "Fair-List" Price, for any Tire, until he has at least tested one pair of these new black-tread Goodrich Safety-Tires?

WANT ADS FOR LATE EDITIONS

For the accommodation of advertisers, the Post-Dispatch will receive advertisements as late as p. m. (except on Saturday) for publication in the later editions—under the classifications Help Wanted, Lost and Found and Death Notices.

To get the benefit of the full circulation advertisements should be sent in before 11:30 a. m. However, should you miss the Home Edition, your advertisement in the subsequent editions of the Post-Dispatch will reach more readers than through the entire circulation of the two other evening newspapers combined.

Get your ads in early! It means better results for you.

Our Navy Is Not Balanced, Says a Noted Authority

particularly fit body of men, well drilled, generally capable and splendidly cared for.

But beyond any possible question, both as to officers and crews, the navy is deficient in numbers not alone properly to man the ships afloat at a time of universal unrest and danger, but to put into fighting condition the ships in repair and on reserve.

Not alone is there deficiency of numbers properly to man the ships—and this I know to be a fact measured by any reasonable rule of proportion—but the responsible duties of deck command are now often necessarily intrusted to officers still too young to have had the experience necessary to act instantly and correctly, as may be demanded in emergency, and especially in the confusion of actual battle. This is no reflection upon these officers, but an expression of doubt as to the sufficient safeguarding of the destinies of $15,000,000 ships and their crews of perhaps 1200 men.

Of ships, it is apparent to all, and well enough indicated by the public testimony of various naval boards and officers, that while we have some splendid individual ships, we have not a well-rounded and balanced fleet; and instead of occupying at least an undeniable second place, I doubt if we are better than a fourth in actual fighting capacity, and also if we are not individually surpassed by several Powers in almost every class of fighting unit, except possibly the slower type of first-line ships typified by the new Pennsylvania.

It is not my province, and it would be presumptuous for me here to undertake to specify the exact character or number and equipment of units which should constitute a thoroughly efficient fleet, one which could at all times be ready to do all which it may be called upon to do—to safeguard our world interests when called upon to stand the test of war. But certain general statements may be safely made.

Deficiencies in Types of Ships.

The first is that any navy, to be fully effective, should be composed of units which are in every class at least equal in every important feature to those possessed by foreign Powers, and of a number and character to operate offensively as well as defensively, in an efficient manner. A fleet cannot be restricted in operation to our own shores, but as it is the first and main line of defense, whose duty is not alone to prevent raids upon coast cities, but the landing of invading troops while military measures are being completed, and likewise to protect outlying possessions and our commercial marine, as well as to destroy an enemy's commerce, it must be able to proceed to sea in force and attack an enemy's fleet.

Individually, it must possess all the essential units—battleships of the line, fast battle crusiers, speedy scouts and light cruisers, effective torpedo boat destroyers, coast and sea-going submarines, supply, repair and hospital ships, and hydroaeroplanes—all in sufficient number and balance to co-operate properly in all offensive and defensive movements.

But we have no cruisers, for example, of the British Lion and Tiger class, no dreadnoughts of greater than about 22 knots speed, no very fast scouts or light cruisers, but few speedy destroyers, and a limited number of repair, supply and hospital ships, while our submarines, although they, as well as the large majority of fundamentally new departures in marine architecture and naval progress originated in the United States, are unworthy of the name.

We Must Build Speedier Ships.

Of course, any great fighting ship is necessarily a compromise, fr it is impossible that it shall at the same time be provided with the heaviest armor, carry the largest guns, and have the highest speed; but too little regard has been paid to this latter essential, for in many cases it must count enormously. Modern fighting will be carried on initially at 18,000 yards' range at least, and the ship which has the highest speed and gun power and the steadiest platform will have its antagonist at its mercy, provided its gunners are of equal ability. If two ships of equal strength and equipment wish to fight, speed is, of course, a matter of indifference for the time being, but if a ship can outrange another, or if she is clearly outclassed and should escape, or if a fleet is hastening to overtake an enemy squadron, or wishes to join one of its own kin to reinforce it against a superior enemy, or seeks to destroy fast enemy raiders or merchantmen, then in all these cases speed is vital.

But, despite many splendid examples of ships among those of our more recent construction, we are still sadly deficient in speed, and this no one knowing the facts can for a moment safely deny, nor the many breakdowns which so frequently and unhappily occur in ships of certain earlier classes.

And wherein lies largely the fault for our present lack of real allround preparedness? First and vitally, in the defects of our national policy as represented in Congress, and to some extent in the navy itself; in the utter lack of any consistent and intelligent scheme of naval expenditure and development consistent with the most ordinary regard for our national honor or safety, or our position in the world's family. Throughout the whole period of our national existence the navy, despite its splendid record, has often been the victim of congressional politics and incompetence and departmental conservatism; and at critical periods has only been redeemed, under conditions which can rarely be repeated, by the initiative and courage of individual naval commanders, aided sometimes by manifest failings on the part of the enemy.

Unhappily, the largeness of our country and the variety of its interests insure that many of the members of Congress are not in any sense national representatives. They are first of all politicians, the representatives of a local district or of class citizenship, the followers of a party, concerned primarily in how, by serving or by seeming to serve individual localities, they can maintain a hold on their jobs, often gotten by vocal exercises and jawful gymnastics. With sometimes a smattering of legal training, such a one is rarely possessed of constructive equipment, and in times of national crisis he is apt to be afflicted with intestinal flabbiness; but the public treasury is always a tempting trough to feed from and to plunder for any local want which will help keep him in office.

Pork System Is Harmful.

Reform or class legislation is apt to find in him an ardent advocate, while the sins of capitalistic corporations or individuals and the wrongs of the "honest and downtrodden" but vote-bestowing sons of toil and soil are favorite themes. If in times of naval activities his clientele possesses private shipyards, he may be in favor of construction of ships of the line, but if, instead, the local yard is limited to the construction of smaller craft, he is enthusiastic for destroyers or submarines. If from a farming district, then perhaps he may favor a nitrate plant at Government expense to compel the lowering of the price of Chilean saltpeter, and although really opposed to preparedness, is not averse to riding in on a patriotic wave which may demand a like provision for national defense.

Often the catspaw or representative of special interests he exemplifies the axiom that "the price of democracy is inefficiency," and as the persistent, dangerous and vociferous advocate of class legislation and the constant opponent of efficiency, he is one of the most abhorrent and dangerous of traitors to our country.

And then there is that anachronism in our form of government that, while it has wisely determined that the heads of all departments, as represented by Cabinet officers, shall be appointed by the President, that is, by civilian power, it often makes of the head of one of the most important of departments, with all its power for good or ill, indeed, the very safeguarding of our national existence, only the representative of a political party and administration, selected for reasons having no relation to the vital business of the Navy Department, and often at least but a temporary executive.

In no department of our Government is there a greater need of a continuously consistent policy without regard to the kaleidoscopic changes of party politics and exigencies, or where there is more need of an exceptional executive trained on the broadest business lines, whose function shall be to utilize to the utmost the recommendations of a duly constituted general staff representing the highest technical and strategic talent in the service, which at all times will be the accepted professional guide of the President and Secretary of the Navy.

In making these strictures it is not seemly nor would it be just for me to focus criticisms on any individuals, for the fault lies fundamentally with our body politic, and the responsibility with every party and with almost every administration.

Praise for Secretary Daniels.

The actions of the present Secretary of the Navy have been assailed with unusual bitterness, and perhaps no one knows better than himself the handicap of lack of experience against which he had to contend. But while there are many things with regard to which I personally differ from him, and some of them he knows, it is not fitting, nor is it my province or intention while a member of the Naval Consulting Board, to enter into any public discussion concerning these, and certainly not from any political reasons.

In fact, it is but proper to record my opinion that by establishing this Consulting Board, and especially in adopting the manner of selection of its members suggested to him, one absolutely free from political bias, Secretary Daniels has inaugurated one of the possibly most helpful departures in departmental practice.

At present the board, as is well known, has no official status. It exists simply by courtesy, and its members, entirely at their own expense, and without thought of remuneration, are in a spirit of disinterested loyalty gladly giving of their best in whatever way the Navy Department may desire. Without going into their individual activities one may mention the efforts to help establish a much needed Naval Research Laboratory and Experimental Station, the establishment of a plant for fixation of nitrogen, the improvement in aeronautics, education regarding gas engines and standardizing of these engines, and the garnering and classification of the munition manufacturing facilities of the country.

Whatever spasmodic attempt may now or at any time be made to rectify faults individual to every party and every administration, we will never have a fleet which as a whole will favorably compare in all-around power and efficiency until the country is aroused from its present complacent lethargy.

There should not only be advocated but demanded from Congress a broad, consistent, and rational scheme of preparedness based solely on the needs of the whole country, uninfluenced by politics or sectional prejudice, and destined to maintain at all times an adequate and thoroughly efficient fleet able to meet the danger of attack on both our coasts.

WHERE MUSIC IS SWEETEST

The Mason & Hamlin Piano AGAIN Conspicuously Honored

The Chicago Grand Opera Company has selected as its official Piano, year after year, the Celebrated MASON & HAMLIN. Would you know how great an honor this is, consider the long hours each individual star must spend in perfecting his role. And then bear in mind that as an accompanying instrument in all rehearsal work

The Mason & Hamlin Piano

Replaces the Grand Opera Orchestra

MASON & HAMLIN

No resounding climax of Wagnerian Music is beyond the compass of this marvelous instrument, while it answers in perfect pitch and singing tone the demands of the most flute-like passages. It is indeed the supreme achievement in Piano Building.

A Word to the Aspiring Musician

An inferior instrument levies a continual tax upon anyone who is thoroughly musical. It is not a help, but a handicap. If you would make the most out of your music this season—this month—NOW—let us suggest that you exchange your used instrument for "The Artists' Piano," one which is an aid and a real inspiration.

The Doctor's Advice

By Dr. Lewis Baker

Mrs. Belle C. writes: "I am informed that I have kidney trouble and that it is fast approaching a serious stage. What would you prescribe?"

Answer: If your symptoms are the usual ones, such as puffs under the eyes, swelling ankles, accompanied by headaches, pains, fever, chills, etc., I would advise the immediate use of balmwort tablets, a very fine remedy for such difficulties, sold in sealed tubes with full directions for self-administration.

James J. asks: "For several months I have not been feeling well. My skin is sallow, my tongue is coated, have headache, am sleepless, nervous and bothered with chronic constipation. Please help me."

Answer: You need a laxative blood cleansing treatment in the form of three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur). Overcome the tendency to constipation and gradually your good health and pure blood will return.

"Poor Nerves" writes: "Is it possible to find a medicine which by its tonic or nutritive powers will bring the glow of health and ambition back to a man who has everything in the world but health and happiness? I am dull, forgetful, despondent, weak, trembling, short of breath and suffer more or less with pain in spine and back of head."

Answer: Your condition indicates the need of a strong, harmless tonic nutritive to restore nerve-equilibrium, which in turn fortifies and strengthens the organs of nutrition, thus vitalizing the blood and promoting new cell and tissue to take care of the waste forces. Three-grain cadomene tablets, packed in sealed tubes with full directions, are recommended in all such cases.

"D. E. G., writes: "My rheumatism is getting worse all the time. I am getting so stiff that it makes it very hard for me to get around."

Answer: Do not worry about your rheumatism, as that can be very easily controlled by using the following: Get at the drug store the ingredients named, mix thoroughly and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again at bedtime and you should soon be entirely relieved of that disagreeable disease, rheumatism. Purchase 2 drams of iodide of potassium; ½ oz. of wine of colchicum; 4 drams of sodium salicylate; 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort; 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, and 5 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla. This has satisfied thousands and I am sure it will you.

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

C. J. R. asks: "Can I safely reduce my weight, and how?"

Answer: Go to a well-stocked druggist and get five-grain arbolone tablets in sealed tube with complete directions. Take as directed, and you should soon feel the relief you desire. Many of my patients report quick results without any harmful action whatever.

Ellen J. asks: "Tell me, please, how I can increase my weight and improve my color. I seem to be aenemic, weak and tired all the time."

Answer: Begin taking three-grain hyponuclane tablets with your meals and soon you will feel your strength returning and gradually your weight and color will improve. This is a most effective remedy if persistently used.

J. W. W. asks: "Can you prescribe a reliable treatment to get rid of dandruff, itching and feverish scalp?"

Answer: I know you can get instant relief and permanent results by using plain yellow minyol as per directions, which accompany each 4-oz. jar.

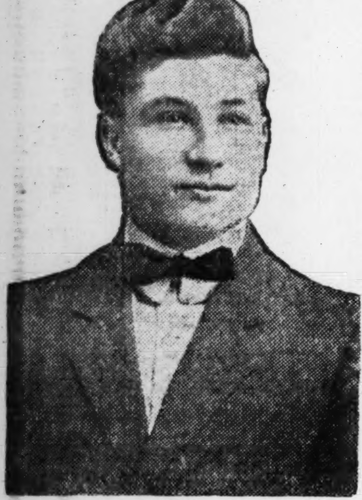
Increases Weight 25 Pounds

And Would Not Take One Hundred Dollars for His New-Found Flesh. Interesting Statement of Ohio Man.



"When I started taking Sargol," writes H. E. Henninger of Ohio, "my weight was only 135 pounds. Now I weigh 160 and am the picture of health. I would not take a hundred dollars for what it has done. I am stronger than I ever was before."

"When I began to take Sargol," writes R. T. Sivells, "I only weighed one hundred and thirty-nine pounds. Now my weight has increased to 151 pounds. Everybody says that I am getting so fat."

"I never felt better in my life since I have been taking Sargol. The first two weeks I gained 10 pounds and am gaining every day. Sargol makes me eat and sleep, and I don't get up with a tired feeling any more," writes J. C. Weaver, and N. D. Sanderson adds, "when I started Sargol I weighed 147 pounds and now I weigh 160 pounds. Everybody is telling me how fat you have got in the last month."

Would you, too, like to quickly put from 10 to 30 pounds of good, solid, "stay-there" flesh, fat and muscular tissue between your skin and bones?

Don't say it can't be done. Try it. Let us send you free a 50c package of Sargol and prove what it can do for you.

More than half a million thin men and women have gladly made this test, and that Sargol does succeed, does make thin folks fat even where all else has failed, is conclusively proven, in our opinion, by the tremendous business we have done. No drastic diet, flesh creams, massages, oils or emulsions, but a simple, harmless home treatment. Cut out the coupon and send for this Free package today, enclosing only 10 cents in silver to help pay postage, packing, etc.

Address the Sargol Co., 96-S Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y. Take Sargol with your meals and watch it work. This will tell the story.

This Wife and Mother Wishes To Tell You FREE How She Stopped Her Husband's Drinking

By all Means Write to Her and Learn how She did it.

For over 20 years Jas. Anderson of 331 Pearl Ave., Hillburn, N. Y., was a confirmed drunkard. His case was about as bad as it could be, but a little over twelve years ago his devoted wife, after years of trying, finally succeeded in stopping his drinking entirely.

Write to this woman if you have a relative or friend who drinks

Not only did she save Mr. Anderson but she stopped the drinking of her brother and several of her neighbors as well. All this she accomplished by simple home treatment which she now desires every man and woman who has a relative or friend who drinks, to know all about, for she feels that others can do just as she did.

The treatment can be given secretly if desired, and without cost she will gladly and willingly tell what it is. Therefore every reader of this notice who is interested in curing a dear one of drinking should write to Mrs. Anderson at once. Her reply will come by return mail in a sealed envelope. She does this gladly in hopes that others will be benefited as she was. One thing she asks however, and that is that you do not send money for she has nothing to sell. Simply address your letter with all confidence, to Mrs. Margaret Anderson at the address given above and she will reply by return mail in a sealed envelope.

(It is earnestly advised that every reader who wishes to stop a dear one's drinking to write to this lady today. Her offer is a sincere one. You can either use the coupon below or write her a letter, just as you prefer.)

MRS. MARGARET ANDERSON
631 Pearl Ave., Hillburn, N. Y.

Dear Madam: Please tell me how you stopped your husband from drinking. I am personally interested in one who drinks.

6 COUNTIES PLAN VOTE ON SAME DAY ON ROAD BONDS

Illinois Movement, if Successful, Will Bring Permanent Highway to East St. Louis.

A meeting of the six Illinois counties traversed by the Midland Trail road, a section of the ocean-to-ocean highway, will be held at Flora, Ill., at 11 a. m. next Friday for the purpose of forming an organization to have bond issue elections held simultaneously in the six counties.

The counties interested in the movement are St. Clair, Clinton, Marion, Clay, Richland and Lawrence.

The Mayors of all the towns on the Midland Trail, presidents and secretaries of commercial clubs, County Road Supervisors, newspapermen officials of good roads clubs and other citizens interested have been invited to attend the meeting.

James P. Wilson, member of the State Highway Commission, and Homer J. Till of Grand View, author of the new Illinois road law, will attend and deliver addresses.

The Midland trail when improved will bring a permanent road to East St. Louis. A movement is under way in Missouri to complete the improvement of the Old Trails highway between St. Louis and Kansas City. When these two roads are completed there will be a permanent road, passable at all seasons, from Kansas City to New York and Washington.

It is the plan of the good roads builders to permanently improve the road across the entire continent. Those who are promoting the proposition say that the completion of such a road would bring thousands of transients into St. Louis every year, and make it the most important point in the country for transcontinental automobile traffic.

Lord & Thomas Issue 1916 Advertising Directory.

Lord & Thomas, advertising agents of Chicago and New York, have just issued their American Press Advertising Directory for 1916. This directory is of the handy, pocket-edition size and contains an extensive list of newspapers, magazines, farm journals, religious papers, foreign language publications and other periodicals published in the United States, Canada, Porto Rico, Hawaiian and the Philippine Islands. This pocket directory is published by Lord & Thomas as an aid to the advertising space buyer. It contains not only the list of publications but gives the population of the cities where they are published, the party supported by the paper and the days of the week issued. The 1916 edition is the thirty-first volume.

"Divan-Bed" Open as a Bed

Divan-Bed Parlor Outfits

Are increasing in popularity every day on account of their comfort and practical value over the stiff furniture of the past—and, best of all, they combine double service, as they permit you to turn your parlor into a bedroom at any time that an extra bed is needed.

An Entirely New Design

This handsome Divan-Bed Parlor Outfit as illustrated above was made especially for the May-Stern stores—and is the product of one of the very best makers in America—by buying in extraordinary quantities, we have secured these outfits at a lower price than ever—and we gladly share this saving with you.

Golden or Fumed Oak Finish

Every bit of wood in this set is selected oak and every piece is as solid as the oak tree itself—it is finished in choice of golden oak or fumed oak that will harmonize with the decorations in your best room and always present a rich and most attractive appearance.

Each Piece Handsomely Upholstered

The Divan-Bed Davenport, Arm Chair and Arm Rocker are upholstered in the finest quality of imitation Spanish leather—that matches the finish of the wood and will not show dust or wear as other upholstering does—the spring seat construction is the best—it is soft and resilient but made to stand the hardest usage.

The Divan-Bed Davenport

In the daytime this is a handsome Divan—by two simple operations it can be converted into a full-length bed—the bedding can remain under the seat and comes into position when the divan-bed is opened—has full set of comfortable bed springs just like an ordinary bed—a feature that all housewives will appreciate.

The Library Table

Which is included in this set is full size—has 24x36-inch top and broad lower shelf for books and magazines—it is extra strong and massive—and helps immensely to round out and complete this extremely handsome and practical set.

Note Our Special Price, $39.75

We positively guarantee to refund your money if this outfit can be purchased anywhere else in St. Louis at this special price—in style, quality and value we know this set is worth $50.00—and your own inspection and comparison will convince you that every word we say is true.

Note the Terms

All you pay is $2.50 cash and all four pieces will be delivered to your home at once—and you can use and enjoy this handsome outfit while you are paying the balance on small payments of $2.50 a month—an example of the liberal credit terms we offer on everything you need to furnish a home.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD TELLS HOW ENGLAND'S WOMEN POUR SHELLS INTO THE BIG GUNS

Noted Novelist Explains the "Dilution" System, by Which Unskilled Women and Men Do Skilled Work Under Direction of Trained Mechanicians Who Keep the Machines in Order.

By MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.

Noted English novelist who wrote "Robert Elsmere," "Lady Rose's Daughter," "The Case of Richard Meyville" and many other famous stories.

IT is now some months since Mr. Lloyd George made his startling speech, as Munitions Minister, in the House of Commons in which, as he wound up his review of his department, he declared, "Unless we quicken our movements, damnation will fall on the sacred cause for which so much gallant blood has flowed!" The passion of this peroration was like the fret of a river in flood chafing at some obstacle in its course. Generally speaking, the obstacle gives way. In this case Mr. Goarge's obstacle had begun to give way long before the date of the speech. The flood had been pushing at it with increasing force since the foundation of the Ministry of Munitions in the preceding summer. But the crumbling process was not quick enough for Great Britain's needs, or for the energy of her Minister.

Hence the outspoken speech, supported by Mr. Asquith's grave words a few weeks later.

"We cannot go on," said the Prime Minister in effect, "depending upon foreign countries for our munitions. We haven't the ships to spare to bring them home, and the cost is too great. We MUST make them ourselves." "Yes and—QUICKER!" Mr. Lloyd George had already said, with a sharp emphasis, meant to "hustle" that portion of the nation which still required hustling; overpainting this picture, no doubt, but with quite legitimate rhetoric, in order to produce his effect.

The result of that fresh "hustling" was the appointment of the Dilution Commissioners, a second Munitions Act amending the first, and a vast expansion all over the country of the organization which had seemed so vast before.

Praises England's Loyal Workingmen and Unions

IN the spring of 1915, the executives of the leading Trade Unions had promised the Government the relaxation of their trade rules for the period of the war. Many of the Trade Union leaders—Mr. Barnes, Mr. Henderson, Mr. Hodge and many others — have worked magnificently in this sense. And many unions have been thoroughly loyal throughout their ranks to the pledge given in their name. The iron moulders, the shipwrights, the brass workers may be especially mentioned. But in the trades mostly concerned with ammunition, there were certain places and areas where the men themselves, as distinct from their responsible leaders, offered a dogged, though often disguised resistance. Personally, I think that anyone at all accustomed to try and look at labor questions from the point of view of labor will understand the men while heartily sympathizing with the Minister, who was determined to get "the goods," and has succeeded in getting them.

Here, in talking of "the men," I except that small revolutionary element among them which has no country, and exists in all countries. And I except, too, instances which certainly are to be found, though rarely, of what one might call a purely mean and over-reaching temper on the part of workmen—taking advantage of the nation's need, as some of the less responsible employers have no doubt, also, taken advantage of it. But in general, it seems to me, there has been an honest struggle in the minds of thousands of workmen between what appears to them the necessary protection of their standards of life—laborously attained through long effort—and the call of the war. And that the overwhelming majority of the workmen concerned with munitions should have patriotically and triumphantly decided this struggle as they have—under pressure, no doubt, but under no such pressure as exists in a conscripted, still more in an invaded, nation—may rank, I think, when all is said with the raising of our voluntary armies as another striking chapter in the book of England's Effort."

In this article, then, "Dilution" will always take a leading place.

What is "dilution?"

It means, of course, that under the sharp analysis of necessity, much engineering work, generally reckoned as "skilled" work, and reserved to "skilled" workmen, by a number of union regulations, is seen to be capable of solution into various processes, some of which can be sorted out among the unskilled or semi-skilled worker. By so dividing them up and using the superior labor with economy, only where it is really necessary, it can be made to go infinitely further; and the inferior or untrained labor can then be brought into work where nobody supposed it could be used, where, in fact, it never had been used.

> WHAT is "dilution?" By so dividing them up and using the superior labor with economy, only where it is really necessary, it can be made to go infinitely further; and the inferior and untrained labor can then be brought into work, where nobody supposed it could be used, where in fact, it never had been used.—MRS. HUMPHRY WARD.*

Obvious enough, perhaps. But the idea had to be applied in haste to living people—employers, many of whom shrank from reorganizing their workshops and changing all their methods at a moment's notice; and workmen looking forward with consternation to being outnumbered, by 10 to 1, in their own workshops, by women. When I was in the Midlands and the North, dilution was still an unsettled question in some of the most important districts. One of the greatest employers in the country writes to me today: "We have passed through several critical moments, but, eventually, the principle was accepted, and dilution is being introduced as fast as convenient. For this we have very largely to thank an admirable commission which was sent down to interview employers and employed. Their tact and acumen were remarkable. Speaking personally, I cannot help believing that there is a better understanding between masters and men now than has existed in my memory."

Solved Problem by Taking Labor Men Into Confidence

IT will be readily seen how much depends on the tact of the individual employer. The employer has constantly done best who has called his men into council with him and thrown himself on their patriotism and good sense. I take the following passage from an interesting report by a very shrewd observer:

"I was told by the Ministry that I should have to double my output Labor was scarce and I consulted a deputation of the men about it. I told them the problem and said I should be glad of suggestions. I told them that we should either have to get men or women, and I asked them for their co-operation, as there would be a great deal of teaching to be done. 'Probably,' I said, 'you would

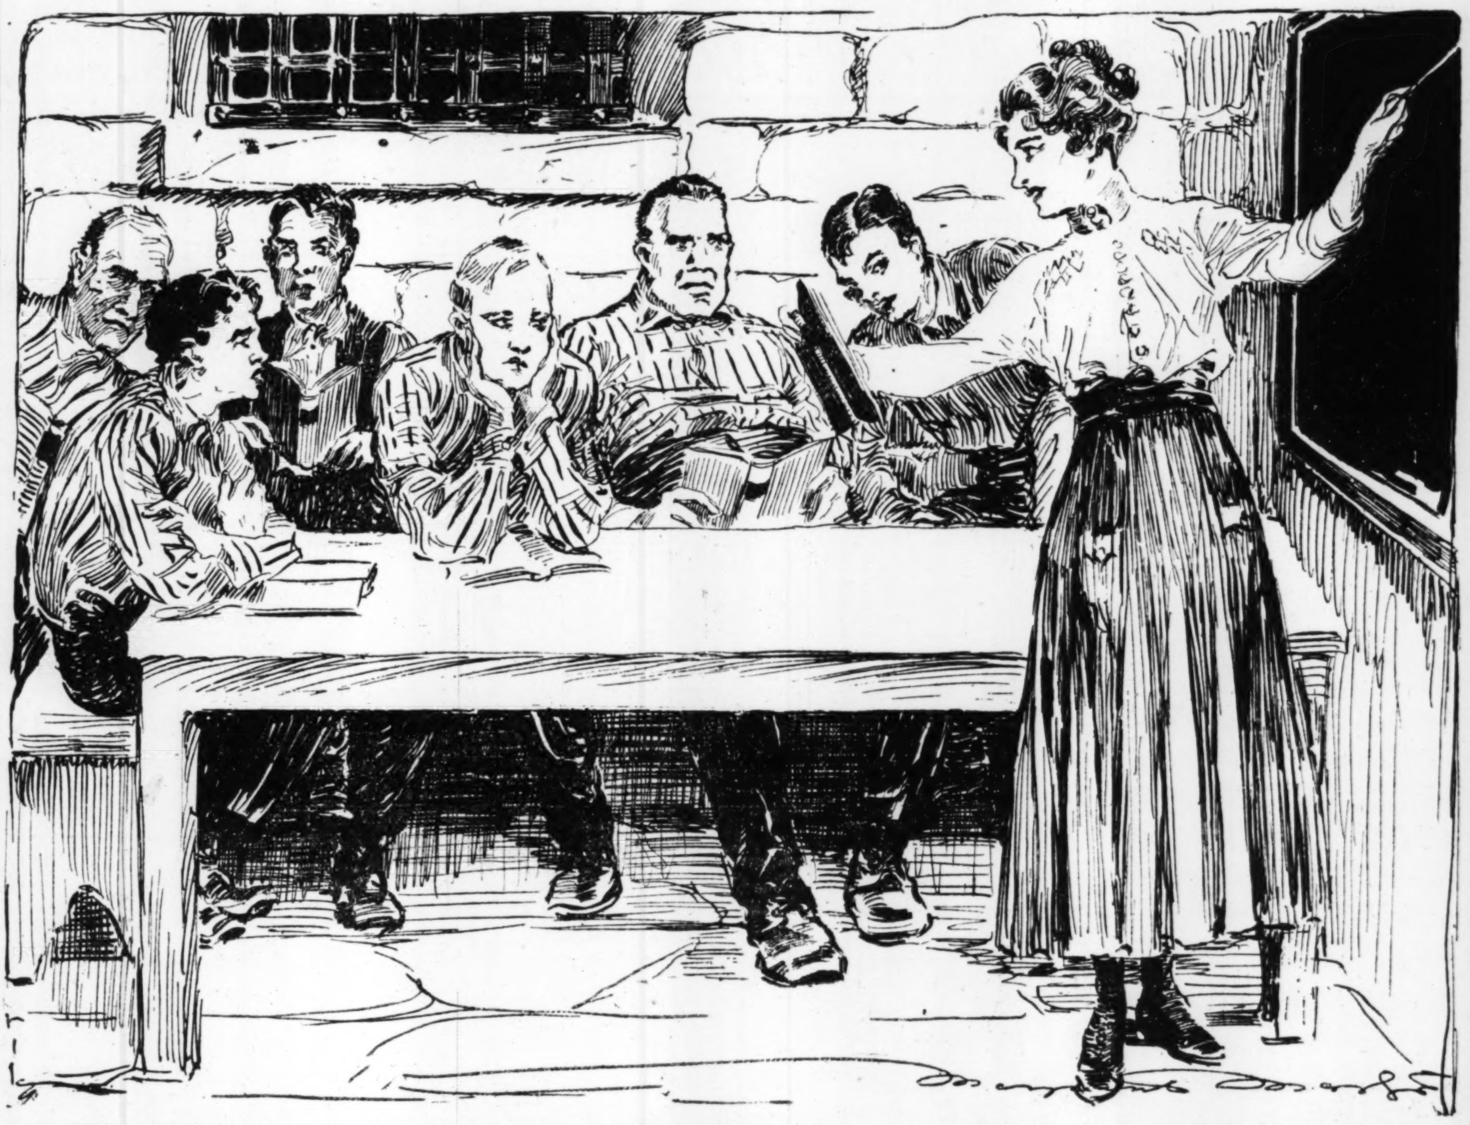
Men in Workhouse Eager to Study in Night School After Working in Quarry All Day

Marguerite Martyn Sees Them Struggling Desperately With Their Primer Tasks



"With some evidently it was curiosity toward an experience strange and new. Some watched for a chance to display superior knowledge, to show off before their fellows. Some were frankly eager to embrace an opportunity to learn something and others welcomed the once-a-week schools as a break in the dreary routine of rock breaking."

Public School Teachers, Interested Solely in Uplifting Men Who Have Fallen Into Criminal Ways, Have Undertaken This Work Without Hope of Other Pay Than the Satisfaction That Comes From Helping a Fellow Man.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

"WILL the members of the class please write their names?" the teacher asked.

It was a strange school, none other being conducted under quite the same conditions, I believe.

All the pupils were full-grown men and they were studying for the most part elemental schoolbooks. They were ranged at tables of thick, rough boards that glistened from the effect of scrubbing, five men at each of 12 tables. The doors and windows of the schoolroom were powerfully barred and a stout, rather menacing-looking guardsman stood on duty outside.

The teachers—there was nothing unusual about them. They were eight in number, several well known in the service of the public schools by day—but this was a night school. They were Mrs. Atlanta Hecker, Miss Helena Marshal, Miss Anna R. Waney, Miss Walsh, Miss Byrne and Miss Cheney.

In one corner of the room three colored women, Miss Buckner, Miss Simms and Mrs. Campbell, instructing the colored pupils, were not the least "schoolmarmish" looking of the teaching force, for all their difference in color.

But the pupils—they were the part of the school that defies assortment, classification, description. There were dark-visaged, heavy-shouldered, snarling, sinister-looking bullies, with perpetual sneers graven upon their faces. And there were wide-eyed, dimple-cheeked youths. There were the nervous and fidgety, the slow-moving, dull and heavy-witted, the sulky, the mischievous, prankish and sly. There were the shifty-eyed and others who cowered like dumb, driven beasts. There were the rough and uncouth and the weak, spineless ones.

There was an attempt at uniformity in clothes, for they all wore coarse cotton shirts of one striped pattern. But the evening was cool and a ragged waistcoat or a good cloth coat or sweater upset that uniformity. They all wore partly-wornout shoes that were uniformly powdered with stone-colored dust.

Yes, School Is in Workhouse.

"YES, there you have your clew. The dust was from the city quarries, the school is in the city workhouse and the pupils are inmates serving sentences therein.

A great deal is being done by way of reclaiming criminals through reform of the ancient penal system, and there are all sorts of reform schools hereabouts, but no attempt had been made toward education at the workhouse except by means of breaking rock. It may be due to the transitoriness of residence there that the inauguration of any consecutive study work had not been seriously enough considered to be given actual trial. A year there is the longest sentence inflicted for one charge, I believe. But the stay may be prolonged a year for each additional charge, so that it is possible and in several cases a fact that prisoners are serving time enough in which to complete a college course.

Besides, there are workhouse habitues whose absences in freedom usually are so short-lived as scarcely to interfere with any consecutive work taken up there.

It has been one of Supt. Primavesi's pet theories that time spent in the workhouse could be employed with profit to the institution in other ways besides on the rock pile.

Teachers Are Volunteers.

CIVIC workers have suggested that a laundry be established there in which the towels and bathing suits from the playgrounds and bathhouses might be more economically cleaned. But nothing had been done except rock breaking until Mrs. Hecker, well known for her work in the public schools, later at the Industrial School and at present in her own private school, asked two teacher friends to join her, solicited and obtained from the School Board books, pencils and materials in a spirit of pure altruism, without pay, established and has been conducting on Friday evenings, for several weeks past, this school.

I had heard of the success of the experiment, asked to see it in operation, with the result that I spent an evening at the workhouse, a more profitable evening that I ever would have expected to spend in those grim buildings near the river on South Broadway.

Beyond the costume there were two other significant notes of uniformity in the most motley crowd I'd ever seen assembled. Without exception, every countenance shone from recent contact with soap and razor and every head was neatly brushed. And without exception there was attentiveness. You could have heard a pin drop when a teacher addressed herself to the whole school.

Cries Because He Cannot Write.

BUT to return to my opening paragraph, which was the first question put by Mrs. Hecker to her school. The men set to work to comply with the request to write their names. Some quickly finished with an air and a flourish. Others bent long and painfully over an unaccustomed task. There was one tall, rugged, heavy-shouldered black man who sat idle. He looked about, indifferent at first, then, seeing that he was the only man among the 60 who was not even attempting to sign his name, he looked bewildered. Something very like tears stood in his faded eyes and flashed forth like quicksilver against the black background as they trickled down his face.

"I cannot write my name," he said. He is 55 years old, it was learned, has lived always in Georgia, where he worked in the cotton fields, and here, in the latest stage of his degradation, in the workhouse, had come the first opportunity of his life to go to school, he said.

Five weeks ago he did not know the letters of the alphabet. On the evening of my visit I saw the same black man's stiff fingers trace laboriously but accurately his name, Charles Rogers, and heard him read a page out of the middle of a first reader as the result of five Friday nights' lessons.

There had to be just one exception to prove the rule of attentiveness. To see the words of a familiar song written on the blackboard, "Suwanee River," "Tipperary" or "A Song at Twilight," and to follow the baton of the director, Miss Marshal, the men had to turn all the way around in their seats. Only one man kept his face straight forward and was stubbornly silent. He was a red-faced, tow-headed lad, stocky, with a short neck and head bent upon his chest, just from habit. He had small, slender artistic hands as a sole claim to beauty.

A Stubborn Youth's Tactics.

THE same sullen indifference he took pains to display when it came his turn to read in the reading class. He passed the book on. Nobody paid any attention to his attitude. Other books were passed him several times until finally he seized one and read aloud until he had to be stopped from monopolizing too much time. Miss Waney was his teacher. Approaching him while the others were busy at examples, she said:

"Why do you take this stubborn attitude? Do you not feel a little appreciation of the efforts of these teachers who come down here to help you? Why do you come to the school if you don't want to take part?"

(Attendance at the school is optional with the prisoners.)

"Ah, well," he said, drawing his head down more, "my mind is a thousand miles away from here."

"A thousand miles? Where?" asked Miss Waney.

"Down on Second street with my folks," he said bitterly. But presently, unable longer to restrain his pride in his accomplishment, he relented and almost smiling, said: "I pretty near read the whole book through this time, didn't I?"

I was told I need not, on the ground of delicacy, curb my curiosity as to what charge any of the penance doers had been committed for. The most ferocious looking one will have an innocent excuse to offer for himself. So I approached one bland-looking youngster, who looked safe enough.

"You don't look so very bad," said I. "What were you sent herefor?"

It was his second term, he told me, and I was shocked. "But, no'm, I ain't so very bad," said he. "I broke my parole. I was pledged to be in off the streets by 9 o'clock, and one evening I was

Noted French Educator Says Our Neutrality Is Based on Narrow Ideal

Director-General of Public Instruction Explains in Article Written for Readers at Home That, in Our Love of Peace and Our Grasp of Commercial Opportunity We Fail to See That Frenchmen and Englishmen Are Dying to Insure Our Security.

(Emil Hovalaque, Director eGneral of Public Instruction of France, one of the highest educational posts under the French Government, is married to a New York woman, a daughter of the late Gov. Higgins. He is a Fellow of the University of Paris and president of the well-known society, Autor du Monde. His familiarity with American dates back 16 years. This remarkable article appeared in France in La Revue de Paris, and is republished here by M. Hovalaque's consent.)

By EMILE HOVELAQUE.
Director General of Public Instruction in France.

LAST April I was requested to deliver some lectures in San Francisco. I took the longest route. From New York to Boston and Philadelphia, to Baltimore and Washington, from New Orleans to Los Angeles and San Francisco, from Portland to Seattle, Duluth, Minneapolis and St. Paul, from Chicago to Cleveland and Buffalo, I allowed my curiosity to lead me, and I sought the answer to an enigma which even my American friends themselves could not solve. It was my fourth visit to that extraordinary country, a land so enthralling that one can never tire of studying it. In the family of nations, it stands apart; and the soul which it is forming unto itself may well be the soul of a new mankid.

On the boat which brought us over Americans were in the majority. All without exception were for France. * * * One day the shock of an unforeseen emotion overthrew all reserve and tore from some of them words that revealed their souls. The wireless abruptly told of the sinking of the Lusitania and of the loss of American lives. A sturdy American business man was returning from Switzerland with his children. "Will you always remain a neutral?" I asked. "This is a damned business," he answered. "Of course one can always forgive anything to a man who succeeds. One can't help admiring a man who really does things. But Germany isn't strong enough to get away with it, and this sinking is a bad break."

It was the naive confession of a faith which I well knew existed, and of which, also, I have since heard many expressions, the touching revelation of a creed, the creed of success, and of a universaly accepted gospel, the gospel of power. The horror which this father of a family felt at the crimes of the Germans, drowning women and children, at the very moment when he was all upset by it, did not quite blot out his secret admiration for German power, and the unconscious baseness of his reply was but the expression of one of the very essences of his being.

American Idea Differs Greatly From Those of Other Nations

THE American idea — whose subtle presence one feels from the moment of landing—is strangely different from the ideas which bring together and move people in our country. Really one feels one's self in another world, far removed from France by character than by space. New York, Chicago, Denver, San Francisco, are much more foreign to me than Constantinople or Naples. I recognize a new type of human being in these men who outwardly look like us, who dress like us and who speak a familiar tongue. But not only is the tone of it changed, its very values have been modified. Some words which have an irresistible appeal to us seem with them to be without strength; others seem to have taken on a deep meaning unknown to us. And beneath the surface what ideas, what views do they really share with us? Has distance lessened certain realities and given greater prominence to others? What do these eyes which are looking from afar see of this war?

For the distance is very great. That is one of the major impressions New York gives. After the calm dreadness of Paris in wartime, the loud colors of New York, the almost intolerable brilliance of its bustling life, ring false and are oppressive. Is it possible that yonder in a darkened Europe millions of human beings are suffering and dying, are being killed and tortured? Is it possible that rape and arson and massacre are rife, that the very flower of the older races is being cut down; that the liberty of men and the destinies of mankind are at stake over there, and that here nothing has changed? Are these not human beings like ourselves? It is all right to say that this war is not their war, that it quickens rather than injures their life, that the miseries and losses of this war are to these crowds but a source of wealth and power; their palpable indifference wounds.

> THESE idealists, in the simple-mindedness of their souls, do not see that they fail to differentiate between the assassin and his victim; that they extend their universal kindness alike to the criminal and to the innocent; to Germany as well as to Belgium; to Austria as well as to Servia. But Germany itself is opening their eyes. When at last their eyes are opened, these idealists will see that Right cannot be defended by words alone, that a mad dog cannot be put out of the way by arguments but only by blows; and they will perhaps combat the policy of blood and iron with something more effective than sweet words. I do not despair of seeing the America of 1776 come to life again. And then perhaps the United States will find itself alongside of France fighting under the same flag as she did 135 years ago in the same holy cause of liberty and civilization—EMILE HOVELAQUE.*

Our Intense Life Responsible for Handicap in Vision

HOWEVER, one sees very quickly that to the elite of the nation this war is an awful and crushing reality; some of them are going through it with all of our own agony of spirit. * * * Little by little, before the welcome which everywhere awaits a Frenchman, one takes heart. Among all the occupations and exactions of this furious life which cannot but follow the irresistible current of its being, one is thankful that a few moments, a few hours, of sincere thought, are dedicated to us. They are enough. Little by little one begins to unravel from this confusion certain factors which may have been guessed at, but were not so easy to see clearly from Europe. One sees that the absorbing demands of this intense life and the effects of distance are not the only reasons which explain certain lukewarmnesses, creating indifferences. Even among the elite it is clear that all sympathies do not go equally among the allies, and that in some quarters there is no sympathy for some of them.

If in the United States France has almost nothing but friends, this is not at all the case with England and Russia. First one discovers with astonishment that among certain Americans of pure Anglo-Saxon descent there is little love for England. In the history of every country some other nation has to play the role of hereditary foe. It is part of the stage setting necessary to a people's life. And in the United States it is England that has played this role. * * * But there is even less sympathy for our other ally, Russia. Innumerable Jews have brought into the United States tales of pogroms and a deep hatred for the Russian aristocracy. Intelligent and hard working as they are, the Jews control a part of the press, and all the weight of their influence is thrown against Russia. The German propaganda takes clever advantage of their feelings and furnishes extraordinary accounts of Russian atrocities to the newspapers.

Even for France the feeling of friendship has not always been as deep as it is today, notwithstanding the almost universal veneration in which Lafayette, Rochambeau and our soldiers of freedom are held. France is doubtless looked upon as the great sister democracy; her ideals are the ideals of America; she is chivalrous and openhanded; to all Americans she is the most refined and cultivated of nations, a land of science, of art and of elegance, a museum of architecture, and, to use their own words, "The playground of the world," a land where every American hopes to travel and even live. But to the Puritans and the bigots that have remained France is Catholic or atheist, immoral and trifling. Hackneyed phrases of criticism, unjust and even ridiculous superstitions are continually rained upon her. Of our literature and our life Americans know little, alas, except the things that lend color to their false ideas, which are too often strengthened by our mania of self-criticism. Also to these admirers of German efficiency, of the wonderful results of German organization, our business methods and industrial processes seem old-fashioned and our economic decadence appears certain. They doubt whether we shall win out in the end, and winning out is the only thing that counts with them.

The position and the Constitution of the United States brings into its life problems and difficulties peculiar to it; and the consciousness of its national personality forms an ideal which is the American ideal. From Washington on, under Jefferson and Monroe and Lincoln, the tendencies, the doctrines of this purely American idea take form; narrow, practical and positive in the domain of international affairs, but broadly human and full of a longing for greater liberty, greater fraternity, greater equality, greater kindness and greater light in the internal life of America.

Likewise, under the influence of their surroundings and of pressing needs, the dissemination of education and of this American idea goes on with the same dual tendency. They must inspire the millions of newcomers, of children who are born, with the things that America stands for; they must inspire them with patriotism and they must nourish their minds; but they must also, and first of all, equip them to earn their daily bread. And the character of American education, just like the character of American politics, is a blend of materialistic and idealistic tendencies, a blend of the highest aspirations and the most practical considerations. All the forces of the development and life of these people crystalize in the formation of a state of mind where concrete realities are always more important than abstract generalities; where practical and positive ends with quick and immediate results are always of more importance than disinterested considerations and the higher destinies of mankind, a state of mind where the daily cares and necessities of individual progress and of individual initiative weaken collective action, even municipal action and state action and national action itself.

How can the citizens who look on with indifference at the looting of his city treasury, who takes so little real interest in the life of his nation that his only part in it is once every four years when he gives up a few days to politics to vote for a president, how can these "half-baked" citizens—the expression is current in America—who cannot unite even to defend their own interests, how could they suddenly find a collective energy to intervene in a far off and complicated European quarrel, in the presence of which their ignorance leaves them without enlightenment, their imagination without precise and imperative reasons of action.

Essentially Somewhat Unimaginative

They are essentially somewhat unimaginative; they are docile in the hands of leaders who have made of politics a trade, and their president has told them to remain neutral. By interest, by idealism, by the religion of humanity which is their religion, they are anti-militarists and pacificists; the war appears to them the supreme barbarism, a stupid and inhuman method of settling differences; and in the midst of universal madness they wish to keep their heads and to preserve in this de-

SAYS HOT WATER EACH DAY KEEPS THE DOCTOR AWAY

Drink glass of hot water before breakfast to wash out the poisons.

Physicians the world over recommend the inside bath, claiming this is of vastly more importance than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing ill health, while the pores in the ten yards of bowels do.

Men and women are urged to drink each morning, before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, as a harmless means of helping to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, poisons, bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Just as soap and hot water cleanse and freshen the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the eliminative organs.

Those who wake up with bad breath, coated tongue, nasty taste or have a dull, aching head, sallow complexion, acid stomach; others who are subject to bilious attacks or constipation, should obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to demonstrate the value of inside bathing. Those who continue it each morning are assured of pronounced results both in regard to health and appearance. —ADV.

mented world at least one place of peace and wisdom where reason still reigns and where an impartial tribunal may one day disentangle the war-crazed nations earing at one another like wild beasts, when exhaustion shall have placed them in the impossibility of continuing the fight.

For the first time since the birth of man a nation and a country have sprung into existance not by slow, mysterious growth through countless hesitations and unconscious adaptation, but of a whole piece, in broad daylight, grown to manhood in a day, without childhood, without youth, without dreams without the mysterious underpinnings which give to the life of other nations a permanent foundation and assure to them an ill-defined reserve of instinctive energy. But it is certain that such people, so new and so simple, are lacking in some of the impulses—the most reasoning and most instinctive to be sure, but on that very account the most potent—which at certain times make a whole nation act like a single man, urged by common traditions and feelings.

The Dangers of Intervention.

Neither in its domestic life * * * nor in the political traditions left by Washington, Jefferson, Monroe, Lincoln and the fathers of its Constitution, does the United States find any impulse, either of reason or of experience, which would push it to an action that the prudence of its citizens has condemned in advance. * * * The consequence of so new a departure in American politics would be incalculable, and no nation lightly breaks with all the traditions of its past, nor can it in one day forget all the superstitions of its political life. Besides, the dangers of intervention would not only be worldwide, they would also be domestic. The Union itself of the United States, so dearly bought by the Civil War, would run the risk of breaking up in a war in which Americans would inevitably find in the ranks of the enemy—no matter who he be—their own parents.

Furthermore, considerations of self-interest strengthen the counsels of prudence. America must not permit the escape of this unique opportunity to become the leading commercial, industrial and financial power of the world. Intervention would not only be perilous, but it would be infinitely costly. Besides, what would America gain by it? Nothing. It would be ineffective. The United States has no army and their navy counts but for little. And if one cannot intervene to some purpose what is the good of protesting? What is the meaning of an academic protest with nothing substantial behind it? The practical common sense of the American who believes in hard facts refuses to lend itself to such empty monkeyshines. And even if America could wage war with some chance of success, what would be the good of war? What did war ever end? And here again the common sense of the average American justifies his prudent attitude and strengthens his idealism which condemns all war. In the interest of Europe itself, of mankind, America must refuse to enter into the fatal path from which there is no issue, for war creates war and inextinguishable and fratricidal hate.

"A German's Impractical Dream."

It is sometimes more difficult to bear an insult than to avenge it, and at times "a man may be too proud to fight," as President Wilson himself has said, and surely when he said it he had in mind that American idealism born of the brotherly love of the early Puritans, of the comradeship of the pioneers, of the human solidarity which prompts the public benefactions of the billionaires, of the broad welcome that America extends to the immigrant; he had in mind that American idealism which is a deep religious feeling, a feeling all things contribute to form and to fortify because that idealism, that all-embracing brotherhood in liberty and peace, is looked upon by Americans as the product of their own soil, as the new type of humanity shaped by them and which all the world must adopt. * * * And thus, however paradoxical it may seem, it is by idealism as much as by interest, more than by interest, that America abstains from intervention, and, as always, in all its reactions, we find inextricably blended here again practical considerations and mystical aspirations.

A dream! A generous but as yet wholly impractical dream. The narrow vision of an abstract idealism which, like the idealism of the Socialists, takes no account of the infinite complexities of life and of a world which is not their world. These idealists, in the simple mindedness of their souls, do not see they fail to differentiate between the assassin and his victim; that they extend their universal kindness alike to the criminal and to the innocent; to Germany as well as to Belgium, to Austria as well as to Servia. * * * But Germany itself is opening their eyes. When at last their eyes are opened these idealists will see that right cannot be defended by words alone, that a mad dog cannot be put out of the way by arguments, but only by blows; and they will perhaps combat the policy of blood and iron with something more effective than sweet words. I do not despair of seeing the America of 1776 come to life again. And then perhaps the United States will find itself alongside of France, fighting under the same flag as she did 150 years ago in the same holy cause of liberty and civilization from which the promised land can[illegible]ord to stand selfishly aloof, snug [illegible] wealth wrung from our sufferings, [illegible] its inglorious security for which our blood is shed in torrents without a drop of theirs mingling with it.

ORCHESTRA CLUB CONCERT

Nonprofessionals to Give Program Thursday Night.

The St. Louis Orchestra Club, under the direction of Frank Gecks, will give a concert Thursday night at the Soldan High School Auditorium, with Mrs. Oliver Tyson Covington, contralto, as soloist.

The orchestral program will include Schubert's overture to "Rosamunde," the Allegretto from Beethoven's Seventh Symphony, Tschaikowsky's "Casse Noisette," and Mendelssohn's "Hebrides" overture. Mrs. Covington, with Hugo Anschuetz at the piano, will sing and Cavatina and Aria from Meyerbeer's "Der Prophete," and a group of songs. The club consists of nearly 100 nonprofessional musicians, and the proceeds of the concerts are used for the purchase of music.

Men in Workhouse Eager Pupils in the Night School

on my way home, just a few minutes after 9, when I met a cop. He ran me in and they sent me back here for another year."

Makes Boxes of Stone.

Of a three-termer, that is, one who has to serve a year for each of three charges, I asked:

"What do you do on the evenings you don't have school?"

"Why, I have the privilege of bringing in some tools," said he, "and I have been making stone boxes. I have just made a very pretty one. It is heart-shaped and has a round place hollowed out for the powder puff."

Fancy, working in stone for diversion after having pounded rock all day. I thought he had made the most of opportunities for improvement in the only knowledge to be acquired, heretofore at the workhouse.

A noteworthy feature was the fact that, although several of the teachers are young, prepossessing and more lenient looking, the most popular teacher is Miss Marshal, who said herself she thought she would be too severe and distant looking to ingratiate herself with the unruly type.

The pupils are allowed to decide which teacher they will have and Miss Marshal has the largest class.

As we women arriving in a body after the school had assembled were removing our hats and wraps, a pupil at a nearby table was overheard to say, "Why, I thought they were not taking off their hats at 'affairs' this year."

His neighbor gave him an awful punch in the ribs and said: "shut up!"

But the bit of levity, promptly squelched, was the only breach of deference shown the teachers, so far as I could observe.

All was not gloom and melancholy, for youth and easy consciences were present with bitterness and remorse. There was, however, the invariable rule of interest and attentiveness.

Undoubtedly many different motives actuate this attentiveness.

With some evidently it was curiosity toward an experience strange and new. Some watched for a chance to display superior knowledge, to show off before their fellows. Some were frankly eager to embrace an opportunity to learn something. And others welcomed the once-a-week schools as a festivity, a break in the dreary routine of rock breaking.

There were many whose state of learning did not very greatly exceed that of poor Rogers'. Others who never will advance, for it is contended that 50 per cent of delinquents are defective. There were three among the men who had had university experience and several who had been to high school. These may add little to their store of book learning from the comparatively simple lessons offered by this course. But that 60 men out of 300 at the workhouse crowd into the school room voluntarily—and I am told others desire to attend if there were room—bespeaks a need and an appreciation teaching does not always meet with everywhere. Half a dozen of the bolder miscreants even surrounded the woman when school had dismissed and said: "We certainly do thank you ladies for coming down here to help us."

The good teachers are elated and say they feel fully repaid for their labors by appreciation shown by these unfortunates in many signs.

But Mrs. Hecker expects to change her residence to the county shortly, and she hopes that, having got the thing started, the Board of Education may be persuaded of this need for a school and so take charge, as is done at the Industrial Farm, making the night school at the Workhouse permanent.

MRS. PANKHURST ENLISTING WOMEN IN MUNITION MAKING

LONDON, April 22.—On the authority of a Ministry of Munitions official it may be stated that Mrs. Pankhurst and her suffragette followers, whose newspaper recently was suppressed, were enlisted in the cause of promoting the employment of women in munitions work.

A statement to this effect was elicited in the House of Commons when a member named Ginnell asked for information as to the total cost to the state of the last women's demonstration, organized by suffragettes and addressed by the Minister of Munitions, and to whom the principal payments were made.

Dr. Addison of the Ministry Staff, replying, said that the demonstration was a part of the general campaign to get women's aid in munitions making, that as such it was extraordinarily successful, and that the expenditures would be charged against the vote for the Ministry of Munitions.

GERMAN WAR PRISONER CAUGHT TRYING TO TUNNEL WAY OUT

British Officer Traps Lieutenant as He Emerges From the Hole.

HOLYPORT, England, April 22.—Lieut. Freiherr von Grote, a German naval officer and a war prisoner, has been convicted of attempting to escape. He pleaded guilty before a courtmartial. He had been trapped in the tunnel he and some of his fellow prisoners were digging.

Adjutant R. Armstrong, a prison camp official, testified to having had his suspicions aroused by seeing captive officers entering a bedroom, and a close watch was set upon them. Von Grote, he says, remained in the room and was seen to enter a tunnel and close the boards over its mouth. He then entered the room and trapped the prisoner. When the latter finally returned from the tunnel he affected surprise, the witness said, and asked where he (the witness) had come from.

You Must Be Sure to See Our Summer Furniture Display

We are devoting a large section of our Furniture Shop to the display of Summer Furniture—for both indoors and outdoors, and nowhere will you find an assortment so thoroughly satisfying in variety, designs and price.

The "Old Hickory" Pieces

Prominent in the display are many "Old Hickory" pieces, and you will find set up a complete "Old Hickory" Arbor. It is built in the old log style and fitted at each side of entrance with a comfortable seat.

We also have the popular Old Hickory "General Jackson" Chairs and Rockers to match.

The Black and White

The new Black-and-white Furniture is very attractive, and is especially desirable for sun parlors, bedrooms, etc.

Other Summer Pieces

In addition we have Kaltax, Old Ivory and all of the staple kinds of Furniture for porch and lawn.

The Natural Willow

Natural Willow Furniture is preferred by many, and we show it in Chairs, Rockers, Swings and Chaise Lounges.

Other Willow Pieces

We also have a pretty display of gray, Pompeian and black-finished Willow Furniture, nicely upholstered in pretty cretonnes.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a 50-cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—ADV.

CAN'T ARBITRATE WITH GERMANY, TAFT DECLARES

American Lives Are Involved and Issue Must Be Settled Now, He Says.

ADDRESS IN CHICAGO

Declares English Violations Involve Only Property and Can Be Settled by Courts.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Post-Dispatch.)

CHICAGO, April 22.—Former President William Howard Taft addressing the Mystic Athletic Club yesterday, said:

"In the present war for 20 months, we have pursued, as strictly as we could, the course which the rules of international law lay down for neutral powers, but this has not kept us isolated from the struggle. In the heat of war, and in making reprisals for violations of the laws of war by each other, belligerents have ignored the case of the neutrals who are being ground between the upper and the nether mill stones.

"Both sides in the war have violated our own rights as a neutral.

"England has failed to keep within the law of the blockade as she enforced it against us in the Civil War, and has seized our vessels and cargoes in violation of our rights.

"Germany has caused the death of 150 of our citizens by her submarine warfare when by the rules of international law they were entitled to be saved from danger before the commercial vessels of England and France, upon which they were traveling, were sunk.

Difference in Violations.

"The difference between the English and German cases is this, that in the former the questions can be settled in the future by compensation in damages to be awarded, if need be, by an international court, because they concern property and not human life; in the German case, such a remedy is utterly inadequate, because human life is involved and the issue must be settled now, or American lives will continue to be sacrificed in violation of the rights of those dying and of the nation owing them protection, and our loss will be irrevocable.

"Therefore, the President in his last note has warned Germany that we must end our diplomatic relations with her unless she ceases thus unlawfully to destroy American lives.

"The President is right and we all must stand by him. I cannot follow the reasoning of those who exalt Americanism and patriotism and yet do not uphold his hands in the present crisis. If Germany refuses to heed the warning and Count von Bernstorff is given his passports, war need not ensue, as a matter of course. But if Germany continues her submarine warfare in such a way as to drown noncombatant Americans, as in the case of the Lusitania and the Sussex, it is difficult to see how war can be avoided.

"No one prays more earnestly than I that such a result may be avoided and that Germany, facing the consequences of needlessly making another national enemy, shall change her policy and enable us to continue our friendly relations with her.

Should Back Up President.

"In view of the critical nature of the issue, however, is there anything for a clear-headed, patriotic American to do but to back up our President, who is our chosen constitutional leader?

"This is no time to point out mistakes of the past. This is no time, by attacks upon the General in command, to give to the nation whom he has warned the idea that our Commodore has not a united people behind him. I am a Republican and hope to change the political color of the national administration in November next, and am ready to give my reasons for urging the change in a proper time and place. Now and here are not the proper time and place. Now we must stand shoulder to shoulder as Americans in demanding with all the emphasis possible respect for American rights and in making clear our purpose with undaunted courage to carry our demand to its ultimate and logical conclusion."

I. T. U. ELECTION ON MAY 24

60,000 Votes to Be Cast in United States and Canada.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 22.—The annual election of officers of the International Typographical Union will be held May 24 throughout the United States and Canada, according to an announcement made here today by Marsden G. Scott, president of the organization. Neither President Scott nor the first vice president, Walter W. Barrett of Chicago will have opposition, but John W. Hays, secretary-treasurer, will have as his opponent W. E. Merritt of Houston, Tex.

Six candidates for delegates to the American Federation of Labor, four to be elected, have been indorsed. They are: Frank Morrison, Chicago; Max S. Hays, Cleveland; H. W. Dennett, Los Angeles; T. W. McCullough, Omaha; Hugh Stevenson, Toronto, and U. B. Pittenger, Mount Morris, Pa. It is expected that about 60,000 votes will be cast.

VILLISTAS' SENTENCES DEFERRED

Held Up in Deming at Request of Federal Authorities.

DEMING, N. M., April 22.—Sentencing of the seven Villistas, found guilty Thursday of murder in the first degree after a trial in the Luna County District Court, has been deferred, it is understood, at the request of the Federal Government, whose officers assisted the State authorities in the trial. The murder charges grew out of the raid at Columbus, N. M.

Jesus Pais, the 12-year-old boy who was shot through both hips in the raid, was not tried, as he will be used as a witness in any other similar cases that may come up.

NEW YORK WILL MAKE NO CHANGE IN PASTEURIZED MILK RULES

Decision Reached After Consulting With Doctor Who Talked on Scurvy Among Babies.

NEW YORK, April 22.—The New York Health Department will make no changes in its regulations regarding the sale of pasteurized milk as a result of the disclosures at the Academy of Medicine. There, after a close relation had been shown between scurvy and the use of pasteurized milk, Dr. Emmett Holt said that scurvy was on the increase among infants of New York City. Under the present rules of the department the only pasteurized milk sold in the city is certified milk. This costs not less than 15 cents a quart.

As soon as he had read Dr. Holt's speech Health Commissioner Emerson conferred with Dr. Holt over the telephone and then issued the following statement:

"Dr. Holt's comments are not understood to be criticisms or to express disapproval of the pasteurization of milk in New York City, but as a warning that in children under 2 the exclusive and continuous use of pasteurized milk may cause temporary disabilities which can be immediately remedied by the use of appropriate additions to the diet.

"While the persistent decrease in infant mortality cannot be attributed as much to the introduction of pasteurized milk as to personal medical instruction to expectant and nursing mothers in the homes, there can be no doubt of the reduction in preventable infections for which pasteurized milk is responsible."

Church to Give Organ Concert.

An organ concert, the proceeds of which will be added to the building fund, will be given by the Third United Presbyterian Church, Union and Spalding avenues, Tuesday evening at 8:15. WHY MANY MEN FAIL IN BUSINESS AND WOMEN FAIL SOCIALLY

CADOMENE TABLETS PROMOTE STRENGTH DESPAIR
HOPE

It is the Bright, Active, Clear-eyed, Healthy individual who meets success, at work or at play, socially or financially.

CADOMENE TABLETS Mean Health to Men

Health is Life, Strength, Vitality, Ambition, the ability, the desire to live, to enjoy, to accomplish. Without health and strength in fullest measure you may not hope to enjoy the fullest measure of success in any undertaking. You cannot make the best of conditions and opportunities. If your mind, your power of reasoning and concentration are dulled or inactive, to any extent, naturally you are less capable to the same extent to make them perform as you would have them to.

CADOMENE TABLETS represent a scientific combination of the most vital elements for building and strengthening cell and tissue. Cadomene Tablets produce buoyancy of spirit, a regaining of vitality and endurance, renewed efficiency of body and mind. Amazing and lasting improvement results from Cadomene Tablets in chronic or recent cases of Nervousness or Failing Vitality.

So if you are a victim of overwork, worry, disease—if you feel tired, weak, nervous, trembling, and suffer with headaches, melancholy, pain in spine and back of head, cold extremities, dreadful dreams of direful disasters, a feeling of timidity and a general inability to act naturally at all times, if you have "the blues"—then you need Cadomene Tablets to brace and build you up—to put new ambition, energy and strength into your system and reinforce and nourish the bodily structures. Cadomene Tablets are sold on a money-back-if-not-satisfied-guarantee, and if you are not pleased with results you get every cent of your money back. It belongs to you and we want you to have it.

Cadomene Tablets help men out of the rut of nervous discontent and ill-health, and restore to them the capacity for more complete enjoyment of life. All druggists sell 3-grain Cadomene Tablets in sealed tubes.

For sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., and all live druggists. —ADVERTISEMENT.

$1915 BALANCE IN POST-DISPATCH CHRISTMAS FUND

Expenditures Were Greater and Contributions Smaller Last Year Than in 1914.

DOLL DISPLAY POPULAR

Baskets of Food Called for Heavier Outlay — Fewer Homeless Fed Than Formerly.

The Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association closed its 1915 undertaking to provide good cheer for the destitute children and families of St. Louis and the homeless men sojourning in the city, with a balance of $1915.69 on deposit in the Third National Bank, there to remain at interest until required for the same beneficent enterprise at some future time. This information appears in the report of the Audit and Finance Committee of the association, of which J. R. Cooke, cashier of the Third National Bank, is chairman, published in today's Post-Dispatch.

The expenditures were materially increased over those of 1914, while the contributions from the general public were smaller by $1425.92, the latter totals being $9786.53 and $11,212.45 respectively. The increase in outlay was $785.18, the total being $13,936.41, as compared with $13,361.81 in 1914. But the Post-Dispatch, as is its custom, defrayed all the administrative expense, which, last season, aggregated $246.38, against $2149.36 the preceding year. Much of this increase assumed b ythe Post-Dispatch was expended upon the inauguration of the doll display, which was found to be an exceedingly popular enterprise, as the first ever made in St. Louis and, perhaps, in the United States, and as such has become a permanent feature of the association's operations. The total cost of the doll department was $497.73, against which appears receipts of $59.20.

Materials Cost More.

As stated in the Audit and Fiance Committee's report, the increase in expenditures was due in large measure to greater cost of materials. This appears in both the departments of baskets for family dinners and in toys, gifts, etc., for the festival in the Coliseum. The former shows a cost of $4426.85, as compared with $4216.68 in 1914, an increase of $210.44. Toys, etc., entailed an outlay of $3489.07, against $2963.20 the preceding year, an increase of $525.87.

There was a saving in the outlay for the Coliseum festival, the cost of which last year was $1201.17, while in 1914 it was $1592.60, a difference in favor of 1915 of $391.43. The homeless men's dinner also necessitated smaller outlay by $593.75, the figures being $937.25 and $1831, respectively. Explanation of the latter is found in the decreased number of men appearing as Christmas guests of the association, due, it is believed, to the more general employment of labor and lessened number of homeless men in the city at that time, as compared with the preceding year.

The association had to its credit in bank when the work of organizing the 1915 festival began the sum of $1683.50, to which was added $232.19, making the total stated in the report by Chairman Cooke.

List of Contributors Large.

The number of contributors to the festival fund in 1916 has not been ascertained, but work on the lists to this end is in progress. It is confidently believed that it will largely exceed any former year, and the amount of contributions from the general public is known to have been materially larger than at any previous time. In 1914 there arose from benefits only $142.20, while the previous year the total from this source was $1410.17, a difference of $1267.97. Practically the entire sum, therefore, came from the public as direct contributions, and an unusual volume of these contributions were less than $1, a vast number of them being 5 and 10 cents. This was an exceedingly gratifying development, as manifesting the deep sympathy of the people of St. Louis and adjacent communities with the spirit underlying the purpose of the organization to see that no child in the city went without some substantial reminder that the most joyous season of the year was at hand, and that every poor family had on that occasion evidence that the heart of the community beat in profound sympathy with its members. The enlarged popular sympathy was an inspiration to the Post-Dispatch and its associate actives in the benevolent annual enterprise to look forward with confidence to even more effective endeavor in future years.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes—Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter that one's system collects.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women, as well as men, take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets now and then just to keep in the pink of condition.

I have examined the books and accounts of the treasurer of the fund, Mr. Dumont Jones, cashier of the Post-Dispatch, and find them correct. All contributions to the fund were received by the treasurer, entered on the books and acknowledged in the columns of the Post-Dispatch.

All supplies, labor and other necessaries for the festival were ordered on requisition of the chairmen of the committees and ordered by the chairman of the Supply Committee and on the approval of the Executive Committee.

The bills were approved by the chairmen of the committees and paid on vouchers signed for the Executive Committee and the Post-Dispatch by Mr. George S. Johns and Mr. W. E. Taylor.

Every dollar expended is accounted for by an approved bill and a signed and approved voucher.

Besides its contribution of $500, the Post-Dispatch paid the expenses of the administration, including salaries of office help, solicitors, etc.; typewriting, stationery, postage and committee expenses, which amounted to $1966.38. Thus all of the money expended from the fund was applied to the actual necessaries of the several divisions of the festival.

It is gratifying to note the efficient system on which the festival is conducted and the economy and accuracy with which the fund is administered.

It gives me pleasure to state that despite the increase of expenditures due to greater cost of materials, there is a balance of $1915.69 deposited at interest to the credit of the fund.

Cashier 3d National Bank.

Coming Lectures and Meetings

(Published Sundays and Wednesdays.)

War Survey Committee Meeting.

The Missouri State Survey Commission, recently appointed by Secretary of the Navy Daniels to assist the Naval Consulting Board, will meet tomorrow afternoon at the Business Men's League to canvass the resources which St. Louis has for making war materials. This canvass will include the whole State and is part of an inquiry to be made in every state.

Two Talks by Miss Stillman.

Miss Harriet Craig Stillman will give two public lectures on the "New Moral Education" in Sumner high school auditorium on April 24 and May 1 at 7:45 p. m. The lectures will be given under the auspices of the Elleardsville Social Settlement Club. The first lecture will be for women only and the second will be given before a mixed audience.

Illinois Fire Marshal to Speak.

Walter H. Bennett, State Fire Marshal of Illinois, will address the Fire Prevention Club Tuesday at 8 p. m., at Soldan High School. His topic will be "Clean-up as a Fire Preventive." Director of Streets and Sewers Talbert will tell of the city's plans for "Clean-up and Paint-up Week" in May.

Address on Poverty Subject.

The Rev. J. H. Lever will talk on "The Results of Poverty as Seen in City Institutions" at a public meeting at Trinity M. E. Church, Tenth and North Market streets, at 8 p. m., Thursday.

Dr. B. W. Clarke to Speak.

Dr. B. W. Clarke, president of the Mid-City Club, will address the Junior Business Men's Association of West St. Louis at its meeting at the Hamilton Hotel at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

To Address Parent-Teachers' Body.

Dr. F. H. Ewerhardt will lecture, under the auspices of the Parent-Teachers Association, on the subject of "Health," at the Eugene Field School Kindergarten, Taylor avenue and Olive street, Tuesday at 8 p. m.

SHAKSPEAREAN PERIOD EXHIBITS THIS WEEK IN VANDERVOORT'S

The Shakespeare Tercentenary will be celebrated all week, beginning tomorrow, at the Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney store, with an exhibition of curios, pictures, publications and other articles pertaining to Shakespeare's work and time, and a musical program each afternoon. The exhibition will be on the fourth floor and the concerts on the sixth floor.

The music programs will include the most popular songs of the Shakespearean plays, rendered by well-known St. Louis singers. Some of the songs are: "Take, O Take Those Lips Away" (Measure for Measure), Wallace Niedringhaus; "When in Disgrace" (Love's Labor Lost), Mrs. Oliver Tyson Covington; "Blow, Blow, Thou Winter Wind" (As You Like It), Dr. Robb; "Who Is Sylvia?" (Two Gentlemen of Verona), George Sheffield; "A Lover and His Lass" (As You Like It), Second Baptist Church Quartet; "Sigh No More, Ladies" (Much Ado About Nothing), Mrs. D. H. Cleland.

Tuesday afternoon old-fashioned tunes will be played by Wilson Primm Guion, 81 years old, who for about 65 years has been known as the champion fiddler of St. Louis and surrounding country.

At the afternoon programs addresses will be made by Dr. Denton J. Snider, Shakespearean scholar and writer; by Charles P. Johnson, on "The Early Stage People of St. Louis;" by Dr. Robert M. Funkhouser, on "Shakespeare and His Influence;" by the Rev. M. I. Stritch, on "Shakespeare and the Humanizing of the Stage;" by the Rev. S. H. Woodrow, on "The Religion of Shakespeare," and by Judge Shepard Barclay and the Rev. Samuel Sale.

The exhibition will include articles loaned by many St. Louisans.

Lid Put on Gambling in Siam.

BANGKOK, Siam, April 22.—The final prohibition of public gambling in Siam has been decided upon. The lotteries have already been closed, and the gambling houses will be shut gradually during the next two years.

APOLLO AND MORNING CHORAL CLUBS IN CONCERT MAY 1

Woman's Organization Is 25 Years Old—Paul Althouse, Tenor, to Be the Soloist.

The Morning Choral Club, a women's chorus, recently celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of its foundation, and the Apollo Club, a male chorus, is in its twenty-third season; but they will unite for the first time in a joint concert on May 1, at the Odeon, under the direction of Charles Galloway. The Morning Choral numbers 110 voices, and the Apollo Club 83.

As an added attraction, the two organizations will present as soloist Paul Althouse, American tenor, of the Metropolitan Opera Co., who will sing two selections not yet announced.

The clubs will sing together Gounod's "Unfold, Ye Portals Everlasting," the "Bridal Chorus" from Cowen's "Rose Maiden," and Thomas' cantata, "The Swan and the Skylark." In the last will appear a quartette chosen from the members of the clubs—Miss Gertrude Finley, soprano, Miss Blanche Herrick, contralto, Russell Rizer, tenor, and John A. Rohan, bass.

The Morning Choral will sing Foote's "The Gateway of Ispahan," and the Apollo Club will give Goldbeck's "Three Fishers."

The Apollo Club will give its third concert of the season at the Odeon on April 25. Miss Sophie Braslau, soprano, of the Metropolitan Opera Co., will be soloist.

CHILDREN TO GIVE DANCES

They Will Assist in Benefit for Blind Musicians.

Florence Fitzgibbon and Neil Lambur will contribute the dance features to the benefit entertainment for blind musicians of St. Louis at the Victoria Theater Tuesday evening. Little Miss Fitzgibbon will give the New Century skirt dance and Irish national dances, while her partner will demonstrate the French national dances.

The duet number of the children will be the "Luella" dance.

"TIZ" FOR TIRED, ACHING FEET

Instant Relief for Sore, Tender, Sweaty Swollen, Calloused Feet and Corns

A whole year's foot comfort for 25 cents.

People who are forced to stand on their feet all day know what sore, tender, sweaty, burning feet mean. They use "TIZ," and "TIZ" cures their feet right up. It keeps feet in perfect condition. "TIZ" is the only remedy in the world that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up the feet and cause tender, sore, tired, aching feet. It instantly stops the pain in corns, callouses and bunions. It's simply glorious. Ah! how comfortable your feet feel after using "TIZ." You'll never limp or draw up your face in pain. Your shoes won't tighten and hurt your feet.

Get a 25-cent box of "TIZ" now from any druggist, department or general store. Just think! a whole year's foot comfort for only 25 cents.—ADV.

MRS. HOWARD GOULD IN PEKING

There to Establish a School on Montessori Lines.

PEKIN, April 22.—Mrs. Howard Gould is in Pekin for the purpose of establishing a school for Chinese girls in which the Montessori method will be used. Mrs. Gould recently had an interview with the Minister of Education, and is co-operating with a number of missionaries in educational work.

She will finance the new school, which will serve as a model for Chinese teachers.

Holy Rosary Society in Play.

"A Black Sheep's Christmas Eve," a one-act musical sketch, will be presented by the Holy Rosary Branch of the Holy Name Society at St. Leo's Hall, Twenty-third and Mullanphy streets, Thursday evening. This play was written by Sam Green, a member of the society. Dancing will follow the performance.

Got Rid of My Corns With Magic "Gets-It"

Simplest Corn Cure in the World—No Pain, No Fuss. New, Sure Way.

Why Have Corns At All When "Gets-It" Removes Them the New, Dead-Sure Way?

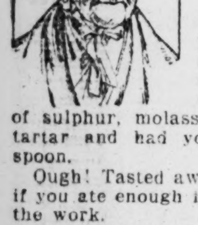
When corns make you almost "die with your boots on," when you've soaked them and picked them and sliced them, when corn-swelling salves and tapes, band ages and plasters that make corns pop-eyed have only made your corns grow faster. Just hold your heart a moment and figure this: Put two drops of "Gets-It" on the corn. It dries at once. You can put your shoe and stocking on right over it. The corn is doomed. It makes the corn come off clear and clean. It's the new, easy way. Nothing to stick or press on the corn. You can wear smaller shoes. You'll be a joy-walker. No pain, no trouble. Accept no substitutes.

"Gets-It" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

CONSTIPATION REMEDY AND BLOOD PURIFIER IN SULPHERB TABLETS

(NOT SULPHUR)

Grandmother's Old Fashioned Spring Tonic



Cleans, purifies and strengthens the blood stream, and through the blood gives health to the whole system.

Do you remember long ago that your grandmother or your great-grandmother prepared a mixture of sulphur, molasses and cream of tartar and had you eat it with a spoon.

Ough! Tasted awful, didn't it. But if you ate enough it would surely do the work.

Well, HERE WE HAVE IT. The same old remedy, prepared in an up-to-date, scientific manner, in SULPHERB TABLETS. They overcome constipation, free the bowels and blood of poisonous wastes and put the blood and entire system in tip-top condition.

Men, women and children may take these tablets. They act in natural manner, without pain or unpleasantness, and results are sure. They give immediate benefit and permanent relief from constipation and blood disorders.

Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur) may be purchased at all drug stores. ADV.

TODAY'S AID TO BEAUTY

An especially fine shampoo for this weather, one that dissolves and entirely removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt, can easily be made at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox in a cup of hot water. Pour slowly on scalp and massage briskly. This creates a soothing, cooling lather. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on the glossy richness of natural color, also a fluffiness which makes it seem much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo arranging the hair is a pleasure.—ADV.

4-DAY CONVENTION OF DRAMA LEAGUE HERE THIS WEEK

Gathering Will Act on Plan for an American Shakspeare Memorial Foundation.

One of the main objectives of the national convention of the Drama League of America, to be held in St. Louis the last four days of this week, will be the launching of a movement for an American Shakspeare memorial foundation similar to those of several European countries, notably England, France and Germany.

The plan will be introduced at the civic reception to be given Wednesday evening in the Public Library to open the convention, and will be continued through all the business sessions at the Buckingham Hotel until a decisive vote for or against the movement has been reached.

William Faversham, the actor, and Prof. John Livingston Lowes of Washington University, will manage the campaign. Several ideas as to what form the memorial should take have been suggested, but the general opinion among persons interested seems to be that it should be a Shakspeare museum with facilities for the study of dramatic literature and art.

Other important work of the convention will be to define the place of of the motion picture with relation to the drama, consider the present condition of the theater, both commercially and artistically, with a view to improving both features, discuss the future of the Little Theater, which now is regarded as the most popular form of theatrical activity, and study ways of developing educational activities in the drama and dramatic literature.

Convention Speakers.

Notable men and women who will speak on these subjects are Cranston Brenton and John Collier of the National Board of Motion Picture Censorship; Thomas H. Ince of the Triangle Film Co.; D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation;" Francis Wilson, actor and playwright; J. E. Williams, noted labor dispute arbitrator and regarded as the leading American authority on theatrical "one-night stands;" Benedict Papot, actor, author and lecturer; Mrs. Alfred Hamburger, wife of the owner of 30 movie theaters and herself the originator of special children's picture performances; Mrs. W. Yorke Stevenson, founder of the Philadelphia Art Alliance; Theodore B. Hinckley, editor of the Drama Quarterly; Miss Kate Oglesby of New York, vice president of the Educational Dramatic League, of which Mrs. August Belmont (Eleanor Robeson) is president; Dr. Archibald Henderson of the University of North Carolina, foremost Bernard Shaw biographer; Mrs. Arthur M. Dodge of New York, head of the national anti-suffrage movement; Mrs. Alice C. D. Riley, writer of children's plays and masques; Miss Grace Griswold of the Washington Square (New York) Players; Edward Goodman, director of the Bandbox Theater, New York; Austin Latshaw, a Kansas City dramatic critic, and Miss Clara Fitch, chairman of the festival department of the Drama League and secretary of the National Shakspeare Tercentenary Bureau.

Series of Exhibits.

In addition to the speeches and discussions, there will be a series of exhibits in charge of members of the local convention committee. Among these will be the educational exhibit assembled by several of the great Eastern colleges, the little theater exhibit, consisting of working models, lighting effects and sketches of scenes and costumes, from the little theaters of the United States and Canada; and the Shakspeare exhibit of books, manuscripts and prints collected by the St. Louis Public Library and the Franklin Club of St. Louis.

A fourth exhibit which will be unique is the newly completed Elizabethan garden in the floral display house at Shaw's Garden, which will be open to the public, beginning today, and will have its formal dedication as part of the Shakspeare tercentenary celebration Friday afternoon.

Elizabethan Plays by Washington U. Students Thursday and Saturday.

Final rehearsals for the "Old Wives Tale," which will be given on Washington University campus Thursday and Saturday afternoon of this week in connection with the celebration of the Shakspeare Tercentenary, will be held on the Elizabethan stage in the main quadrangle.

The stage, which follows the lines of the old Fortune Theater in London, was completed yesterday. The "pit" and the "balconies" on the stage will be filled with students in Elizabethan garb.

The parts in the play and two others will be taken by 200 students of the university. Mellville A. Burke is directing the "Old Wives' Tale" and Miss Florence Grant, the other two. Three songs in the "Old Wives' Tale" will be set to Elizabethan music.

In the Revesby Sword Play old English folk music will accompany the dances and the two songs. Elizabethan music has also been adapted for the dances in Ben Johnson's masque, "The Hue and Cry After Cupid." While it will not be possible to have the exact musical instrument of Elizabethan days, three of the orchestral instruments correspond to the "viols" of that day, the trombone follows closely the Elizabethan "sackbut" and the clarionet is the modern "recorder."

The music for the plays will be provided by the university orchestra. The adaptation of the old music was done by Oswald Thumser, a member of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

The performance on Thursday afternoon will be given for the visiting delegates to the national convention of the Drama League of America, the members of the Washington University Association and the University Community. The second performance on Saturday will be open to the public.

22 SCENES IN THE WOMAN'S PAGEANT AT ODEON IN MAY

One of Most Interesting Will Present Entrance of Woman Into Educational Fields.

Among the most interesting of the 22 scenes of the Women's Pageant, which will be produced under the direction of Joseph Solari, at the Odeon, May 5 and 6, for the building fund of the Woman's Council of St. Louis, will be the educational scenes.

These two scenes will present the entrance of woman into the educational fields during the early part of the nineteenth century. Miss Evelyn Currier has the leading role of "Margaret," the young woman who makes so bold as to take up the work of a school master. She not only finds able support among the women of the village, but a few of the men, and all of the children, who shout with glee when she is employed to teach.

The scene is on the village green in front of the little white school house, and the teacher is surrounded by [illegible] boys and girls, who play the games of children of that period.

Sixteenth Century Scene.

Another epoch which will be ably presented will be the Baronial Scene of the Sixteenth Century. Miss Mildred Brooks will be seen as "Lady Eleanor," who refuses to be given in marriage as a settlement of her father's debts. Clarence Stratton has the part of the "Baron" and Louis La Croix is the "Jester." The other characters in the scene are "Kinghts," "Squires," "Ladies of the Court," "dancers," "musicians" and "attendants." Miss Madeline Lasar is the solo dancer in this scene.

Mrs. John K. Maxwell poses as the Goddess Athena in the Greek scene. Other characters in this scene are Dr. John H. Tierney as Alexander, and Miss Minnie Potter, as Penelope. Mrs. E. E. Haverstick creates the role of Intelligence.

Evolution of Woman.

The Pageant will portray the evolution of woman to the present day and close with the tableau in which the "Spirit of Intelligence" leads woman on to greater development and achievement.

The play is being given under the auspices of the Woman's Council, which is the largest woman's club in the United States. It is virtually the clearing house for all civic affairs in which women are interested, and is to the women of St. Louis what the Business Men's League is to the business men. The officers are Mrs. Gus V. R. Mechin, president; Mrs. Ottmar Moll, first vice president; Mrs. J. E. Allen, second vice president; Mrs. Louis B. Woodward, third vice president; Mrs. D. R. Parman, recording secretary; Mrs. E. B. Watson, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Joseph Jamison, assistant corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. M. Durdy, treasurer; Mrs. William Kinsey, auditor; chairman Ways and Means Committee, Mrs. Emma Oppenheimer; chairman Civics Committee, Mrs. Albert Cleaver.

ODD FELLOWS TO CELEBRATE 97TH ANNIVERSARY OF ORDER

Series of Five Group Meetings Have Been Arranged, First One to Be Held Tuesday Evening.

The Odd Fellows of St. Louis this week will celebrate the ninety-seventh anniversary of the order with a series of five group meetings, arranged by the deputies of the various city lodges, under the direction of the District Deputy Grand Master, J. C. Bram. Emblematic pennants have been printed for every St. Louis Odd Fellow and will be distributed during the week and at the meetings.

The first meeting will be held Tuesday evening at Hope Hall, Cherokee street and Texas avenue, by the eight lodges comprising the South St. Louis group. The Sovereign Grand Lodge prize winning degree staff of Wildey Lodge will exemplify the initiatory degree.

Two meetings will be held Friday evening; one by the North St. Louis group of lodges at Broadway and Salisbury streets and one by the West St. Louis lodges at Finney and Vandeventer avenues. At the North St. Louis meeting the first degree will be conferred by a team selected from the lodges comprising the North End group, and at the West St. Louis meeting the initiatory degree will be conferred by a selected team.

At the fourth meeting, Saturday evening, the first division of the downtown lodges will meet in the hall of St. Louis Lodge No. 5, in the Odd Fellows' Building. St. Louis Lodge No. 5 famous third-degree staff that won a prize at the Indianapolis Sovereign Grand Lodge meeting, and is drilling for the Chattanooga meeting, will confer the third degree.

The final meeting of the celebration will be held Tuesday, May 2, in the hall of Wildey Lodge in the Odd Fellows' Building by the second group of the downtown lodges. St. Louis Lodge No. 5 will confer the second degree.

A special program has been arranged for each meeting, with addresses by members prominent in the order. Among the speakers are Mayor Henry W. Kiel of Wildey Lodge, Henry S. Caulfield, Hiram Lloyd, Henry A. Hamilton, the Rev. H. A. La Tour, Judge J. C. Shaner, Ben Weidle, Grand Secretary of Missouri Odd Fellows; William Ambruster and John J. Frederick.

LIVERPOOL, April 22.—Owing to the refusal of the members of the Dockers Union to work with women, all the female helpers recently employed by the Liverpool Dock Commission have been withdrawn.

MOST BOYS IN HOLLAND SMOKE

School Survey Shows That the Habit Is General.

LEYDEN, Netherlands, April 22.—Holland is the Paradise of the boy smoker. The extent of the cigar-smoking habit among Dutch lads is shown by an inquiry just made in the schools of this famous old university city.

Of 2360 boys attending the better class schools it was found that 61 per cent smoked—22 per cent regularly and 42 per cent more spasmodically. In the "people's" schools the percentage was still higher. Seventy-four per cent of the lads indulged in tobacco, 30 per cent being regular smokers. Coming finally to the schools where education is free, all but a fifth of the youngsters were tobacco devotees, and half their number were regular smokers.

67,000 Vacant Hospital Beds.

LONDON, April 22.—There are at present 67,000 vacant beds in the British war hospitals, owing to the lack of really important fighting during the winter on the west front.

This Liquid Attacks Hair Under the Skin

It is impossible for pastes and rub-on preparations to be absorbed by the skin, therefore they merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. Imitations of De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory, are just as useless, because they lack certain ingredients which De Miracle alone contains, which give it power to devitalize hair. Well groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from the limbs to prevent it from showing through stockings. Also for removing hair from under arms. De Miracle never disappoints. L'ART DE LA MODE says: It is "the best method * * * does its work by absorption." Genuine magazines of the highest character indorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called indorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories. Buy De Miracle by name and you will get the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money if it fails. In 50c, $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you buy a bottle at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. P-6, Park Av. and 129th St., New York.—ADV

Your Tonic for Spring

PERUNA TONIC

should do these things—clear away waste; dispel inflammation; invigorate the bodily processes. After a hard winter your blood may be clogged, your digestion not up to the mark, and stagnant areas (catarrh) exist in the membranes of the stomach, intestines or lungs. The result is a tired feeling, irregular appetite and loss of energy.

Peruna Invigorates

all your body, helps to soothe away all inflammation, restores the irregular appetite to a healthy condition, and clears away all waste. It's a real tonic—especially good in catarrhal conditions like indigestion, after-effects of grip, convalescence, and spring lassitude. You may take it with perfect safety, confident that it has been of benefit for 44 years to thousands, and hence possesses real merit. What it has done for them is the best evidence of what it will do for you. Begin it today.

Mrs. Ward Tells of Work of English Women on Munitions

like to find the men?' They agreed to try. I gave them a week, and at the end of a week they came to me and said they would rather have women. I said to them, 'You must all pull together.' They gave me their word. Right from the beginning they have done their level best to help and things have gone on perfectly. On one occasion, a woman complained that the man directing her was 'working against her.' I called the men's committee together. I told them the facts, and they have dealt with the offender themselves."

The general system now followed in the shell factories is to put so many skilled men in charge of so many lathes worked by women workers. Each skilled man, who teaches the women, sets the tools, and keeps the machines in running order, oversees eight, ten or more machines. But sometimes the comradeship is much closer. For instance, in a machine tool shop, one of the most highly skilled parts of the engineers business, you may now see a man with a woman to help him, operating two lathes. If the woman falls into any difficulty, the man comes to help her. Both can earn more money than each could earn separately, and the skilled man who formerly worked the second lathe is released. In the same shop a woman watched a skilled man doing slot-drilling—a process in which thousandths of an inch matter—for a fortnight. Now she runs the machine herself by day, while the man works it on a night shift.

Nearby, as part of the same works, which are not specialized, but engaged in general engineering, is a bomb shop staffed by women, which is now sending 3000 bombs a week to the trenches. Women are also doing gun-breech work of the most delicate and responsible kind under the guidance of a skilled overseer. One of the women at this work was formerly a charwoman. She has never yet broken a tool. All over the works, indeed, the labor of women and unskilled men is being utilized in the same scientific way. Thus the area of the works has been doubled in a few months, without the engagement of a single additional skilled man from outside. "We have made the men take an interest in the women," say the employers. "That is the secret of our success. We care nothing at all about the money, we are all for the output. We make nothing out of the women financially. If the men think you are going to exploit women and cheapen the work, the scheme is crabbed right away."

I myself came across the effect of this suspicion in the minds of the workmen, in the case of a large Yorkshire shell factory, where the employers at once detected and slew it. This great workshop, formerly used for railway work, now employs some 1300 women, with a small staff of skilled men. The women work 45 hours a week in 18-hour shifts—the men 53 hours in 12-hour shifts. There is no difficulty whatever in obtaining a full supply of women's labor—indeed, the factory has now a waiting list of 500. Nor has there been any difficulty with the men in regard to the women's work. With the exception of two operations which are thought too heavy for them, all the machines are run by women.

But when the factory began the employers very soon detected that it was running below its possible output. There was a curious lack of briskness in the work—a curious constraint among the new workers. Yet the employers were certain that the women were keen, and their labor potentially efficient. They put their heads together, and posted up a notice in the factory to the effect that whatever might be the increase in the output of piece work, the piece work rate would not be altered. Instantly the atmosphere began to clear, the pace of machines began to mount.

It was a factory in which the work was new, the introduction of women was new, and the workers strange to each other, and for the most part strange to their employers. A small leaven of distrust on the part of the men workers was enough, and the women were soon influenced. Luckily the mischief was as quickly scotched. Men and women began to do their best, the output of the factory—which had been planned for 14,000 shells a week—ran up to 20,000, and everything has gone smoothly since.

Clergymen as Shell-Makers

Let me now, however, describe another effect of dilution—the employment of unskilled men on operations hitherto included in skilled engineering.

On the day after visiting the factory I have just described, my journey took me to another town close by, where my guide showed me a new shell factory filled with 800 to 900 men, all "medically unfit" for the army, and almost all drawn from the small trades and professions of the town, especially from those which had been hard hit by the war. Among those talked to I found a keeper of bathing machines, a publican's assistant, clerks, shop assistants, three clergy—these latter going home for their Sunday duty, and giving their wages to the Red Cross—unemployed architects and the like.

I cannot recall any shop which made a greater impression of energy, of a spirit behind the work than this shop. In its inspecting room I found a graduate from Yale. "I had to join in the fight," he said quietly—"this was the best way I could think of." And it was noticeable besides for some remarkable machines, which America had also sent us.

In other shell factories, a single lathe carries through one process, interminably repeated, sometimes two, possibly three. But here, with the exception of the fixing and drilling of the copper band, and a few minor operations, one lathe made the shell—cut, bored, roughed, turned, nosed and threaded it, so that it dropped out, all but the finished thing—minus, of course, the fuse. The steel pole introduced at the beginning of the process made nine shells, and the average time per shell was 23 minutes. No wonder that in the great warehouse adjoining the workshop one saw the shell heaps piling up in their tens of thousands—only to be rushed off week by week, incessantly, to the front.

The National Shell Factories.

So far, I have described the expansion or adaptation of firms already existing. But the country is now being covered with another and new type of workshop—the National shell factories—which are founded, financed and run by the Ministry of Munitions. The English Government is rapidly becoming, if it has not already become, the greatest engineering employer in the world.

Let me take an illustration from a Yorkshire town—a town where this Government engineering is rapidly absorbing everything but the textile factories. A young and most competent engineer officer is the Government head of the factory. The work was begun last July, by the help of borrowed lathes, in a building which had been used for painting railway carriages; its first shell was completed last August. The staff last June was one. It is now about 200, and the employes nearly 2500.

A month after the first factory was opened, the Government asked for another—for larger shells. It was begun in August, and was in work in a few weeks. In September a still larger factory—for larger shells—(how these demands illustrate the course of the war! How they are themselves illuminated by the history of Verdun!)—was seen to be necessary. It was begun in September, and is now running. Almost all the machines used in the factory have been made in the town itself, and about 100 small firms, making shell parts, fuses, primers, gauges, etc., have been grouped round the main firm, and are every day sending in their work to the factory to be tested, put together and delivered.

No factory made a better impression upon me than this one. The large airy building with its cheerful lighting; the girls in their dark blue caps and overalls, their long and comely lines reminding one of some processional effect in a Florentine picture; the high proportion of good looks, even of delicate beauty, among them; the upper galleries with their tables piled with glittering brass work, amid which move the quick trained hands of the women—if one could have forgotten for a moment the meaning of it all, one might have applied to it Carlyle's description of a great school, as "a temple of industrious peace."

Women Want to Help Country.

Some day perhaps this "new industry," this swift, astonishing development of industrial faculty among our people, especially among our women, will bear other and richer fruit for England under a peaceful sky. It is impossible that it should pass by without effect, profound effect upon our national life. But at present it has one meaning and one only—war!

Talk to these girls and women. This woman has lost her son—that one her husband. This one has a brother home on leave, and is rejoicing in the return of her husband from the trenches, as a skilled man, indispensable in the shop; another has friends in the places and among the people which suffered in the last Zeppelin raid. She speaks of it with tight lips. Was it she who chalked the inscription found by the Lady Superintendent on a lathe some nights ago—"Done fourteen today. Beat that if you can, you devils!"

No!—under this fast-spreading industry, with its suggestion of good management and high wages, there is the beat of no ordinary impulse. Some feel it much more than others! but, says the clever and kindly superintendent I have already quoted, "The majority are very decidedly working from the point of view of doing something for their country. * * * A great many of the fuse women are earning for the first time. * * * The more I see of them all, the better I like them." And then follow some interesting comments on the relation of the more educated and refined women among them to the skilled mechanics—two national types that have perhaps never met in such close working contact before. One's thoughts begin to follow out some of the possible social results of this national movement.

Example of British War "Hustle."

BUT now the Midlands and the Yorkshire towns are behind me. The train hurries on through a sunny afternoon, and I look through some notes sent me by an expert in the great campaign. Some of them represent its humors. Here is a perfectly true story, which shows an Englishman with "a move on" not unworthy of your side of the water.

A father and son, both men of tremendous energy, were the chiefs of a very large factory, which had been already extensively added to. The father lived in a house alongside the works. One day business took him into the neighboring county, whilst the son came up to London on munition work. On the father's return he was astonished to see a furniture van removing the contents of his house. The son emerged. He had alerady signed a contract for a new factory on the site of his father's house; the materials of the house were sold, and the furniture half gone. After a first start, the father took it in true Yorkshire fashion—wasting no words, and apparently proud of his son.

But here we are at last, in the true north-crossing a tidal river with a climbing town beyond, its tiled roofs wreathed in smoke, through which the afternoon lights are playing. I do not name the place, but one can no more disguise it by writing round it than one could disguise Windsor Castle by any description that was not ridiculous. Many a German officer has walked through these works, I imagine, before the war, smoking the cigarette of peace with their directors, and inwardly ruminating—probably—strange thoughts.

But here are some of the figures that can be given. The shop area of the ammunition shops alone has been increased eightfold since the outbreak of war. The total weight of shell delivered during 1915 was, in tons, 14 times as much as that of 1914. The weight of shell delivered per week, as between had risen nearly 10 times. The number of workpeople in these shops, men and

Never Neglect Colds; Treat Them Promptly

Often they lead to those pulmonary troubles which are responsible for more than one-tenth of all lives lost through illness.

Heavy colds which develop deep-seated coughs or cause inflammation of the air-passages and persist in spite of medication, weakens the system to a point where resistance easily is overcome—and asthma, bronchial and pulmonary troubles are the result. To renew normal resistance, Eckman's Alterative has been found highly beneficial in many instances.

Its lime content is so combined with other remedial agents as to be easily assimilated by the average person—and it contains no narcotics or habit-forming drugs of any sort. So it's safe to try.

At your druggist's.

Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia.

HOW TO BE SLIM

If you are too fat and want to reduce your weight 15 or 20 pounds, don't starve and weaken your system, or think you must always be laughed at on account of your fat, but go to Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. or any good druggist and get a box of Oil of Korein capsules, take one after each meal and one before retiring at night.

Weigh yourself once a week and note what a pleasant and reliable method this is for removing superfluous fat from any part of the body.

It costs little, is absolutely harmless, and a week's trial should convince anyone that it is unnecessary to be burdened with even a single pound of unsightly fat.—ADV.

RECIPE TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Not a Trace of Gray Shows After Applying to Hair and Scalp—No Dye—Harmless.

Apply like a shampoo to your hair and scalp Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer. Do this every day for a week then three times a week. In a short time all your gray, faded, prematurely gray or gray streaked hair turns an even, beautiful dark shade with not even a trace of gray showing. Q-Ban makes scalp and hair healthy, leaving all your hair fluffy, soft, thick, clean, free from dandruff, and beautifully dark and lustrous. Q-Ban is not a dye, is harmless. It is ready to use, needs no mixing. Only 50c for a big bottle. Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co., 7 stores, or Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., St. Louis, Mo. Out-of-town folks supplied by mail.—(ADV.)

This Fine Healthy Child Is Convincing Evidence

Simple, Inexpensive Remedy Checks Early Tendency to Constipation.

About the first thing impressed on the young mother is the necessity for regularity in her baby, which brings up the question of the most desirable laxative for children's use.

Mrs. Jesse Richardson, Philpot, Ky., says she has used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for the past year and that there is no medicine in the world like it. She writes: "My little son, William Jr., just loved it because it is so pleasant to take, and everybody talks about his being such a fine healthy boy."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of simple laxative herbs free from any opiate or narcotic drug, and is the standard remedy for constipation in thousands of homes throughout the land. Drug stores everywhere sell it for fifty cents a bottle. Get a bottle of this excellent remedy, and have it in the house. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Continued From Preceding Page.

women, had risen (a) as compared with the month in which war broke out, to a figure eight times as great; (b) as compared with December, 1914, to one between three and four times as great. And over the whole vast enterprise, shipyards, gunships, ammunition shops, with all kinds of naval and other machinery used in war, the number of workpeople employed had increased since 1913 more than 200 per cent. They with their families equal the population of a great city—you may see a new town rising to meet their needs on the farthest side of the river.

As to dilution, it is now accepted by the men who said, when it was proposed to them: "Why didn't you come to us six months ago?"

And it is working wonders here as elsewhere. For instance, a particular portion of the breech mechanism of a gun used to take one hour and 20 minutes to make. On the dilution plan it is done on a capstan, and takes six minutes. Where 500 women were employed before the war there are now close on 9000, and there will be thousands more, requiring one skilled man as tool-setter to about nine or ten women. In a great gun-carriage shop, "what used to be done in two years is now done in one month." In another, two tons of brass were used before the war; a common figure now is 21. A large milling shop, now entirely worked by men, is to be given up immediately to women. And so on.

Dilution's Real Service to England.

Dilution, it seems to me, is breaking down a number of labor conventions which no longer answer to the real conditions of the engineering trades. The pressure of the war is doing a real service to both employers and employed, by the simplification and overhauling it is everywhere bringing about.

As to the problem of what is to be done with the women after the war, one may safely leave it to the future. It is probably bound up with that other problem of the great new workshops springing up everywhere, and the huge new plants laid down. One thinks of the rapid recovery of French trade after the war of 1870, and of the far more rapid rate—after 40 years of machine and transport development, at which the industry of the allied countries may possibly recover the ravages of the present war, when once peace is signed. In that recovery, how great a part may yet be played by these war workships—transformed to the uses of peace, by their crowds of workpeople, and by the hitherto unused intelligence they are everywhere evoking and training among both men and women.

Intelligence—and death! They are written everywhere in these endless workshops, devoted to the fiercest purposes of war. First of all, we visit the "danger building" in the fuse factory, where mostly women are employed. About 500 women are at work here, on different processes connected with the delicate mechanism and filling of the fuse and gaine, some of which are dangerous. Detonating work, for instance. The Lady Superintendent selects for it specially steady and careful women or girls who are paid at time and a quarter rate. Only about eight girls are allowed in each room. The girls here all wear—for protection—green muslin veils and gloves. It gives them a curious, ghastly look, that fits the occupation. For they are making small pellets for the charging of shells, out of a high explosive powder. Each girl uses a small copper ladle to take the powder out of a box before her, and put it into a press which stamps it into a tiny block, looking like ivory. She holds her hand over a little tray of water, lest any of the powder should escape. What the explosive and death-dealing power of it is, it does not do to think about.

In another room a fresh group of girls are handling a black powder for another part of the detonator, and because of the irritant nature of the powder, are wearing white bandages round the nose and mouth. There is great competition for these rooms, the superintendent says! The girls in them work on two shifts of 10 hours each, and would resent a change to a shorter shift. They have one hour for dinner, half an hour for tea, a cup of tea in the middle of the morning—and the whole of Saturdays free. To the eye of the ordinary visitor they show few signs of fatigue.

Girls Making High Explosive Shells.

After the fuse factory, we pass through the high-explosive factory, where 250 girls are at work in a number of isolated wooden sheds filling 18-pounder shells with high explosive. The brass cartridge case is being filled with cordite, bundles of what look like thin brown sticks, and the shell itself, including its central gaine or tube, with the various deadly explosives we have seen prepared in the 'danger buildings.' The shell is fitted into the cartridge case, the primer and the fuse screwed on. It is now ready to be fired.

I stand and look at boxes of shells, packed and about to go straight to the front. A train is waiting close by to take them the first stage on their journey. I little thought then that I should see these boxes, or their fellows, next, on the endless ranks of ammunition lorries behind the fighting lines in France, and that within a fortnight I should myself stand by and see one of those shells fired from a British gun, little more than a mile from Neuve Chapelle.

But here are the women and girls trooping out to dinner. A sweet-faced superintendent comes to talk to me.

"They are not as strong as the men," she says, pointing to the long lines of girls, "but what they lack in strength they make up in patriotic spirit." I speak to two educated women, who turn out to be high school mistresses from a town that has been several times visited by Zeppelins.

"We just felt we must come and help to kill Germans," they say quietly. "All we mind is getting up at 5:30 every morning. Oh, no! it is not too tiring."

The Biggest Shell Made.

Afterwards? I remember one long procession of stately shops, with their high windows, their floors crowded with machines, their roofs lined with cranes, the flame of the forges and the smoke of the fizzling steel lighting up the dark groups of men, the huge howitzer shells, red-hot, swinging in mid-air, and the same shells, tamed and gleaming on the great lathes that rough and bore and finish them. Here are shells for the Queen Elizabeth guns—the biggest shell made. This shop had been put up by good luck just as the war began. Its output of steel has increased from 80 tons a week to 1040.

Then another huge fuse shop, quite new, where 1400 girls in one shift are at work—said to be the largest fuse shop known. And on the following morning an endless spectacle of war-work gun carriages, small Hotchkiss guns for merchant ships, tool-making shops, gauge shops—and so on forever. In the tool-making shops the output has risen from 44,000 to 3,000,000 a year.

And now let me record two final sayings:

One from a manager of a department: "We have a good many Socialists here, and they constantly give trouble. But the great majority of the men have done wonderfully. Some men have put in 100 hours a week since the war began. Some have not lost a minute since it began. The old hands have worked splendidly!"

GERMANY, ONCE A SUGAR EXPORTER, FACES SHORTAGE

Too Much of It Sent Out of the Country Early in the War.

ZURICH, Switzerland, April 22.—From all parts of Germany are coming reports of the scarcity of sugar. The war has shown how indispensable a foodstuff sugar is—two grammes are said by chemists to be equal in nourishment to one gramme of butter. And since butter and margarine, and lard and all kinds of fats, are now only procurable in very small quantities, at very high prices, the importance of sugar has become much greater than ever before.

Before the war Germany exported more sugar than any other European country. After providing for the domestic consumption of 2,400,000 tons, another 1,200,000 tons were exported.

When the war broke out the German sugar interests feared they would be swamped with their stocks, and implored the Government to permit them to continue to export it as before, asserting that the next harvest added to the stocks on hand, would suffice for all human needs for two years. The Government consented and the consequence was that immense quantities of sugar were sent through Holland and reached the English market. This permission to export was soon withdrawn, but it proved how the Government had underestimated the length of the war.

At first sugar prices rose scarcely at all, it was only when butter and fats began to grow scarce that German housewives were urged to substitute sugar for them in the form of jams.

Then came the idea to use sugar for fodder purposes, and nearly a million tons were consumed in this way last year. Large quantities also were taken for making compressed yeast for the bakeries and in the manufacture of spirits instead of the usual grain and potatoes.

The area of sugar beet cultivation decreased also, owing to the higher rents demanded for the land and the production has decreased because of the scarcity of labor.

$100,000 Gift to Rebuild School.

LANSING, Mich., April 22.—R. E. Olds, a local manufacturer, today donated $100,000 to a fund to be used in rebuilding the engineering building of the Michigan Agricultural College, which recently was destroyed by fire. State funds are not available for that purpose at present.

Rupture's Worst Enemy

Such Makeshifts Have Forced Thousands Into Risking Dangerous Operations

Wearing elastic and spring trusses year after year is almost sure to shorten your life.

You can't make them hold, even when drawn so tight you can scarcely stand to keep them on.

They usually let you get worse all the time—that's why every year they are forcing thousands of people into undergoing operation.

They are simply a crime—squeeze the rupture, often causing strangulation—dig into the pelvic bone in front—press against the spinal column at the back—make life miserable for nearly everybody who wears them.

The Plain Truth Is This

You can't possibly get well—can't even keep from getting worse—unless your rupture is constantly held in place. Just as a broken bone can't knit unless held securely together.

And just as a bandage or splint is the only way a broken bone can be held, so the right kind of truss is the only thing in the world that can keep a rupture from coming out and growing worse.

You'll feel like a new person from the day you put on that kind of truss.

But you know as well as we that you'll never find such a sure-to-hold truss at any drug store.

Yet it's easy enough to get. And you can test it first—by sixty days trial—without having to risk a single cent.

It's the famous Cluthe Truss or Cluthe Automatic Massager—absolutely guaranteed to hold, and won't cost you a cent if it doesn't.

It's so utterly different from everything else for rupture that it has received eighteen separate patents.

Made on an entirely new principle. Instantly and automatically protects you against every strain so your rupture can't possibly be forced out. Self-regulating, self-adjusting. Far more than just a truss.

In addition to constant holding, it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture.

Just how it does that—entirely automatically—and how it has thus completely cured hundreds and hundreds of people whose cases seemed almost hopeless—is all explained in the free book which the coupon below will bring you.

No Belt—No Leg-Straps—No Springs

The Cluthe Truss does away with the curse of belts, leg-straps and springs. Thousands say it is as comfortable as their clothing. It is water-proof—will hold in the bath. Also perspiration-proof and easily kept clean.

Make This 60-Day Test—You Won't Have to Risk a Penny

We don't ask you to trust to a mere try-on the way you have to do at a drug store.

We'll make a Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss especially for your case—make it to your measure—and let you try it sixty days—

We'll practically lend it to you that long just for a test.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or bothering you in any way, no matter how hard you work or strain—if it doesn't prove every claim we make—then you can send it back and it won't cost you a penny.

Free Book Full of Facts Never Before Put in Print

Don't keep on letting yourself get worse—don't spend a cent on account of your rupture until you get our free book of advice.

This remarkable book—cloth-bound, 96 pages—sums up all we have learned about rupture during forty years of experience. You'll find it full of facts never before put in print.

It shows just why elastic and spring trusses cause so much misery and such a shameful waste of money that the law should stop their sale.

It explains why operation is nearly always a needless gamble with death—and why, if you do manage to live through it, you may have to keep on wearing a truss.

It exposes the humbug "appliances," "methods," "plasters," etc.

It shows why sixty days' trial is the only safe way to buy anything for rupture—and how the Cluthe Truss is the only thing of any kind that you can get on such a long trial, because the only thing good enough to stand such a thorough day-after-day test.

And it tells all about this famous Automatic Massaging Truss—how simple it is—how it ends constant expense—how it has saved thousands from operation—how you can get it on trial, and how little it costs if you keep it.

Also gives voluntary endorsements from over 5000 benefited and cured people.

Write for this book today—don't put it off—the minute it takes to send for it may free you from trouble for the rest of your life.

Simply use the coupon or just say in a letter or postal, "Send me your book."

Great Remodeling Sale OF Pianos and Player-Pianos AT The Baldwin Piano Company

1111 OLIVE STREET

Begins Monday, April 24th

Our Entire Stock Offered at Quick Sale Prices

All Must Be Sold Within a Few Days

THE REASON On March 25th, a fire occurred on the fifth floor of our building. Owing to the good work of the Fire Department, the fire was entirely confined to the front part of the fifth floor. Some of the stock on the other floors of the building was somewhat damaged by the Salvage Corps in moving it in order to protect it and in placing it into the adjoining building. However, the greatest trouble came from damage to the building. We were able to protect our instruments, but the ceilings, walls and floors were damaged to such an extent that the owner of the building finds it necessary to make extensive repairs. In order to facilitate this work, we find it necessary to clear our floors of this entire stock.

Orrine Destroys Liquor Craving

We would not under any circumstances endorse a remedy for the liquor habit, until we had absolutely satisfied ourselves that it did all claimed for it. ORRINE is the only treatment for the liquor habit that has sufficient merit to be sold under a positive guarantee to refund the money if the desired results are not obtained. It has stood the test of years and we know of many whom it has cured of the drink habit.

You have nothing to risk and everything to gain in giving ORRINE a trial, because the guarantee in each box thoroughly protects you. ORRINE is in two forms: No. 1 for secret use and No. 2 for those who wish to take it voluntarily. Costs $1.00 a box. Ask us for free booklet. ITCH-ECZEMA FREE TRIAL

(Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk-Crust, Weeping Skin, etc.)

ECZEMA CAN BE CURED TO STAY, and when I say cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for awhile, to return worse than before. Now, I do not care what all you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured—all I ask is just a chance to show you that I know what I am talking about. If you will write me TODAY I will send you a FREE TRIAL of my mild, soothing, guaranteed cure that will convince you more in a day than I or anyone else could in a month's time. If you are disgusted and discouraged, I dare you to give me a chance to prove my claims. By writing me today you will enjoy more real comfort than you had ever thought this world holds for you. Just try it and you will see I am telling you the truth.

MONGOLIA TO SUPPLY LICORICE

KALGAN, Mongolia, April 22.—Mongolia will probably furnish the majority of the world's supply of licorice until the end of the European war and the restoration of Turkey's licorice trade

Licorice grows in abundance on the Mongolian plains, but heretofore it has not been exported in large quantities because the Turkish product could be sold more cheaply. Much of the licorice is to be shipped to the United States, where the root will be boiled down and the licorice paste prepared.

FAVERSHAM AT SHUBERT; NEW PRIMA DONNA AT PARK

Anne Bussert Will Sing Leading Role in Revival of "Robin Hood."

A new prima donna, Anne Bussert, will appear at the Park Theater tomorrow night, when the production of De Koven's "Robin Hood" will open. Miss Bussert was formerly with the Savage forces, and has taken leading roles in several light operas. She takes the place of Mabel Wilber, who will make her final St. Louis appearance tonight in "The Mikado," at the Shenandoah.

In "Robin Hood" Frank Moulan will be cast as the Sheriff, Arthur Burckly as Robin Hood, Sarah Edwards as Alan-a-Dale and Louise Allen as Annabelle. Overton Moyle, basso, will make his bow in this production, which marks the Park's 100th consecutive week of musical and dramatic performances. "Cousin Kate," with Chrystal Herne in the leading part, is at the Shenandoah this week.

At the Shubert, William Faversham returns for a week, beginning tomorrow night, in "The Hawk," the strongest emotional drama seen here this season. Joseph Howard, musical comedy singer and producer, heads the Columbia's bill in a song review, aided by Ethlyn Clark; and the Farber sisters, dancers, and Harry Tighe, comedian, are also on the bill.

PROLOGUE TO BE STRIKING FEATURE OF PARK PAGEANT

Proposals of London Authority on Folk Dance and Song Adopted.

CONSISTS OF 4 EPISODES

May Day Revels of Shakspeare's Time in English Town Will Be Depicted.

The adoption by the St. Louis Pageant Drama Association of the proposals of Cecil J. Sharp of London, authority on folk dances and song, for the 30-minute prologue to "As You Like It," as arranged for community presentation at Forest Park June 5 to 11, was announced yesterday by William W. LaBeaume, chairman of the Productions Committee.

Hundreds of St. Louisans already have applied for parts in the prologue, which will depict May day revels of Shakspeare's time on the outskirts of an English town, and many of these St. Louisans already are rehearsing under the guidance of St. Louis dancing teachers who have donated their services.

The prologue, consisting of four episodes, opens with a processional dance through the village. Fifty couples, headed by four pipers and four taborers, engage in a folk dance, preferably the Tideswell Processional, which is of the Morris type.

Dancers From All Classes.

Concerning the opening feature Sharp in his instructions says:

"The dancers include men and women of all classes, all dressed in their holiday clothes, plentifully bedecked with flowers and ribbons. Each carries two handkerchiefs, one in each hand, or, if preferred, boughs of May blossoms. They dance around the arena in a spiral until the musicians reach the center, whereupon all raise their arms and shout on the last chord of the tune. They then disperse, running off merrily to right and left, the lads chasing the girls in catch-who-can fashion, and group themselves in background watching the remainder of the procession."

A Maypole procession, opening the second episode, consists of two jack-o'-greens, plowboys with a plow, sowers, reapers, a wagon drawn by several yoke of oxen and carrying the tree, milkmaids singing, blacksmiths singing, wheelwrights singing, carpenters, butchers, shoemakers and, each with his boy, mastersweeps.

Sharp's instructions for the remainder of Episode II are as follows:

"When the wagon reaches the Maypit, the procession halts. The tree is ceremoniously removed; ivy, laurels and other greenery wound around it spirally; a large garland placed at the top; and then, in dead silence, it is solemnly raised to position. Directly this is acomplished the spectators raise a great shout and repeat three times, 'The pole is up.'

Jolly, Romping May Queen.

"Then the men congregate and, after a brief consultation, run forward to the May Queen, present her with a wreath of May blossoms, with ribbon streamers and rosettes for her dress, and escort her to a raised mound of grass where everyone may see her. She is kissed by the men, amid much laughter and merriment, and defends herself by boxing their ears. The woman chosen is a regular 'man's girl,' jolly, and of a romping kind, quite different from Ruskin's conventional May Queen.

"A large group is quickly formed round the Maypole in a ring, alternately men and women, and all take hands. The Maypole dance is then performed, 'Sellenger's Round' and 'Gathering Peascods.' Two other groups perform these dances around the jack-o'-greens, making one large center circle and two smaller ones, right and left."

Episode III is entitled "Padstow May Dance and Song," and Episode IV bears the caption "Morris Dancers and Country Dance and Recessional," but the action is virtually continuous. Sharp's instructions for these episodes follow:

"Strains of the May Song are heard, the crowd listens and falls back, the hobby horse enters from the left (or right) escorted by six or eight couples of men, gaily dressed and decorated with flowers, singing the May song, in which the assembled spectators join. As they make their appearance the crowd runs out, meets them and gathers round them in a ring, in the middle of which the horse and its attendant dance, the former every now and again dashing out and trying to catch one of the maidens, who with much laughter and occasional shrieks usually succeeds in avoiding his clumsy embraces.

"When the tune has been sung a few times, a slight pause is made; the horse sinks down with his head on the ground, the clubman drops on one knee and places his club on the horse's nose, while the crowd sings very solemnly the dirge-like strain, "O Where Is St George?" At the conclusion of this, a slight pause is made, and then the riotous May song is suddenly taken up again and the dance resumed.

Morris Dancers Enter.

"This may be repeated once or twice, when the proceedings are interrupted by the entrance of the Morris dancers.

"The dancers, all of them men, are 16 in number and are accompanied by a King and Queen, Witch and Fool, and hobby horses. The Witch and Fool head the procession, the former with his broom, and the latter with his stick, fox's tail and bladder, clearing the way. The King and Queen march at the head of the Morris dancers, the King beating time with his sword. The hobby horses prance round and aid the Witch and Fool in clearing a passage. The dancers move from side to center, then forward, dancing the 'Winster Processional Dance.' When the procession has reached a good position in the center of the ground, the tune changes and without pause the dancers perform the 'Winster Morris Reel.'

"When the Morris dance is finished the company disperses and amuses itself for awhile until the pipe-and-taborers and fiddlers strike up a dance tune. This is the signal for everyone to find a partner for a country dance. Groups are formed all over the ground and 'Black Nag' is danced, followed by a Longway's dance, e. g. 'Row well, ye Mariners.' On the conclusion of the latter the dancers, who are already in processional formation, dance off the ground to the 'Helston Furry Processional Dance,' disappearing in different groups through the several exits."

APOLLO CLUB TO GIVE LAST CONCERT OF SEASON TUESDAY

Miss Sophie Braslau of the Metropolitan Opera Company to Give Russian Song Group.

The Apollo Club, directed by Charles Galloway, will give its last concert of the season Tuesday night at the Odeon, with Miss Sophie Braslau, contralto, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, as soloist. Miss Braslau sang at the Veiled Prophet's ball two years ago at the Coliseum, and so impressed officers of the club that she was engaged for this concert.

She will sing the recitative and aria, "O Mio Fernando," from "La Favorita;" a group of Russian songs by Tschaikowsky, Arensky, Moussorgsky, Rimsky-Korsakoff and Karganoff, and a group of lyrics by Salter, Halsey, Seiler and Korbay.

The club, composed of about 80 male voices, will offer two old favorites, "The Soldiers' Chorus," from "Faust," and Nevin's "The Rosary." In addition it will sing Gilchrist's "Drinking Song," Palmgren's "I'm Coming Home," and Koellner's "Daybreak in the Woods."

"SIEGFRIED" TO BE GIVEN AT ROBISON FIELD ON JULY 12

Open-Air Performance Will Be Produced by Metropolitan Opera Stars.

The Grand Opera Committee announces that arrangements have been concluded with the Metropolitan Opera Company for an open-air performance of Wagner's music drama, "Siegfried," at Robison Field on the evening of July 12.

An all-star cast is promised, including Mme. Johanna Gadski as Bruennhilde, Mme. Ernestine Schumann-Heink as Erda, Clarence Whitehall as Wotan, Johannes Sembach as Siegfried, Miss Frieda Hempel as the Forest Bird, Carl Braun as Fafner, Albert Reiss as Mime and Otto Goritz as Alberich.

The Metropolitan Opera House orchestra of 100 musicians will be conducted by Arthur Bodansky, who has just completed his first year as conductor of German opera at the Metropolitan, and whose success was immediate.

The Metropolitan company is making a post-season tour of seven cities, giving two performances a week. In this city a special operatic stage will be erected directly in front of the Robison Field grandstand, and covering the home plate of the baseball diamond. A lighting plant will be installed for the occasion, and the acoustics will be arranged by means of sounding boards at the top and rear of the stage. The performance will be a duplicate of that given by the same company last year in the stadium of Harvard University.

Only the seats in the grandstand will be sold, and the prices will be at the rate of $1, $2, $2,50 and $5, the last for box seats.

NOTED AUSTRIAN COMPOSER TO PLAY HERE TOMORROW

Group of compositions by Percy Grainger.

(a) Mock Morris Dance.
(b) Colonial Song.
(c) Molly on the Shore.
(d) Irish Tune from County Derry.
(e) Shepherds, Hey.

Grainger is noted for the sunniness of his compositions and for their use of folk sings. Both as composer and pianist he has been one of the most popular musicians in London for the last four years. He was a protege of Grieg, and Richard Strauss is one of his admirers.

N. Y. SYMPOHNY ORCHESTRA WILL APPEAR AT ODEON MAY 11

Second Famous Musical Organization to Be Brought Here This Year.

Under the auspices of the St. Louis Symphony Society, the New York Symphony Orchestra, directed by Walter Damrosch, will give a concert at the Odeon on the evening of May 11, presenting Josef Hofman, the eminent pianist, as soloist.

The New York Symphony Orchestra is more than 40 years old, and was founded by the father of the present director, Leopold Damrosch. The father and son have been the only conductors, so that it is often called the Damrosch orchestra.

The orchestra is making a tour of three months, during which it will appear in most of the leading American cities. This will make two famous visiting orchestras which the Symphony Society has brought to St. Louis this year, the first having been the Boston Symphony Orchestra at the beginning of the season. The New York Orchestra has in Harry H. Flagler a financial backer similar to Col, Henry W. Higginson of the Boston orchestra.

BLIND MUSICIAN'S CONCERT

Program to Be Given at the Victoria Theater Tuesday Night.

A blind musicians' concert will be given Tuesday night at the Victoria Theater, under the direction of Arthur Schroeer, a blind violinist and pianist.

Those taking part in the program will be Joseph L. Huber, teacher of wind instruments at the Missouri School for the Blind, who appeared with success as a concert performed at the San Francisco and San Diego expositions; Thomas Dee, an accomplished blind violinist and baritone singer; Miss Edith Cook, soprano, teacher of vocal music at the School for the Blind; Edward F. Endicott, tenor; Louis Jenkins, basso, and Florence Fitzgibbons and Neil Lambur, child dancers.

Haymarket Rioter Dies.

CHICAGO, April 22.—Oscar W. Neebe one of the eight men sentenced to death or imprisonment following the Haymarket riot, died today at his home on the North Side. He was sentenced to 15 years in the penitentiary, but was pardoned in 1893 by Gov. Altgeld. Neebe was the only one of the defendants on whom the death penalty was not imposed. He was 65 years old.

U-Boats Halt Silk Shipments.

TOKIO, April 22.—Enemy submarine activity in the Mediterranean has practically caused a suspension of silk shipments to Italy. About $25,000,000 worth of Japanese silk is sent to Italy every year and the cessation of shipment is causing loss to Japanese as well as inconvenience to the United States.

Cabanne Association to Meet.

GERMAN PAPER SUGGESTS ABOLISHING POSTAGE STAMP

By Use of Franking Machine Journal Believes Country Could Save $25,000,000 a Year.

MUNICH, Germany, April 22.—One of the most easily effected economies in the postal service, not only of Germany but of any country, would be the abolition of the postage stamp, the Neuste Nachrichten points out. It recommends the substitution of a franking machine for the postage stamp, and remarks that this change would save Germany nearly $25,000,000 a year.

The franking machine, by a single operation, would not only imprint the letter with a device indicating that the postal charges had been prepaid, but would also put on the postmark and obviate the necessity of using the canceling machine. This method is already used in Bavaria and in New Zealand, while the German field post has taught the people of Germany that the change is entirely practicable. "The postage stamp," concludes the Nachrichten, "though a great invention, is now obsolete. Germany has invented the franking system, and by developing it she will be doing civilization a great service."

Duluth Clears First Freighter of Year.

SUPERIOR, Wis., April 22.—The whaleback steamer J. C. Colgate, with a cargo of wheat for Buffalo, cleared from the local harbor early this morning, the first vessel to leave the head of the lakes for lower lake ports this season. At the Great Northern ore docks loading operations were started today.

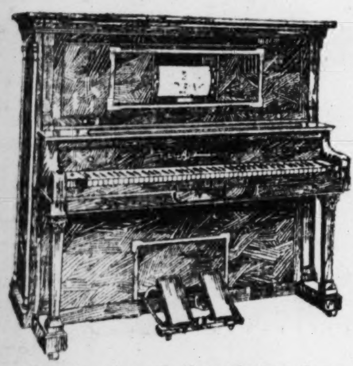
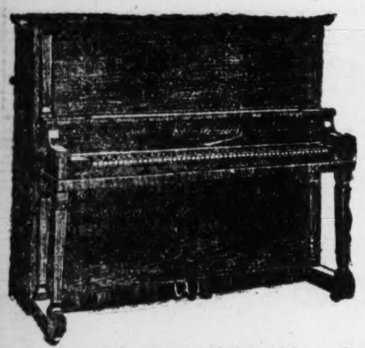
Big sales Saturday make it certain that these pianos will not last the week out



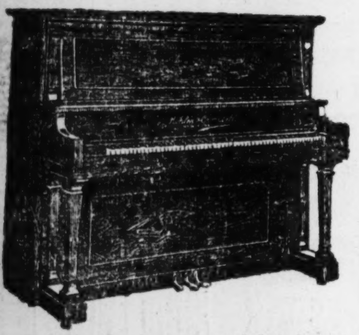
This is one of the player-piano styles included in this sale and has been a good seller. Regular selling price is $500—now you can buy it for.................... $398

And Save $102.

24 rolls of music, stool, scarf and bench included.



This is the regular $325 style and is especially pleasing in mahogany. Ten of these beautiful instruments are now priced while they last, at...................... $248



This is the largest and handsomest of the three styles pictured herewith, a style selling regularly at $350. Ten instruments of which we have purchased and are included in the sale at........................ $248

SATURDAY was a big day in sales. There were more people in the store than we could wait on conveniently. Sales piled up until 28 of the 45 Kohler & Campbell instruments we are selling at reduced prices were sold. This left 17 instruments to sell, with the beginning of business Monday morning, WHICH MAKES IT CERTAIN THAT THE REMAINING PIANOS WILL NOT LAST THIS WEEK OUT.

You should come in right away. This is an opportunity you ought not miss.

The pianos are right; WE KNOW THEY ARE RIGHT. We have sold hundreds of them and know that there isn't a more fixed or known value in the whole piano world than the Kohler & Campbell piano.

While these few instruments last, you can procure one at from $52 to $140 less than regular price and actual worth.

If there is a piano price that is known in St. Louis, it is that the Kohler & Campbell price is $300, $325 and $350.

NOW you can take your choice of these three styles for $248—and you should lose no time in coming in and making a selection.

15 player-pianos, also

Included in this purchase are 15 player-pianos, which sell regularly at $500, but which will be sold at $398 each, a saving of $102 each. These will also be sold subject to the same terms, namely: That you make a small cash payment at the time you make your selection and divide the balance into payments to suit your convenience, extending over a period of three years. 24 rolls of music (your own selection), stool, scarf and bench included with each player-piano, and you can exchange the rolls for 5c each indefinitely.

Extraordinary Bargains in Used Instruments

DU PONT, CANDIDATE FOR PRESIDENT, TO BE HERE TUESDAY

Republican Aspirant of Delaware to Speak at Mercantile Club Luncheon in His Honor.

Political interest in St. Louis yesterday centered in the coming visit Tuesday of Gen. T. Coleman du Pont of Delaware, an entry in the contest for the Republican nomination for President. He is the candidate of a recently created organization in New York which is demanding the nomination of a business man for President, and starts with the indorsement of Delaware.

Gen. du Pont will speak at 1 p. m. Tuesday at the Mercantile Club. He will discuss what he terms rational preparedness, as opposed to militarism on the one hand and inadequate preparedness on the other, and will endeavor to convince those who hear him that agricultural and commercial preparedness are as essential to the welfare of the country as military preparedness.

It is expected that Gen. du Pont, on account of the keen interest in the vicinity of St. Louis in the good roads movement, will devote a considerable part of his speech to that subject. He was for many years president of the National Good Roads Congress, and, as an object lesson to his State, he has undertaken to build a road 200 feet wide across the entire State, a distance of 100 miles, and present it to the State. Road building is his hobby, and he spends much time in the camps with the laborers who do the construction work.

Gen. du Pont will outline the issues upon which he is making the race for the nomination. Former Judge Henry S. Caulfield will preside at a luncheon to be given to the candidate by members of the club at 12 noon, and will introduce him to the audience. Arrangements have been made by the club for the admission of all who wish to hear him.

Nagel Arranges Meeting.

The meeting was arranged for Gen. du Pont, who obtains his title from the fact that he has been for years a General of the Delaware National Guard, by Charles Nagel, former Secretary of Commerce and Labor, who served with Du Pont on the Republican National Committee. Thomas K. Niedringhaus, retiring Republican National Committeeman, Otto F. Stifel and Jeptha D. Howe made arrangements for the reception.

Gen. du Pont will arrive in St. Louis at 7 a. m. Tuesday, and will be here until midnight, when he will depart for Chicago to speak before the Hamilton Club Wednesday.

Du Pont is the fourth presidential [illegible]didate to visit Missouri since the [illegible]paign opened. United States Sen[illegible] John W. Weeks of Massachus[illegible]s, has made several visits to Missouri, and an active campaign in his behalf has been conducted in this State. Then came former Senator Burton of Ohio, and next former Vice President Fairbanks of Indiana. Weeks is the only one of the presidential candidates who has any Missouri delegates pledged. The delegates are all uninstructed.

Gubernatorial Situation.

There was considerable activity among Republican politicians yesterday, who were trying to iron out the gubernatorial situation. An effort was made to induce the supporters of John E. Swanger of Sedalia, and former Judge Henry Lamm also of Sedalia, to unite on Charles D. Morris of St. Joseph.

Swanger has the support of the Kiel-Graves-Schmoll faction, and Lamm of the Stifel-Koeln-Howe faction. There is much bitterness between these factions, and there seems to be little prospect of getting them united on a candidate for Governor.

The Kiel-Graves-Schmoll faction has some fear that Swanger may be too dry to appeal to the St. Louis voters. The wet and dry issue is a very troublesome one for the gubernatorial candidates, as both sides insist upon having a candidate suited exactly to their respective demands.

Claims for Morris and Lamm.

The backers of Morris insist that he is wet enough to please the wets and dry enough to please the drys, and that he is the only candidate who could poll the full party vote in November. The supporters of Judge Lamm insist that, on account of his good record on the Supreme bench, he would be 25,000 votes stronger than the party in November and that his nomination is equivalent to election.

The St. Louis supporters of Swanger apparently are worried over a bill he introduced in the Legislature in 1895, when he was a member from Sullivan County, providing for the closing of dramshops from 1 a. m. until 5 a. m. This bill was passed by the House and defeated by the Senate, but subsequently was passed, and has been a law for several years.

Swanger said yesterday that he stood squarely for local option, which meant, of course, that he was opposed to State-wide prohibition. He said that he thought the fact that he introduced the saloon-closing law ought not to be held against him, as the law had afterwards been passed and had met with public approval.

Judge Lamm will be in St. Louis tomorrow for a few hours, on his way to De Soto to attend the Thirteenth District Congressional Convention, which will be held Tuesday, for the election of two delegates to the National Convention. Both Judge Lamm and Morris will speak at the convention.

Morris was in St. Louis yesterday, conferring with his friends. He has not been able to get the promise of any organization support in St. Louis, but says that even if events do not shape themselves so that the organization will back him, he will get many votes in the primary election. Thomas R. Marks, chairman of the Republican Executive Committee of Kansas City, who was here, said he thought the Kansas City organization would support Morris.

SCOTT LIKELY TO MAKE REPORT TO CABINET TUESDAY

Chief of Staff to Return to Washington at Once and Lay Facts Regarding Military Situation in Mexico Before the President.

He Is Believed to Agree With Funston That Troops Can Go No Farther Without Reinforcements.

Administration Is Expected to Decide on Recall if Alternative Is Greatly Enlarged Expedition.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—A decision as to whether American troops will be withdrawn from Mexico may be reached by President Wilson and his Cabinet Tuesday. This was indicated tonight when it was reported from San Antonio that Major-General Scott, sent by Secretary Baker to investigate the military problems confronted by Gen. Funston, might be back in Washington in time for his report to be laid before the regular meeting of the Cabinet on that day.

Secretary Baker declined to discuss the probable meaning of Gen. Scott's decision to hasten back to the capital without extending his quest for information beyond conferences with Gen. Funston and his officers at department headquarters. Officials consistently have refused to say anything whatever about the problems under consideration since the request for the withdrawal of the troops came from Gen. Carranza.

Needs More Men to Advance.

It is known, however, from border advices that Gen. Funston feels he cannot go farther with the pursuit of Villa than he already has gone unless he is heavily reinforced and his hands freed in dealing with problems of supply and information beyond the border. Gen. Scott's decision to return at once generally was taken to mean that he had reached the same conclusion and would so report to Secretary Baker.

In this connection it is recalled that President Wilson specifically rejected plans for a more extensive movement in pursuit of Villa mapped out by the general staff, immediately after the Columbus raid. The scope of those plans never has been revealed, but it is understood generally they contemplated a virtual military occupation of that part of Northern Mexico in which the bandits might seek refuge. A big army would have been required, and the whole territory would have been swept thoroughly, so that no Villa follower could escape.

The administration felt, it has been reported, that any such movement as this was certain to lead to war with Mexico. The development of opposition to the smaller expedition is held by administration officials to have borne out this view. This opposition, they point out, has developed despite a formal announcement by the President himself that the sole object was the capture of Villa and that the sovereignty of Mexico would not be imperiled.

There is no reason to believe the administration has changed its viewpoint. If Gen. Scott recommends that the expedition either be freed of the restraints imposed by its friendly nature and largely reinforced or withdrawn entirely there seems little doubt that the latter course will be followed.

Could Withdraw in 10 Days.

Military officials on the border apparently take the same view of the probabilities of the situation. They already have estimated, according to press dispatches, that Gen. Pershing's men could be brought out in 10 days, without being exposed to serious danger of attack en route.

Secretary Baker gave out no dispatches from the border today. Only routine matters were reported. The State Department also was without advices as to the military situation, although it received confirmation of the fact that Carranza currency had dropped in value in Mexico City to 2 cents on the dollar. Officials said the financial outlook of the de facto Government appeared to be increasingly gloomy.

JOINT REPORT IS WIRED BY SCOTT AND FUNSTON

Officers Silent as to Its Character, but They Are Believed to Be in Accord.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., April 22.—Gen. Scott and Gen. Funston sent to the War Department today what was said to be a joint telegraphic report as a result of their discussion of the Mexican situation. Neither would discuss its character, but it was taken as an indication that they were in accord on recommendations that Gen. Scott will make to Secretary Baker when he arrives in Washington.

It was said Gen. Scott probably would depart for Washington tomorrow.

Since his arrival here last night Gen. Scott has been with Gen. Fun-

SHAKSPEARE TO BE HONORED IN VEILED PROPHET EVENT

Pageant Themes Will Be Taken From Plays and Grand Ball Features Will Harmonize.

International renown will come to St. Louis this year through the celebration of the Shakspeare tercentenary. Nowhere else will this celebration take on more varied and befitting forms.

Information has been given from time to time of other features, but today the first announcement is made that the Veiled Prophet's annual coming will be devoted to the honor of the memory of Shakspeare. The edict proclaims that the plays of Shakspeare will furnish the theme for illustration in the pageant of the night of Oct. 3. More than that, the great ball will be Shakspearean, in music, in decorations, in coronation, in dancing.

The 20 floats of the pageant will represent the most striking scenes in as many plays. The 150 followers of the Prophet chosen to occupy the floats will represent the best-known characters of Shakspeare.

While the official proclamation is now issued for the first time, preparations have been in progress for several months. They promise a spectacle which will surpass all predecessors, splendid as is the record which the Veiled Prophet has made in the more than one-third of a century of annual visits.

WILL PAY $205 DUE AUTHOR OF 'HOME, SWEET HOME' 64 YEARS

Money From U. S. Was Coming to John Howard Payne While He Was Consul at Tunis.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—After 64 years the United States is prepared to pay to the heirs of John Howard Payne, author of "Home, Sweet Home," money remaining due to him from the treasury upon his death at Tunis, April 9, 1852, while stationed there as American Consul. The sum due is $205.92.

The Treasury Department is seeking information as to the wherabouts of heirs. The original bill proposed to pay the amount to Mrs. Eloise E. Luquer, "daughter and sole heir." As passed and approved by the President, April 3, last, the act provides for payment to "his heirs."

Mrs. Luquer still lives in New York, according to information laid before Congress. But the author of "Home, Sweet Home" had eight brothers and sisters. Two sisters died in infancy; one brother lived to be 11 years old; the other brothers and sisters dying respectively at 23, 32, 49, 60 and 67 years of age, while the song writer lived to be 63 years of age.

MAN TO SPEND $6000 TO TEST VALUE OF WOMAN'S EDUCATION

One Girl From New Orleans and Another From New York to Be Given College Course.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Louis A. Hoffmann, a bachelor not yet 35 years old, a newspaper publisher of New Orleans and New York, and head of L. A. Hoffmann, importer of newspaper supplies at 212 Broadway, announced today that he would give college education to two girls, one from New York and one from his home town, New Orleans. He wants to learn from observation whether a college education for a woman pays.

"Personally, I am of the opinion that every girl should have a college education," he said, "but every now and then some one arises to announce that a woman doesn't need it. I shall watch the progress of these girls and their after lives, and make up my own mind. It will cost me $6000 to educate the two and I have placed this amount in a trust fund."

PRESIDENT JOINS IN PATRIOTIC DEMONSTRATION IN A THEATER

Crowd Cheers When Pictures of Him Are Shown—He Applauds Films of Troops in Mexico.

WASHINGTON, Aprill 22.—President Wilson joined in a patriotic demonstration on the submarine issue during a vaudeville program at a theater here tonight. Soon after the President entered his box, moving pictures showing him going to the Capitol to deliver his submarine message to Congress were thrown on the screen. The audience stood and cheered while the orchestra played the Star Spangle Banner.

The President bowed his acknowledgement. Later he joined in applauding pictures showing the American troops in Mexico.

FARE INCREASE OR RECEIVER, M'KINLEY LINE LAWYER SAYS

"I Don't Give Damn for Figures, Road Lost $399,849 in 1915," He Declares.

E. D. BELL ON STAND

City Counselor Attempts to Show Statements of Company Are Juggled.

Henry I. Green, chief counsel for the Illinois Traction Co. (McKinley System), declared to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday afternoon at the adjournment of a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission in session at the Planters Hotel, that the company must be allowed to increase its rates between St. Louis and Granite City from 5 to 10 cents or else the road immediately would go into the hands of a receiver.

"I don't give a fiddler's dam," he said, "how figures are being used against us. We have the plain testimony of our auditor that in 1915 the road lost $399,849, and unless relief is given there must be a receivership. If we are beaten then we better quit. We cannot carry passengers for less than 5 cents when it costs us 6 cents to carry them."

On the other hand, City Counselor Daues said he was waiting to get a chance at cross-examination of B. E. Bramble, chief auditor of the road, to show that the figures of the road have been so twisted in statements made to the commission that the facts will show that it is upon a profitable basis.

In the testimony given before the commission by E. D. Bell, local superintendent of the traction company, it was stated by Bell that the net loss by the system in 1915 was about $18,000. Attorney Green said that this merely represented the loss on operating expenses and did not take into consideration interest on stocks and bonds.

Juggling Is Alleged.

While Bell was upon the witness stand Daues attempted to show that the company had charged the bulk of its expenses against the suburban operations. E. C. Smith, engineer for the Public Utilities Department, assisting Counselor Daues, presented to Bell a table of figures showing that the suburban traffic of the McKinley System had been charged with $155,319 expenses and that the interurban traffic had been charged with only $67,533.

Smith questioned Bell regarding some of the items in detail. In one case he showed that salaries and expenses of general officers had been charged in the table showing a deficit in suburban traffic, so that the suburban lines paid $5543.10 of the charge and the interurban division paid only $1.76. Bell was asked if the general officers did not divide their work equally between the suburban and interurban branches of the line. Bell said he did not think he was the proper witness upon this subject.

Some of the other items regarding which questions were asked were charged as follows:

ITEM.	Charge Suburban.	Charge Interurban.
General office supplies	$4,392.10	$ 3.52
Legal expenses	2,600.85	Nothing
General expenses	4,590.29	237.60
Valuation expenses	2,438.89	Nothing
Insurance	1,860.74	Nothing

The witness did not make a direct response to any of the questions as to why the suburban traffic was so heavily charged and the interurban traffic was let off so lightly. When a question was asked regarding the insurance which is charged entirely against the suburban traffic, Henry I. Green, representing the railroad, told the commission's examiner that he would present evidence bearing upon this point at a later time.

Clerk Hire Inequality Shown.

Another item of clerk hire was brought out, in which a charge is made of $4392 against the suburban service and $3.52 against the interurban service. Bell said that the same clerks looked after the affairs of both systems.

Wilbur La Poe Jr., examiner for the commission, commented that he could not see, in view of the fact that the system is made up of three parts—suburban, interurban and bridge—why the expenses were not proportioned between the different divisions. Attorney Green replied that in many instances the division of expenses was a matter of judgment of counsel and he promised other witnesses would explain everything.

Bell said that he did not know whether the freight carried by the road showed a profit or loss. Sixteen freight cars are in service. Bell said that the interurban lines received 15 cents for bringing a passenger from Granite City into St. Louis, while only 5 cents is charged for suburban fare. He said the McKinley rates are much lower than those charged by lines crossing Eads bridge.

Bell testified that the McKinley bridge tolls amounted to about $40,000 or $45,000 a year. These are derived from foot and vehicle traffic.

P. Taylor Bryan, representing the Business Men's League, asked Bell if he included this $45,000 in the earnings of the road when he testified that the suburban traffic showed a net loss of $18,000 in 1915. The witness replied that he had not included this sum in his statement.

Bell also testified that the company receives an income from certain rentals and concessions upon

POLICEMAN FIRES 17 SHOTS AT DOG WITHOUT HITTING IT

Goes for More Ammunition and Man and Boy Take Animal Away.

The wild marksmanship of a patrolman said to be attached to the Angelica Street Police Station, was responsible for the escape yesterday of a dog that had been condemned to death by the city dogcatcher on the levee near Ferry street, according to negro drivers in the Garbage Department.

The policeman fired 17 shots at the dog, without injuring it, and when he departed for more ammunition, an old man and a boy who had watched the attempted execution of "Fido," took possession of the dog and carried it away.

One of the negroes employed in the garbage division reported the incident to Charles Laxton, assistant to Street Commissioner Slater. The negro said the dog had been subjected to sulphur fumes at the dog pound and was presumably dead when shipped with other dog carcasses to the reduction plant in East St. Louis. The dog revived when it was being unloaded at the city's barge landing, and the patrolman was summoned by negroes to end its life. After the 17 shots had been fired at the tottering animal, without touching him, one of the negroes is said to have exclaimed: "Don't fire no more in dis direction or you'll torpedo dis bawge sure."

DEVELOPMENT OF U. S. MILITARY TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM BEGUN

Automobile Organizations Lend Aid to War College in This Phase of Preparedness.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Development of a system of military transportation as one step toward national preparedness has been undertaken by representatives of railroads and automobile industries with the co-operation of the War College, it was announced here today on behalf of the Society of Automobile Engineers.

A conference was held at the War College in Washington last Monday, the society's statement disclosed, and suggestions declared to be favorably regarded were made that motor trucks corps be placed under the jurisdiction of the Quartermaster's Department, and the railroad transportation phase guided by the Engineers Corps of the Army.

It was stated that the Board of Directors of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce had authorized its executives "to meet the military authorities at every point" and that the American Automobile Association and the American Railway Association committees would lend co-operation.

CHILD IS BORN HALF AN HOUR AFTER MOTHER DIES FROM FALL

Infant Is Found to Be Normal, Well Developed, and Doctors Say It Probably Will Live.

NEW YORK, April 22.—The birth of a child half an hour after its mother had met a violent death by a fall from a window in Brooklyn this afternoon was reported tonight from the Long Island College Hospital.

While sitting by the areaway of a third-floor flat, Mrs. Marie Fucchera, 35 years old, who held in her lap her year-old daughter, leaned from a window to call to a neighbor, lost her balance and fell to the basement. At the hospital, where mother and child were taken, the child was found to be only lacerated, but the mother apparently had died instantly from a factured skull and internal injuries.

An examination disclosed that birth of another baby was expected and a Caesarean operation was performed. The new baby weighs seven and a half pounds, is normal and well developed, and probably will live.

6 OF 8 AEROPLANES WITH U. S. ARMY BURNED AS WORTHLESS

Capt. Foulois and Entire Command on Way to Border to Equip Serviceable Fliers.

COLUMBUS, N. H., April 22.—Six of the eight aeroplanes which have been used by the expeditionary fliers in Mexico have been destroyed as worthless junk, it was learned here tonight. Two of the planes flown here earlier in the week are undergoing repairs.

With the halt in field operations, it was determined that none of the planes remaining in Mexico could be flown, and all were burned. Capt. B. D. Foulois, commanding the first aero squadron, and his entire command are on their way here from the field in motor cars to supervise, equip and prepare planes for service in the high altitudes of Mexico

28,500 INDICATED ATTENDANCE FOR CITIZENS' MILITARY CAMPS

Secretary Baker Asks Congress for $454,085 for Their Expenses.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—War Department reports indicate that attendance at the army instruction camps for civilians this summer will approximate 28,500.

Secretary Baker, reporting to Congress today on the Department's plans for the camps, asked for an appropriation of $454,085 for their expenses.

FINED $1000 FOR RACING REPORT

BUTTE, Mont., April 22.—The Postal Telegraph Co. was fined $1000 in the Criminal Court here today on conviction of transmitting information on which racing bets were made.

Judge Donlan, who imposed the fine, said it was too small for a second offense, but he could make it no larger. An appeal was taken.

GERMAN-AMERICAN PLOT TO CONTROL ELECTIONS ALLEGED

New York World Prints Letters and Evidence of Nation-Wide Campaign.

B. H. RIDDER "DIRECTOR"

O. B. Colquitt Solicited Support as a Candidate for U. S. Senator in Texas.

NEW YORK, April 23.—The World prints this (Sunday) morning original letters and other evidence that reveal, it says, a nation-wide campaign to elect United States Senators and Representatives in the interest of the Imperial German Government.

It declares that candidates for the highest offices under this Government have yielded to German pressure and are fighting against the President of the United States and American interests for the Kaiser and the interest of Germany. It declares that the driving force which was back of the McLemore and Gore resolutions is shown to have crystalized into a national campaign to use the German-American vote all over the United States to elect Senators, Representatives and other Federal officials who are for Germany and against the policies of the United States as formulated by the Wilson administration.

The World presents proof, through his own letters, that Oscar B. Colquitt, former Governor of Texas and at present candidate for the United States Senate from that State, has "abjectly surrendered to German dictation."

The former Governor of an American State, the area of which exceeds that of the German empire by over 50,000 square miles, is shown by his own signed letters pleading for German support "on the boast that his record proves him to have been more loyal to the Kaiser and the German nation than his rivals."

Facts Brought Out.

The World says that the documentary evidence in its possession shows these facts:

1. That central campaign headquarters to control United States elections in the interest of Germany have been established in New York City.
2. That these headquarters dictate what candidates for offices under the Government of the United States shall receive the solid German-American vote.
3. That candidates eligible for this support must record themselves as opposed to the foreign policies of the Wilson administration.
4. That Bernard H. Ridder, editor of the New York Staats-Zeitung, is active director in charge of the New York headquarters.
5. The Alphonse G. Koelble charged recently by the World with conducting a clearing house for the German-American Alliance at 80 Maiden Lane and with directing the Gore and McLemore resolutions lobby, is one of the assisting directors.
6. That Henry Weisman, president of the German-American Alliance, is another of the assisting directors.

The history of former Gov. Colquitt's campaign for election to the United States Senate from Texas, shows how the scheme to elect a pro-German President, Senate and House was seized upon by the most powerful German interests in this country, how it developed, how it was put into execution and with what measure of success it is meeting.

The former Texas Governor announced his candidacy for the United States Senate and began his campaign in the latter part of 1915. Opposed to him in the race are Congressmen R. L. Henry, Dr. S. P. Brooks, ex-Gov. T. M. Campbell and Senator Charles A. Culberson.

The Colquitt candidacy was officially noted by German agents. His vehement outbursts against the President's Mexican policies and his pro-German speeches inclined the German interests to view him with favor. Accordingly on Dec. 15, 1915, Alphonse G. Koelble wrote a letter formally tendering him an offer of assistance.

Here Is Colquitt's Letter.

This letter Colquitt ignored until after Congressman Henry appeared on the scene as a rival for German favors and in fact had convinced German interests for the moment that he was more pro-German than Colquitt. Thereupon, alarmed, Colquitt sent Koelble the following letter in reply, a facsimile of which is reproduced in the World today:

Colquitt Campaign Headquarters.
R. M. Colquitt, Manager,
Dallas, Tex., March 31, 1916.

Hon. A. G. Koelble, No. 80 Maiden Lane, New York City:

My Dear Sir: Referring to your letter of Dec. 18, in which you tender your assistance, if any you could render, I beg to hand you herewith a copy of a letter I wrote yesterday to Mr. Bernard Ridder, which explains itself. I can hardly credit the report which reaches me from Waco that Mr. Ridder has written to the editor of the German paper at that place urging the support of Hon. R. L. Henry, inasmuch as Mr. Henry has been vicious in his attacks

Candidate for U. S. Senate Who Bid for German-American Vote

OSCAR B. COLQUITT.

REPORTS REACH JUAREZ OF RIOTS IN MEXICO CITY

Taken in Some Quarters to Indicate That Fall of Carranza Is at Hand.

By CLAIR KENAMORE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

EL PASO, Tex., April 22.—Ominous reports of rioting in Mexico City percolated into Juarez today and received much credence from persons who have held to the belief that the fall of the Carranza Government was at hand. The further decline of Carranza paper money to $1.75 for $100 showed the weakness of the Government as estimated in financial circles.

The reports of rioting which reached Juarez over military wires, but which were not fathered by any reliable source, did not make clear the cause of the troubles. One report was that the Clericals had started a demonstration against Carranza and that the he had fled to Guadalajara. Another was that the troops had revolted and the First Chief was without an army.

It is firmly believed in Juarez that a change of the Government is imminent and some of the officers even believe that it already has taken place. Gen. Gavira, commandant of the Juarez garrison, and other officers also are a bit puzzled and alarmed over the movement into Mexico today at Columbus of a detachment of infantry reported to number 1200 men.

Gen. Gavira Is Puzzled.

"It is incomprehensible to me," said Gen. Gavira. "There appears to be every reason to believe that the American troops are to be withdrawn, but the nearer draws the time to take them out, the greater are the forces sent into Mexico by the Americans.

"The purpose of this expedition, as I understand it, is to capture one man, Villa, a notorious bandit. Why, then, the four-inch guns? Long trains of motor trucks and mounted batteries are not necessary to take one man who is now known to be wounded. At times I am almost forced to the conclusion that intervention in my unhappy country is in the minds of President Wilson and his advisers."

An American business man who has lived in Torreon and Durango for 14 years returned to the border today. He declares that conditions in those cities are worse than at any time since the wars began five years ago.

"These cities are more populous than before the war," he said, "owing to the influx of the starving people from the outlying ranches. There is but little food in the country and what there is, is kept concealed for fear of confiscation, or the owner fears that he will be forced to sell it for Carranza currency.

Wild Reports Circulated.

"There have been bread riots in the towns and the women have attacked the soldiers who endeavored to disperse the mobs. On one occasion one of the soldiers was killed.

"The wildest reports are circulated. One of these is that American soldiers had killed 600 women and children. The ignorant people accept these stories and there is, as a result, a great deal of race hatred. There are not more than 400 Americans left in the two cities, but their condition is very serious."

VANDIVER TELLS GARDNER TO WAIT FOR PROMOTION

Says General Business Rule Does Not Now Warrant His Elevation to Governorship.

Willard D. Vandiver, Assistant United States Treasurer, in charge of the Subtreasury in St. Louis, who withdrew a month ago from the contest for the Democratic nomination for Governor, yesterday, in announcing his support of John M. Atkinson for the nomination, told of a visit Fred D. Gardener, another candidate, made to him Thursday, soliciting his support. In telling of the visit Vandiver repeated some political advice he gave Gardner.

"Gardner called on me and asked me to support him for the nomination," Vandiver said. "Our conversation was not unfriendly, but I told him that, as he was running on a business platform, it would not be out of the way for me to suggest that the general rule of business is to promote men on their records and the work they actually have done.

"I told him that he did not start as the head of the coffin company he owns when he first stepped in the door, that he reached his position by gradual promotion, and that the same rule should apply to politics.

"I told him that no man should be elected Governor the first time he shows himself interested in politics. Statesmanship requires training and experience the same as the coffin or banking business. We would not select a man as head of a bank because he had been a good merchant. Neither should we select a man as head of the State because he has achieved success in a particular line of business. The business rule should be applied.

"I have known Atkinson 20 years, during which period he has been in the public service 16 years as County Clerk of Ripley County, member of the Legislature, Speaker of the House, Assistant Attorney-General and chairman of the Public Service Commission. I say these things without reflecting at all on the other candidates, all of whom are clever gentlemen."

BRYAN CAN GO TO DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION AS AN ALTERNATE

Two of Friends Who Were Elected Delegates Will Appoint Him If He So Desires.

OMAHA, Neb., April 22.—William J. Bryan can go to the Democratic national convention if he wants to, even though he has just been decisively beaten in Nebraska for delegate-at-large. Two of Bryan's friends were elected delegates, W. H. Thompson and J. J. Thomas. A delegate in Nebraska is permitted to select his own alternate, and this alternate has the privilege of the floor at the convention. Either Thompson or Thomas will appoint Bryan as his alternate if Bryan will accept the appointment.

Bryan's friends are saying that he will take part in the St. Louis convention just as though he had won in the Nebraska primaries.

VON JAGOW AND GERARD CONFER NEARLY AN HOUR

Interview of German Foreign Minister and American Ambassador Said to Have Been for Exchanges of Information.

Chancellor to Reach Berlin Today From Front, Where He Discussed U. S. Note With the Kaiser.

German Public Opinion Expected in Washington to Dictate Reply, Which May Be Ready by Wednesday.

BERLIN, April 22, via London April 23.—James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador, called on Foreign Minister von Jagow this evening and was closeted with him for almost an hour. Their discussion was on an informative nature. Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg will return to Berlin tomorrow (Sunday) morning but a reply to the American note need not be expected for several days, possibly not before Wednesday.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The State Department within the next 48 hours expects to receive from Ambassador Gerard a detailed report concerning the manner in which President Wilson's demands have been received by the German people. The report will be based, to a great extent at least, on the manner in which the principal newspapers in Germany have commented on the note.

Secretary Lansing already has received a report from Gerard advising him of a conversation he had with Foreign Minister von Jagow when the note was presented, and also a short general statement of the condition of public opinion. The administration appears to be convinced that Germany's reply to the demands will reflect to a great extent the feelings of the German people rather than the opinions of the bureaucrats and war lords. For this reason Secretary Lansing is extremely anxious to ascertain just how the note has been received by the press.

The State Department today was without advices of any sort concerning Germany's probable answer. Responsible officials declined to speculate upon future developments. Reports which have been circulated from Washington to the effect that the administration would not tolerate a delay of even a few days by Germany in answering the note are not taken seriously by those advisers of the administration who are most capable of expressing President Wilson's feelings.

Rush Answer Not Expected.

There is a general feeling at the State Department that Germany cannot be expected to rush an answer to Washington until ample opportunity has been had for the Kaiser to discuss the situation thoroughly with his advisers. The President will be surprised if an answer reaches Washington before the latter part of next week.

The White House appears to feel that the only danger in delay at this time is that some German submarine commander might attack another passenger steamer.

While there is no actual basis for the opinion, at least as far as can be ascertained, there is a general feeling in official circles that the German admiralty already has taken steps to remove such elements of danger. It is believed that submarine commanders already have been instructed to use great care in ascertaining the character of ships before attacking them, pending a settlement of the issue.

Through the press Germany received warnings of the drastic nature of the President's note several days before it was dispatched to Berlin and it is believed the foreign office impressed upon the admiralty the dangers which would arise if an irresponsible submarine commander should stage another Sussex tragedy.

Tentative Plans to Meet Break.

The United States Government has made tentative plans to cope with every conceivable situation which would result from the severance of diplomatic relations with Germany. For obvious reasons officials tonight deemed it unwise to discuss the details. There is reason for believing, however, that some of the plans have to do with the safety of American citizens in the German Empire and that others have to do with American supervision of German interests in the countries at war with Germany. Numerous dispatches on these subjects are understood to have been sent to diplomatic representatives abroad, particularly to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin. The dispatches are regarded as being highly confidential and for that reason information concerning them is unavailable here.

Ambassador Gerard's dispatch describing the manner in which the American note was received by German officials while held as confidential, is understood to have represented Berlin officials as being greatly surprised at the demands of the Washington Government. Mr. Gerard is said to have gathered at least an impression that the Foreign Office had no idea that the communication would be as drastic and final as it was. The general feeling here tonight apparently was not at all optimistic regarding the outcome and the situation remains one of tense expectancy.

Among the foreign diplomats here the effect of a break between the United States and Germany is a topic of wide interest. The consensus of opinion seems to be that diplomatic relations between the United States and the allies of Germany need not necessarily be affected.

In regard to Austria, however, much is considered to depend upon the answer made by the Vienna Government to the American inquiry regarding the attack upon the Russian bark Imperator, carrying two American citizens, one of whom was injured by shrapnel fire. Ambassador Penfield was directed to make the inquiry early this week. No reply had been received today and he may soon be instructed to renew the inquiry.

It is considered quite probable that Austria will be called to account should it develop that her submarines, too, have not been acting with a proper regard for the rights of noncombatants, the United States being determined that illegal submarine warfare wherever and by whoever conducted, must cease.

An appointment was arranged today for Senator Stone, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to see President Wilson Monday night to discuss some features of the foreign situation, but late today the Senator sent word to the White House that he had an engagement with the Chinese Minister that night. He asked that the conference be arranged for another date, and he probably will see the President later in the week.

EMPEROR AND STAFF CONSIDER NOTE OF U. S.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, via London, April 22.—The American note is now in the hands of Emperor William, Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollwegg and Gen. von Falkenhayn, Chief of the General Staff, at general headquarters.

A summary of the note was telegraphed yesterday to general headquarters, and a courier, bearing the text and the appendix, was sent there by train. The deliberations of the Emperor, the Chancellor and the Chief of Staff will determine the future shaping of German-American relations.

The American note occupies the first pages of all the afternoon newspapers and forced even the daily war report to the inside columns. The impatience with which the public awaited the publication of the note was illustrated by the street scenes when the afternoon editions appeared. The people had been apprised of the impending publication by a paper appearing at noon.

Crowds surronded the first newsboys on the Unter den Linden Leipzig, Friedrich and other principal streets of the business quarter fairly snatching the newspapers from them.

Mixed Impression on Readers.

The impression of the note upon the readers was a mixed one. Many faces were grave as the readers perused the long columns of the note. The comment also was grave.

The North German Gazette, from which an authoritative reflection of the Government's views can alone be expected, did not comment on the note. Other papers commenting in varying tones and sentiment toward the United States, but generally without truculence or abusive language. Some of the newspapers, including the Tageblatt, the Bourse Gazette and even the Tages Zeitung, consider the possibility of Germany attempting to meet the American demands, but most of the writers evidently consider this difficult. Count von Reventlow, who writes the Tages Zeitung articles, considers that a practicably conducted submarine campaign is worth far more than a maintenance of relations on the previous lines between Germany and America.

Germany's answer to the note is likely to be delayed by some parleys and requests for further information on certain points, according to the Lokal Anzieger.

The ministers and other officials who were entitled to it, received a copy of the note yesterday morning and were engaged during the day in studying the document.

Newspaper Fairly Optimistic.

The Lokal Anzeiger's prediction that the German reply will be delayed is borne out by the fact that it has been forwarded to general headquarters.

The Lokal Anzeiger endeavors to make a fairly optimistic view of the situation, basing this on what it terms the almost invariably misleading character of English news dispatches. It declares, however, that as England is endeavoring to starve this country, Germany cannot give up the right of self-defense.

Other Berlin newspapers have published only a few lines of noncommittal comment. Of the prominent out-of-town papers only the Cologne Gazette refers editorially to the situation. It says:

"An understanding between Germany and America concerning the use of submarines hitherto has not been reached."

American Neutrality Assailed.

The Gazette repeats the frequently-heard attacks on American neutrality, in connection with the delivery of munitions and the alleged complaisance of the United States toward British arbitrariness and concludes:

"American neutrality, carried out in this manner is not of such a kind that Germany can sacrifice the most effective means of its naval warfare to it."

As far as the Associated Press has been made acquainted with the sentiment in higher quarters, it would be wrong to regard the situation as anything but extremely grave. There is little hope that any answer can go to the length demanded by the Washington Government, despite the fact that the Government desires to maintain good relations with the United States. The sentiment is against any further weakening of Germany's submarine campaign, to say nothing of an abandonment of it.

Won't Electrify Germany, Says Paper

Following the lead of a few morning papers in preparing the public as gently as possible for the American note, the Zeitung Am Mittag, after explaining that the delay in publication was due to the length of the note and the difficulty of translation, declares:

"It will not electrify Germany, as it is reported to have electrified America.

"Germany has been willing to go to the most extreme limit to meet the United States ever since the American Government has sought to restrict, even to make ineffective, Germany's weapon of necessity. We have, as has been proved a thousand times to every thinking man, so far guarded the interests of all neutrals that not an inconsiderable conflict of opinion has arisen among us.

"To the last man, however, the German people are united in the firm resolve not to let the submarine be wrenched from our hand as a weapon. We use it according to the principles of justice and humanity, always invoked in the American notes, and we will use it in the future because our right and our human consideration for our existence as a state and the future of our wives and children compel us. Therefore, we wait with calmness and determination what President Wilson again has to say."

The paper says Germany has to acknowledge, to its regret, that the spirit of a large part of the leading American politicians for a long time has not been neutral—"with regret," adds the paper, "because everyone of us has the wish to avoid an unnecessary conflict by giving in to the most extreme limit and because we believe a clash with America can be avoided unless the intention exists over there wantonly to bring it about."

Milwaukee German Weekly Demands Impeachment of President.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 22.—The Excelsior, a German weekly newspaper, devoted chiefly to the German Catholics of Wisconsin, published today an extensive editorial, attacking the Administration for its course in the German submarine crisis and demanding the immediate impeachment of the President.

"Johnson was impeached for lesser offenses against the nation than this president who is trying, at the behest of England, to throw this country into war," the paper declares.

ston almost constantly. Together they have read such reports as came from the base at Columbus, from officers along the line of communication and from Gen. Pershing. None of these indicated fresh activity by the American forces, but preparation for attack was indicated, and Gen. Scott gained at first hand an idea of the defensive attitude the expedition has assumed.

Gen. Funston and his staff placed before the chief of staff every communication received, and in addition to that record provided him with such other evidence, verbal and written, that bore on the case.

As to the conclusions he had reached and the nature of the report he would make, Gen. Scott was noncommital. He was asked if it had been decided to withdraw the troops and replied: "We have not reached a conclusion." He nodded his head toward Gen. Funston when he said "we."

It was regarded here as possible that Gen. Funston would concur in a report that the capture of Villa with the present organization operating along the present lines was improbable.

There was available for Gen. Scott's consideration much information relative to the movements of Mexican troops in Northern Mexico, and reports, official and unofficial, of activities of men and groups of men who are credited with plans for fomenting fresh revolutions against the de facto Government. At departmental headquarters there also was information that indicated a plan by certain Mexicans, some of them Mexican officials, to resume the raids on the border west of Brownsville. Implicated in this plan, it was stated, were some of the same men who participated in them last summer.

The routine of Gen. Pershing's operations continued today and more of the 2300 troops ordered to Columbus by Gen. Funston arrived at the frontier base. No additional troops had been ordered into this department to take their places on the border patrol, but such forces, it was learned today, have been requested by Gen. Funston.

Sending of More Troops Across Border Surprises Gen. Gavira.

EL PASO, Tex., April 22.—The crossing of additional American troops into Mexico from Columbus today caused a feeling approaching dismay among the Mexican officials in Juarez, who were previously convinced that Gen. Pershing's expedition was on the point of withdrawal. Gen. Gavira, the Juarez commander, was frank in his expressions of concern.

"I do not understand why additional troops are being sent in. I confess it causes me some anxiety, as I fear it will have an unfavorable effect on the Mexican people, who will not be able to understand it any better than I."

American army officers here, while refusing to express a definite opinion on the troop movement, pointed out that it did not necessarily mean that the idea of recalling the Pershing expedition had been abandoned. It was suggested that they might be employed to help protect the withdrawal if it should be ordered. There is little question that officers here generally believe withdrawal is probable.

American Troops in Field Strengthening Positions.

COLUMBUS, N. M., April 22.—American troops in the field are utilizing their time in the halt in operations in strengthening their positions, detachments being concentrated at strategic points. The line of communication, extending thinly almost 500 miles south of the border, also is being strengthened by the dispatch of additional forces from Columbus, a deatchment of negro infantry going forward today.

Gen. Pershing's army continued inactive and quiet was reported all along the American line. The expeditionary commander, with his staff, has established headquarters at Namiquipa, that he may be in close communication with Gen. H. L. Scott and Gen. Funston in San Antonio.

Messages from some of the advanced expeditionary columns were sent to Gen. Pershing today over the Mexican telegraph lines to Juarez, being relayed from there to Columbus and from here to Namiquipa by army wireless, thus traveling almost in a circle. The contents of these dispatches were not revealed here.

Suffrage Organizer Who Is Here to Plan Women's Parade

FLORENCE MAULE UPDEGRAFF

LEADER HERE TO PLAN CONVENTION SUFFRAGE PARADE

Mrs. Florence Updegraff Lent by New York Organization to Recruit for Demonstration.

Florence Maule Updegraff, expert suffrage organizer, who has been lent by the national suffrage organization headquarters of New York to the local field to work toward the demonstration during National Democratic Convention week, is established at a business-like desk in Suffrage League headquarters, nineteenth floor Railway Exchange building.

Mrs. Updegraff is the wife of the poet and writer, Allen Updegraff, whose courtship she found time to listen to while she was in the thick of the recent New York campaign, and whom she married at the close of it.

Tall, broad-shouldered, vigorous, Mrs. Updegraff looks capable of a variety of undertakings.

Getting 10,000 women in line to stand up for suffrage during two hours, from 4 to 6 on the afternoon of June 14, ought to appeal as a comparatively simple task to this organizer after months of appealing to men in the back rooms of saloons or wherever uncoverted groups of them could be found. Yet, in relating thrilling experiences of the New York campaign with characteristic energy, she said: "I would rather deal with men, the more difficult and stubborn the better, than with women who are not firm in their convictions."

Recruits for Walkless Parade.

The "golden lane," as the walkless parade of white-robed suffragists under yellow parasols, is coming to be known, is being recruited through every channel of reaching women in groups or singly.

Wherever women are gathered together, for whatever purpose, they may expect to be visited by a suffrage speaker.

Recruiting stations will be established and the recruiting officer dressed in white with yellow insignia, will become as familiar as the now ubiquitous one in olive drab. Enlistment blanks calling for 10,000 recruits for the "yellow lane" will be in the streets and in the homes as soon as they come from the printers.

Delegates to Go to Springfield.

Delegates who will attend the State suffrage convention at Springfield May 5 and 6 are Mrs. W. C. Fordyce, Mrs. B. Morrison-Fuller, Mrs. H. L. Wichmann, Miss May E. Bulkley, Mrs. J. P. Higgins, Mrs. Charles Passmore and Mrs. B. F. Burck.

The question, agitating suffragists the country over, as to whether the various organizations shall amalgamate with the Woman's Political party, will come up for debate at Springfield.

A special car of delegates touring the country on behalf of this reorganization is not being received favorably in all localities. St. Louis delegates seem to favor the change of name.

350,000 NEEDED TO TAKE DARDANELLES, SAID VON DER GOLTZ

Marshal, Who Has Just Died, Told von Wiegand During Siege Why It Would Fail.

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

(Copyright, 1916, by Press Pub. Co.)

BERLIN, April 21, via Amsterdam and London, delayed—Field Marshal Colmar von der Goltz Pasha, German Commander in Chief of the Turkish army which has the British force under Gen. Townshend in Kut-el-Amara surrounded, and is blocking the relief expedition under Gen. Aylmer, is dead. Goltz died at his headquarters in Bagdad on April 13. He would have reached 73 years on Aug. 12.

The "Eternally young Field Marshal," as he was known, was a veteran of the wars of 1866 and 1876, who, only a few weeks ago, sword in hand, personally led a charge against the foe.

He fell a victim of spotted typhus. His personal physician died from the same disease a few weeks ago. Of Goltz it can truly be said that he was in every respect a soldier and a gentleman. He had none of the brusqueness so often attributed to Prussian officers, but possessed a delightful and courteous manner, a pleasant and agreeable personality and was kind-hearted and humane always.

Was Popular With Turks.

These qualities endeared him to the Turks, with whom he unquestionably was the most popular German officer. His death will be a severe blow to the Turks.

As if he had a premonition of his end, in a letter received here in March, the Field Marshal wondered whether he should ever see his home again, although at the writing he was in excellent health.

I last saw and talked with Goltz last March at his villa here, on the edge of Berlin, when he granted me an interview in which he predicted the allies' failure at the Dardanelles. This proved to be only too true.

Goltz told me that he based his forecast of the Dardanelles fiasco not only on the splendid fighting qualities of the Turks, but, to him, the apparent strategical and tactical mismanagement of the allies' expedition.

What I could not write at that time was that the Field Marshal told me that, if the English had 300,000 to 350,000 troops there their (the Turks') situation would be serious.

Came to See Kaiser.

Goltz at that time came to see the Kaiser, ostensibly to bring him a gift from the Sultan, but, as I learned later, his mission had to do with the Servian campaign and Bulgaria's entrance in the war, but which was not carried out until several months afterward.

Goltz was severely wounded in Austria in 1866. In 1870 he was on the staff of Prince Frederick Karl, with Field Marshal Count Haeseler, then Major. From 1883 to 1895 he had charge of the reorganization of the Turkish army, returning to Germany in 1896. Sept. 1, 1914, he was appointed Governor of Belgium. After three months, during which his regime was marked by humaneness and understanding for the peculiarities and difficult position of the Belgian people, Goltz was sent to Constantinople as personal military adviser to the Sultan. Later he commanded the Constantinople army and then was placed in command of the Turkish Bagdad army when the British expeditionary force, undler Townshend, invaded Mesopotamia and began its march to Bagdad.

Goltz surrounded Townshend at Kut el Amar. There, in the cradle of civilization, not far from ancient Babylon and Nineveh, and one of the oldest battle grounds of the world, in a city of the Arbaian Nights, the Prussian Field Marshal met death.

McKinley Figures Juggled in Rate Appeal, It Is Said the bridge that he had not included in his statement of yesterday.

The witness was questioned regarding business conditions in the Tri-Cities during 1915, the year covered by his report. He said that business was dull in the cities until about September and that a big improvement, now noticeable, did not come until January of this year.

"Then your figures for 1915 showing a loss to the suburban company were based upon a time when there was little business?" said Bryan. "It was not a typical period."

Bell replied that the Tri-Cities was a hard district to serve. He said that business conditions in the steel plants, rolling mills and other industries fluctuate so greatly that in order to get a fair average, a low average for several years must be taken.

Bridge Valued at $2,637,000.

Henry H. Humphrey, a consulting engineer, was the first witness at the afternoon session. He said the McKinley bridge was begun in 1908 and completed in 1911, while the free bridge was begun before 1908 and is not yet completed. He said the McKinley bridge has a normal life of 66 2-3 years and is fitted to carry freight trains of a steam railway and passengers. He said he had made a careful appraisal of the bridge and placed the value at $2,637,000.

H. M. Wagner, a civil engineer, now local manager for the Illinois Traction Co. at Peoria, said he had charge of a census of passengers over Eads Bridge and that he believed the schedule filed with the commission yesterday is correct.

B. E. Bramble, general auditor of the Illinois Traction Co., was the last witness of the day. He said that a statement made to the commission regarding the year 1915, showing a net earning for the suburban traffic of $41,000, did not conflict with Supt. Bell's statement that the year showed a loss of $18,000.

The auditor said that in the statement to the commission all the miscellaneous earnings of the company, including the bridge tolls, had been credited to the suburban line. In the statement made by Bell, he said, these earnings had been divided between the bridge, terminal, suburban and interurban companies. He said in regard to a number of expenses questioned by the city, that he believed it the most logical way to apply them to the suburban line expense.

Bramble testified that during the year 1915 the total losses upon the suburban and interurban lines, together with the bridge and terminal companies, would have been $399,849, if the $104,000 had been allowed for depreciation and 6 per cent interest paid upon all indebtedness.

One of the commissioners exclaimed: "Why, the change in fare you ask would only amount to about $60,000 a year. That would leave you still short more than $330,000 a year, according to your figures."

Counsel for the company said that would be correct, but the company is hoping for better days. Adjournment was taken until Monday.

WOMAN'S HANDS AND FEET TIED

Husband Tells Police She Said Man Bound Her and Took $29.

James J. Donovan of 3806 Page boulevard reported to the police about midnight that, when he returned to his home at 11:30 p. m., after a visit to a barber shop, he found his wife in the bedroom with her hands and feet tied. He said that his wife told him that shortly after he left the house a man entered and placed something over her mouth and then tied her hands and feet. She said that the man took $29 in bills which she had beneath a pillow.

German-American Plot to Control Elections Alleged

upon me because of my disagreement with the President on his foreign and Mexican policies.

I hope that I am not asking too much in requesting that you see Mr. Ridder and enlist his friendly aid rather than permit him to become committed to Mr. Henry, who has not a chance to win, but is trying to make headway with the German-American vote on account of the eleventh hour speech which he made in the House a few weeks ago in favor of an embargo on war materials. I wish you would also see Weismann (Henry Weismann, president of the German-American Alliance) and talk with him.

I am enclosing herewith a list of papers printed in German. I hope sincerely that both you and Weismann can write the editors of these papers personal letters in my behalf. Of course I think it would be well for such letters as you may write to be confidential for reasons which you can readily understand.

With best wishes, I am,
Yours truly,
O. B. COLQUITT.

Koelble's letter to Colquitt was written in New York December 18 last. It was not answered until March 21, 1916. At the time of the Koelble letter the German-American vote had not been organized in Texas. There was then no threat of its solid use against any candidate without German sympathies.

In the interim such organization had been effected. A solid vote was aligned. It became a factor. Moreover, Congressman Henry injected himself into the situation as an active candidate for this vote by getting up in Congress and demanding an embargo on the shipment of munitions.

Pleads for Support.

Henry had replaced Colquitt for the time as the leading candidate for the German-American vote. Ridder had made his decision in New York. The vote was to go to Henry, not Colquitt. To regain the lost German-American vote, Colquitt saw it was imperative to prove himself more loyal to Germany than Congressman Henry. This he set about doing. On March 20 he wrote to Ridder.

This letter, pleading for German support because of his opposition to President Wilson in Germany's interest, is as follows:

March 20, 1916.

Mr. Bernard Ridder, care of New York Staats Zeitung, New York City.

Dear Sir: I am in receipt of a letter from one of my campaign managers at Waco telling me he has heard of your sending out a circular letter to the German-Americans in Texas, advising them to vote for Hon. R. L. Henry for the United States Senate on account of his fairness in their behalf in Congres. I am loath to believe that you would do this, knowing my views and attitude toward the questions in which the German-Americans of this State are vitally concerned.

I am inclosing you herein a circular which contains letters addressed by yourself to Mr. Henry, in reply to criticisms of me by him on on account of my not agreeing in all things with President Wilson. I shall be glad to hear from you, and hope that you are not taking sides against me in this campaign for the United States Senate.

Mr. Henry's speech in Congres a few weeks ago in favor of an embargo on war materials was evidently for the special purpose of trying to get the German-American support. You will recall, perhaps, that I was one of the first in this country to advocate an embargo on war materials, in my speech at the Hippodrome in New York, on Feb. 22, 1915.

You will also no doubt remember my conversation with your father and yourself concerning the organization of a company to purchase an English newspaper in New York which would print the truth about the war in Europe.

I hope you will treat this letter as confidential and let me hear from you.

With best wishes, I am, yours truly, O. B. COLQUITT.

This letter ex-Gov. Colquitt followed up the next day with his appeal to Koelble to see Ridder and Weismann, and beg their support for him, although neither has ever lived in Texas and neither could vote in that State.

In the speech which the ex-Governor delivered in the Hippodrome here on Feb. 22, and which he cites as proof of his German loyalty, he said:

"Why do we who claim to be free and undivided in our sympathies follow so much the wishes and the fashions of the British? We have done this ever since the birth of the republic. In the time of Washington many of our people were aping British customs, mimicking British ideals and worshiping British gold; many are doing that still.

"Compare what the Germans have done for this country with what the British have done. Von Steuben, De Kalb and Herkimer were of our bravest Generals. Look at the British in the Revolution hiring Indians and paying them $8 for every scalp of a patriot.

"I believe in honest neutrality, not diplomatic neutrality. Our Government that now refuses to forbid the shipment of arms because it says it is unneutral, is the same Government that two years ago put an embargo on arms going into Mexico. With an honest neutrality and a real neutrality, this war would be over in 90 days.

"I am a son of a soldier of the South, yet I love that old flag that is being made an object of ridicule on the high seas by its use to shelter the ships of a belligerent nation. If the belligerents are allowed to use it neutrals will soon follow their example, and the flag will become the laughing stock of all nations."

Since the Henry speech in advocacy of an embargo on munitions and its reward in the shape of pro-German support, Colquitt has not ceased his efforts to regain his former prestige with the German vote, won first through his opposition to President Wilson's Mexican policy and, second, through his past championing of German interests.

In "Friends of Peace" Move.

Colquitt was, with Henry Weismann, Edmund von Mach, Jeremiah A. O'Leary, president of the American Truth Society; Paul Mueller and others, a signer of a statement issued by the "Friends of Peace," Aug. 2, 1915, bitterly attacking Secretary of State Lansing. The pro-German activities of this society were exposed in the World last summer.

In a letter which the New York American stated was a voluntary contribution, Colquitt, on Dec. 26, 1915, characterized the Wilson administration as having been "the greatest failure in the history of the presidency."

"The administration's foreign policy," he also stated in this letter, "has been imbecile. It has allowed England to dictate conditions as to cotton shipments that enabled English spinners to rob the American cotton growers of half the value of their crop."

His criticisms have led to frequent statements from Texas that Colquitt did not represent the American sentiment of the State.

GERMAN VOTE IN TEXAS ORGANIZED

Will Be Against Wilson for President, and for Colquitt for U. S. Senator.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex., April 22.—The German-American vote of Texas has been solidly organized, and regardless of party affiliations will be solidly voted as such.

The German-American vote will be swung:

1. Against Wilson and for any candidate the Republican party may nominate.

2. For former Gov. Oscar B. Colquitt for United States Senator and against candidates opposed to him.

There are 20 counties in Texas which are absolutely controlled by the German-American vote. It is estimated that in South Texas alone there are 50,000 organized German-American voters. In some of the cities, such as Houston, San Antonio and Galveston, the German-Americans are reported to have formed organizations for political purposes and the influence of this concerted movement is considered far-reaching.

The German-American element in Texas openly seeks not only to control the senatorial, congressional, State, district and county offices, but there is evidence that it is now lining up in an attempt to dictate the delegates from this State to the national Democratic convention.

The work of the organization to bring about these results is carried on secretly. It is generally conceded that the German-American vote probably will be the determining factor in the present senatorial contest. Former Gov. Colquitt will receive practically the unanimous vote of this element, because of the fact that he is making his campaign largely on the issue of his criticism of and opposition to the President and his administration.

Colquitt is not only appealing for the German-American vote on the ground that he leans toward Germany in this war, but has added to his platform opposition to either State or national prohibition, which brings him great favor with German-American voters. But he has lost much of his former support among American citizens without foreign sentiments. His attacks upon the Wilson administration and the President have cost him many votes.

Gov. Ferguson has recently widened the breach which existed between Colquitt and himself by his vigorous support and commendation of President Wilson. In every one of his recent speeches the Governor has indorsed and pledged his hearty support to the President and his policies.

He is the only Democratic official in this State who has defended the national administration in the face of the strong German-American vote and he is doing it also in face of the fact that he was originally a strong supporter of Champ Clark for President and was nominated largely through German-American votes.

When it comes to championing Wilson and his administration all the senatorial candidates put on the soft pedal. They all appear to be afraid to offend the German-Americans.

It is interesting to note that Senator Charles S. Culberson, who is a candidate for re-election, has apparently the support of some of the older element of the German-Americans despite the fact that he is known as a Wilson man.

Culberson is an anti-prohibitionist, as are also Congressman Henry, ex-Gov. T. M Campbell and Dr. S. P. Brooks. But the German-American vote seems to have swung away from Henry and it is not believed that many German-Americans will cast their ballots for him.

The German-American organizations formed in various cities and towns are known by different names, but the general organization at Houston is called the German-American Association.

There is no doubt but that every candidate in Texas from Senator to Constable is attempting to curry favor with this vote.

Congressman "Cyclone" Davis is open and above board in his appeal for the support of German-Americans in his campaign for re-election as Congressman-at-Large.

Jeff McLemore is equally as active in petitioning for the German-American votes on the ground that he is an upholder of Germany in the war.

Several other Texas Congressmen, in whose districts there is a large German-American vote, have taken a stand against the preparedness program because of their fear of losing this vote.

Britain Said to Be Urging Spain to Tighten Neutral Shipping.

BERLIN, April 22, by wireless to Sayville.—"According to reports from Geneva," says the Overseas News Agency, "Great Britain has offered to Spain possession of Tangier, if Spain will seize the German ships in Spanish ports and consent to the closing of the Straits of Gibraltar to all neutral ships, except those flying the Spanish flag."

OPPOSING ARMIES ATTACK BY TURNS AT DEAD MAN HILL

Neither French Nor Germans Succeed in Making Gains Northwest of Verdun.

RUSSIAN TROOPS AT LYONS

Those Landed at Marseilles Presumably Are on Way to Fighting Front.

LONDON, April 22.—Hard fighting has been in progress in the Verdun region and heavy forces have been thrown into the battle by both sides, but the changes of ground have not been notably great. The struggle seems to have been most intense in the region of Dead Man Hill, northwest of the fortress, where French and Germans have taken turns in launching an offensive.

Neither side claims any gains as a result. Paris admits that the Germans secured a foothold in some of the new French trenches, but declares that ground previously lost was regained from the Germans.

Berlin concedes a French gain in the Caurettes wood, just to the west of the Meuse, where trenches have frequently changed hands.

Toward the northern ends of the western battle line the British have succeeded in regaining a part of the ground recently lost to the north of Ypres, their attack resulting in the recapture of about 200 yards of the 600 captured by the Germans on April 19.

The Russian troops which landed at Marseilles on Thursday are already on their way north, presumably to the fighting front, passing through the city of Lyons today. They were given an enthusiastic greeting all along the route.

The British campaign against German East Africa is being actively waged and Gen. Smut, in command, has reported the occupation of Umbugwe and Salanga, which places columns of the expeditionary forces some 100 miles inside the border of the German colony.

The Turkish account of the battle of April 17 on the Tigris declares the British were defeated with the loss of more than 4000 men killed and wounded. The Turks recaptured the positions the British previously had taken and with them 13 machine guns and a few prisoners, and a subsequent attack on April 19 was repulsed, it is declared.

Constantinople reports a 200-mile flight over the desert of a Turkish aeroplane which successfully bombarded a British camp at El Kantara on the Suez Canal, and returned safely.

Petrograd says hostile aeroplanes raided Tarnopol, on which they threw a number of bombs and announces further progress along the Black Sea coast west of Trepizend.

The Italian official report from Rome tells of artillery actions in the Tonalo Zone, the Ledro Valley and along the front from Rovereto to the upper Calamento Valley and the Bassa Brenta torent. There also was some artillery activity along the Isonzo and on the Carso and more intense gun fire in the Plava zone, the report says.

Enemy defenses were destroyed at Zagora, causing their evacuation by the enemy.

How the Turkish War Office Explains Defeat to Moslems.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 21.—The official statement issued yesterday by the War Office said:

"Caucasus front: Our detachments entrusted with the supervision of the coast in the Lazistan sector since April 11 offered extrairdinary resistance to repeated attacks of numerically superior hostile military and naval forces and defended step by step every inch of the ground it was possible to defend. Our armies worthily attained their proposed aim. Finally, on the 18th, after having forced the enemy to fight a battle which had bloody results for him near Kowata, seven kilometers east of Trebizond, they withdrew in accordance with instructions to a sector where they will have a new task to fulfill. Since, in accordance with conclusions drawn from the situation of the war, the result of this operation in the coast sector could be foreseen, the town of Trebizond had already been evacuated by us. Six 15-centimeter guns of old patterns which recently had been stationed in the environs of the town were left behind after being completely destroyed."

Mannequins From Famous New York Shops Rehearsing for Easter Parade on Atlantic City's Board Walk

Photographs from Underwood & Underwood.

The Easter parade on Atlantic City's board walk is one of the greatest events in the fashion world. More of the country's rich and social elect are there at Easter than at any other season of the year, and the fashionable modistes of New York take advantage of the opportunity to show the choicest of their costumes. The Mannequins are rehearsed for days in their parts and a group of them is shown here strolling along the walk, to acquire by practice the poise and stride that will show off their costumes to the best advantage before the throng of spectators.

FORD A MASK FOR ROOSEVELT, SAYS COL. WATTERSON

"Gary - Bacon - Root Combine Knows Its Business," He Declares Editorially.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 22.—Under the caption: "The Milk in the Cocoanut," Henry Watterson will say in the Courier-Journal tomorrow:

"There is nothing surprising in the presidential candidacy of Henry Ford and the way it has taken hold in certain places when one has the key to it. The key is the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt. Ford is a mask for Roosevelt. The Gary-Bacon-Root combine knows its business.

"Does anybody suppose that Ormsby McHarg works for nothing and that Frank Hitchcock is out for his health? A little money put where is can do the most good—See Michigan and Nebraska—goes a long ways. The Gary-Bacon-Root combine has plenty of money. It has hardly yet begun to spend it. But, even as the ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib do malefactors of great wealth know when and where and how to stain their eye-teeth and to come it over the hayseeds. Mark Hanna is dead, but Wall Street liveth."

Marshall Leads Major by Big Majority in Montana Primary.

HELENA, Mont., April 22.—Scattering returns from 20 of the 41 counties in Montana show that President Wilson virtually had no opposition for the Democratic nomination in yesterday's preferential primary election.

Senator Cummins received 3588 votes for the Republican nomination. He was opposed by Edward R. Woods of New Jersey, who received 319 votes. Roosevelt, whose name was not on the ballot, was voted for by 1391 men and women, who wrote in his name.

Vice President Marshall had a lead of 1335 to 508 over Gov. Major of Missouri for the nomination for Vice President.

Scattering votes for the presidential nominations were cast for Justice Hughes, Henry Ford, Elihu Root, Senator La Follette, William J. Bryan, Speaker Champ Clark and Joseph W. Folk.

83,058 Michigan Republicans for Ford for President.

LANSING, Mich., April 22.—Henry Ford of Detroit was the choice of 5186 more Michigan voters for the Republican preferential nomination for President than was United States Senator William A. Smith of Grand Rapids at the recent State primary, according to official primary figures made public here tonight. Ford got 83,058 and Smith 77,872. Roosevelt got 1074.

Ford Again Leads Cummins in Nebraska Primary Returns.

OMAHA, Neb., April 22.—Henry Ford of Detroit has again taken the lead from Senator A. B. Cummins of Iowa in the race for the Republican presidential nomination at the Nebraska primaries, according to complete returns from 50 of the 91 counties in the State. Late returns give Ford a lead of less than 100.

Ford Would Accept Nomination "If the People Wanted Him."

NEW YORK, April 22.—Henry Ford announced here today that he would accept a nomination for the presidency "if the people wanted him," but that he was not a candidate.

"I cannot regard myself in such a light," he said. "I regard it as a joke only. It is a very serious question as to who the joke is on."

OUT-OF-DOORS EASTER FOR ST. LOUISANS IS INDICATED

Good Weather in Prospect for Sartorial Parade in Forest Park—Grass Green and the Turf Soft for Egg Rolling.

With the expected good weather, this will be an out-of-doors Easter in St. Louis. Everyone who is going to have a new hat, gown or suit this spring has it by this time, and everyone who has an automobile, new or old, is expected to use it, and to leave the sidewalks free from those who haven't yet been able to decide what make of car to buy.

Churchgoers will wear their best and there will be something of a display of hats on King's highway, on Lindell boulevard and on Union boulevard. The churches have prepared for capacity audiences, and some have requested members to come early and to make room in their pews for as many strangers as they can accommodate. The Easter music, in nearly all churches, is the most ambitiously selected, and the most carefully rehearsed, of the year.

Most churchgoers will get home for 1 o'clock dinner, and by 2:30 the afternoon parade, on the streets and particularly in the parks, will have started. Grand drive, in Forest Park, between the Lindell and Union entrances, has been lined on both sides with benches, 300 benches having been added to the park's regular equipment. Cars on Grand drive must be kept moving, that no one's view may be obstructed.

The grass is green and the turf soft for egg rolling and egg hunting, and this fun will be provided for the children at several places today. It began yesterday afternoon, with a public egg hunt on the city hall lawn, which was arranged by the St. Louis Star. More than 2000 eggs, part of them from the produce markets and part from the candy stores, were hidden about the lawn, and there were two "golden eggs," one carrying a prize of $10, given by Eugene Cuendet, and the other calling for $5 from Alderman Barney Schwartz. Rose Kelmer, 12 years old, of 1310 North Fifteenth street, found and cashed the $10 egg, and Joseph Mosar, 5, of 3916A McRee avenue, was the winner of the $5 prize.

Egg Rolling at City Hall.

At Art Hill, this afternoon, beginning at 3, the first Easter egg roll of the Town Club, for children, will be held. The club, which is composed of business women, has sent out announcements saying, "Bring children, your own or borrowed, and enough colored eggs for your own group."

At Hyde Park, in North St. Louis, an early morning egg hunt has been arranged by the Salisbury Street Improvement Association. The Easter Rabbit, it is announced, will leave 100 dozen Easter eggs in and around Hyde Park, and the early children will get the gaily-colored suovenirs.

The Western Rowing Club will have an egg hunt and rabbit chase on its lawn, as it has had in previous years. A cabaret and dance for members, in the evening, is also announced.

Easter eggs and baskets were distributed yesterday to sick children in the city hospital by the Willing Workers, a society of girls connected with Union Methodist Sunday school, on Delmar avenue, near Grand. Miss Rosalie Wightman is president of the workers, and the eggs were colored Friday night at her home, 2910 Franklin avenue.

MAN USES SHEET TO REACH LADDER AND ESCAPE FROM FIRE

Two Badly Hurt and Others Reported Missing When Blaze Destroys Madison Lodging House.

Fire last night destroyed a saloon, grocery and lodging house in a four story building at Fourteenth and Madison streets, Madison. Two men were badly hurt by leaping from third-floor windows, a score of others were cut by broken glass, and there were unverified reports that two or three persons who lived there were missing.

The blaze started about 10 o'clock in the first floor, and quickly spread to a stairway which was the only means of egress from the upper floors. The lodgers, most of them laborers, got out the best they could. Peter Maikevitch and Andrew Armovitz, the two men who were hurt from jumping, were taken to a hospital, where their wounds were pronounced serious.

One man, whose name was not learned, was caught in a room on the fourth floor. The Madison Fire Department had no ladders with which to reach him, but finally a pompier was hooked into the sill of a window under him on the third floor. The man tied a sheet to his bed, climbed down it until he reached the pompier ladder and got safely to the ground.

The saloon and grocery were owned by Tony Lewis.

SENATOR SUGGESTS TO GERMANS TO COMPLAIN TO BERNSTORFF

OCONOMOWOC, Wis., April 22.—Immediately after President Wilson Sent his ultimatum to Germany, Fred Pabst, millionaire brewer, and 10 other influential Germans, sent a long telegram to Senator Husting urging him to use his influence to keep the United States out of the conflict.

Today Pabst, as representative of the other signers, received a tart reply from the Senator, in which they were told, in effect, to take their complaints to Count von Bernstorff. The reply, in part, says:

"War can best be avoided by wrong yielding to right and not by right yielding to wrong. Would, therefore, respectfully suggest that you wire the German Ambassador of the fervent desire of all Americans for peace and that peace can best be preserved by the strict observance on the part of the Imperial German Government of the provisions of international law governing naval warfare."

BROTHERS FOUND GUILTY OF KILLING MAN WITH CLUBS

Odie and Steve Reeves Convicted of Pritchard Murder at Deventer, Mo.—Ross Acquitted.

CHARLESTON, Mo., April 22.—The special jury in the murder trial of Devoe Ross and Odie and Steve Reeves, brothers, for the killing of L. B. Pritchard, returned a verdict, after eight hours' deliberation, acquitting Ross and finding the Reeves boys guilty of murder in the second degree. Odie Reeves was sentenced to 10 years in the penitentiary and Steve 11 years.

Pritchard was killed on the night of Oct. 15 last, at Deventer, 12 miles southeast of here, in a cowshed to which it was alleged he had been lured by Ross. After an alleged admission by Pritchard as to improper conduct with Lena Reeves, sister of the Reeves brothers, the two Reeves, who were hiding in the shed, attacked Pritchard with clubs. Steve Reeves admitted having struck the blow which caused Pritchard's death.

Judge W. N. Evans, of West Plains, presided, a change of venue having been granted from Circuit Judge Frank Kelly's court.

St. Louis Piano House Wins Window Trimming Prize.

First prize of $50 has been won by the Conroy Piano Co., of 1100 Olive street, in a window trimming contest held recently by piano houses in about 150 cities.

The Conroy window was a panorama of the San Francisco Exposition. In the center of the picture, standing before the Tower of Jewels, was a replica of the Goddess of Liberty, bestowing highest award and a gold medal upon the Autopiano, the player-piano sold by the Conroy Company. The medal won by the Autopiano at San Francisco makes the sixteenth won by this instrument at expositions in the United States and other countries, including Germany, France, Russia, Italy and England.

WOMEN IN NATIONAL MOVE TO PROTECT NATIONAL ANTHEM

Relief Corps Will Ask Unions of Musicians to Stop Playing It With Light Airs.

A nation-wide movement to stop the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner" in connection with a medley of airs by orchestras is to be started by the Woman's Relief Corps, according to National President, Mrs. Carrie Alexander-Bahrenburg of Belleville who returned home yesterday from a meeting of the Massachusetts State Department of the Relief Corps.

Mrs. Bahrenburg stated that the corps believes the proper respect is not shown to the National Anthem when it is made part of a medley. She states that a letter will be sent to all musical unions asking that they discontinue playing the anthem in connection with other light airs.

Daughters of Revolution Want the Flag Copyrighted.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The twenty-fifth continental congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution came to an end tonight.

Resolutions were adopted recommending that the flag and all other national emblems be copyrighted and proteced fro desecration; that at all public gatherings national in character, the Star-Spangled Banner be sung, and that the United States acquire and preserve Jamestown Island.

HITS MAN WHO INVITED HIM TO A FIGHT, IS SHOT IN BACK

Teamster and Laborer on Way to Settle a Quarrel Held by Police After the Shooting.

Herman Kaiser, 2 years old, a teamster, 7228 Pennsylvania avenue, was shot in the back and seriously injured at Broadway and Quincy street at 10:30 o'clock last night. He accused James A. Fuller, 33 years old, also a teamster, 6712 Pennsylvania avenue, of shooting him, and his charge was corroborated by Arthur W. Bouvatte, 27, a laborer, of 116 Loughborough avenue.

According to the police, Fuller and Bouvatte had quarreled and were on their way to a place where they had agreed to "fight it out," when Kaiser came out of a saloon at 7000 South Broadway, carrying a bucket.

Bouvatte cried to Kaiser that there was going to be a fight and invited him to go along and see fair play. Kaiser swung the bucket, hit Fuller and was running away when he was shot.

Fuller denied the shooting. He and Bouvatte were arrested. Kaiser is at the city hospital.

DANDRUFF SURELY DESTROYS THE HAIR

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—ADV.

TRAIN BANDIT WHO ROBBED NEARLY 60 PERSONS CAUGHT

Suspected of Several Other Holdups and Is Said to Have Confessed to Two.

RAWLINS, Wyo., April 22.—The robber who last night held up and robbed nearly three-score passengers on a Union Pacific limited train west of Hana, Wyo., was captured late today 20 miles north of Walcott by a posse.

The bandit is suspected of having committed four train robberies in this section within the last few weeks.

The robber gave the name of Carlisle but said it was not his real name. He said "he liked the sport of holding up trains and that he wanted to get the best of the police and the railroads." He sai dhe didn't care for the money, and that he got $311 last night.

"I always worked alone," Carlisle said. "I could have killed two of the posse before I was captured, but I am not a killer."

Bandit Said to Have Confessed to Two Other Holdups.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., April 22.—The bandit who last night held up a Union Pacific passenger train near Hanna, Wyo., and who was captured late today, has confessed to three train robberies in this section recently. He gave the name of William L. Carlisle.

The capture was effected by William Hayes, Marshal of Walcott, Wyo. Rewards aggregating $6500 have been offered for his capture.

Besides the robbery last night, Carlisle is said to have confessed to the robbery of the Union Pacific Overland Limited near Corlett Junction, Wyo., April 5, and to a similar exploit near Rock Springs, Wyo., Feb. 9.

Carlisle boarded the train which he held up last night at Greeley, Colo. He sat down with the train guard and after an hour's conversation, drew two revolvers and compelled the guard to pass the hat before the passengers. About $200 was gathered in the observation car.

At the entrance to the second sleeping car a brakeman and James Sherlock, conductor, met the robber. Sherlock hesitated a moment to raise his hands and the bandit fired. The shot went wild. In the sleeper the brakeman was pressed into service and more money was dropped into the hat.

When the collection was finished, the robber handed a watch to the guard.

"There's a watch I got on my last holdup and which I promised to return this time," he said. "If you'll slow down the train I'll get off here; otherwise I'll go to Rawlins with it."

As the train slackened speed for the Edison tunnel the man dropped to the ground and ran in the direction of the Robbers' Roost country, Elk Mountain region.

The bandit who robbed the Union Pacific Overland Limited at Corlett Junction April 5 promised the porter who collected for him on that occasion he would return a watch he had taken.

WOMAN IS INJURED WHEN TWO AUTOMOBILES COLLIDE

An automobile occupied by Louis J. Peters, 19 years old, a clerk of 4037 Labadie avenue, and Mrs. Edith Birdfeld, 22, a demonstrator, of 3427 Bell avenue, at 11:30 last night collided with an automobile owned by Benjamin Gratz of 5155 Lindell boulevard in front of the Gratz home. Both machines were badly damaged.

Mrs. Birdfeld suffered contusions on the chest. She was taken to the city hospital, where it was stated her injuries were not serious.

Peters and McIlvaney, who drove the Gratz car, were arrested.

KEROSENE AS SUBSTITUTE FOR GASOLINE IS TESTED

Chemical Compound, Invented by St. Louisan, Added to Oil—Standard Man Witnesses Auto Experiment.

Four gallons of kerosene, furnished by the Standard Oil Co., was used yesterday afternoon to operate two automobiles over west end streets in demonstrating a chemical compound invented by Percy W. Tressidder of 4205A Maffitt avenue, which had been added to the oil to give it the same gas-producing qualities of gasoline.

F. J. Penn, who made the tests of the compound for the Standard Oil Co., told the inventor, following the demonstration, that he had made a wonderful discovery and assured him his company would encourage and assist him in every way possible to perfect the product. Tressidder has not received any offer from the company for his invention.

The tests of the compound were made in a two-passenger runabout and a seven-passenger auto. The smaller machine is the property of the Standard Oil Co. It's tank was thoroughly drained by Penn and the engine was run until it died, thoroughly draining the carburetor, before the coal oil was put in. It responded immediately to cranking and ran smoothly on the kerosene and chemical compound.

The engine of the larger car chugged spasmodically on the coal oil feed and it failed to respond powerfully when the throttle was opened. The inventor explained the failure of the engine to run as smoothly and with as much power as that of the small car by saying there was probably a marked difference in the adjustment of the carbureters of the two engines.

The smaller car was run about eight miles and the larger about two miles. The exhausts of both cars gave off little smoke, but what did issue from them contained a perceptible odor of coal oil.

Tressidder, who is 32 years old, began his experiments in search of a substitute for gasoline about three months ago, after the price of gasoline had begun to rise rapidly and steadily. Three chemisals are used in the preparation of his compound, he said, and they are of such nature they cannot be analyzed when blended.

Tressidder is a former English army officer and saw service in the Boer War. He came to St. Louis during the trial of "Lord" Seymour Barrington for the murder of McCann, to identify him, if possible as Lord Edward Seymore, who Barrington claimed to be, for his government.

He liked St. Louis and sought to be appointed local consul for his government, but failed and when a rival for the place was appointed he became a naturalized citizen of this country. He is not a registered chemist and obtained his knowledge of chemistry during a course in a Louisville medical college, which he did not complete.

Two Substitutes for Auto Gasoline Put on St. Louis Market.

Two substitutes for gasoline for motor fuel were placed on sale to St. Louis motorists yesterday.

"Motorzine," a compound of crude oil and chemicals, invented by W. H. Stevens, 73 years old, of 4505 McMillan avenue, was being sold by the Continental Oil Co., Fourteenth and Locust streets, at 16 cents a gallon, 3 cents cheaper than gasoline.

The U. S. Analine and Chemical Co., Vandeventer and Laclede avenues, opened a filling station at which "U. S. Gasoline," a preparation of distilled petroleum claimed to be as powerful for motor fuel as gasoline, was being sold for 16 cents a gallon.

Ralph Orthwein, president of the Continental Oil Co., is in Oklahoma conducting negotiations for the manufacture of "motorzine" on a large scale. Orthwein and others interested in the substitute say it can be manufactured and sold to the public much cheaper than 16 cents if it is made in large quantities. About 500 gallons of the substitute was sold to motorists yesterday.

Ford to Buy "Water Fuel" Formula If Test Satisfies Him.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Subject to a test that may be made next Wednesday, Henry Ford will buy the formula for the "water fuel" that Louis Enricht of Farmingdale, L. I., has been demonstrating for the past fortnight.

"I didn't see any test of the fuel when I went to Farmingdale today," Ford said. "I wanted to see Enricht himself. I wanted to know what kind of man he was. He's all right. Within the next week there will be a test of his fuel, and I'll see it made.

"Breaking up water so that the hydrogen may be released isn't a new thin. Enricht has simply hit upon a compound that will do the work. That is, he says he has, for I haven't seen for myself.

"I believe the thing's all right. The principal of it certainly is. I'm interested in this fuel because of the use that could be made of it with the farm tractor I'm interested in just now."

PRESIDENT URGES TAMMANY MAN TO TAKE POSTOFFICE

Personally Selects Wagner, Also Williams for Chicago Office, to Avoid Factional Strife.

NEW YORKER DECLINES

Says He Appreciates Honor, but Has No Political Ambition in That Direction.

NEW YORK, April 22.—State Senator Robert F. Wagner, who today was nominated by President Wilson for the place of Postmaster of New York City, announced, when notified of his selection, that he would be unable to accept.

"I have indicated before that I did not seek the office, and that if I had any political ambitions they were in other directions," said Wagner. "Naturally the President's offer of the position is an honor which I do not underestimate, but which I find impossible to accept."

New York and Chicago Nominations Personal Ones, to Avoid Strife.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Robert F. Wagner was nominated by President Wilson today for Postmaster of New York, and Dixon C. Williams to be Postmaster of Chicago.

The President wrote letters to Senators O'Gorman and Lewis informing them that he desired to make personal appointments for the New York and Chicago offices and notified them whom he had chosen.

The President telegraphed Senator Wagner this morning urging him to accept the position. When word was conveyed to the White House that he had announced in New York his inability to accept, officials said no formal reply had come from him and indicated they believed he would change his mind.

By making personal appointments in the two vacancies, it was said, the President sought to avoid increasing factional differences in New York and Chicago, which have marked the contest over the two positions. For that reason he is very anxious that Senator Wagner accept the place.

Wagner is a Democratic State Senator and is known as one of the Tammany leaders of the State. He is 40 years old and a native of Prussia. Joseph Johnson, former Fire Commissioner, had been decided upon for the place, but was opposed.

Williams is a close friend of Postmaster-General Burleson. Senator Lewis recommended four German-Americans whom he said would be satisfactory to him, but Williams was not on the list.

Williams was born in Yellville, Ark., in 1859. He was in the banking and newspaper business in Lebanon, Tenn., until 1893, when he went to Chicago and entered the manufacturing business.

Building Big Ships at Belfast.

BELFAST, Ireland, April 22.—Shipbuilders here are working at highest pressure finishing the 36,000-ton vessel, the Statendam, built for the Holland-American Line, and the Belgemland, the 27,000-ton ship launched for the Red Star Line. The former is nearly ready, but the latter will not be finished before the end of the summer.

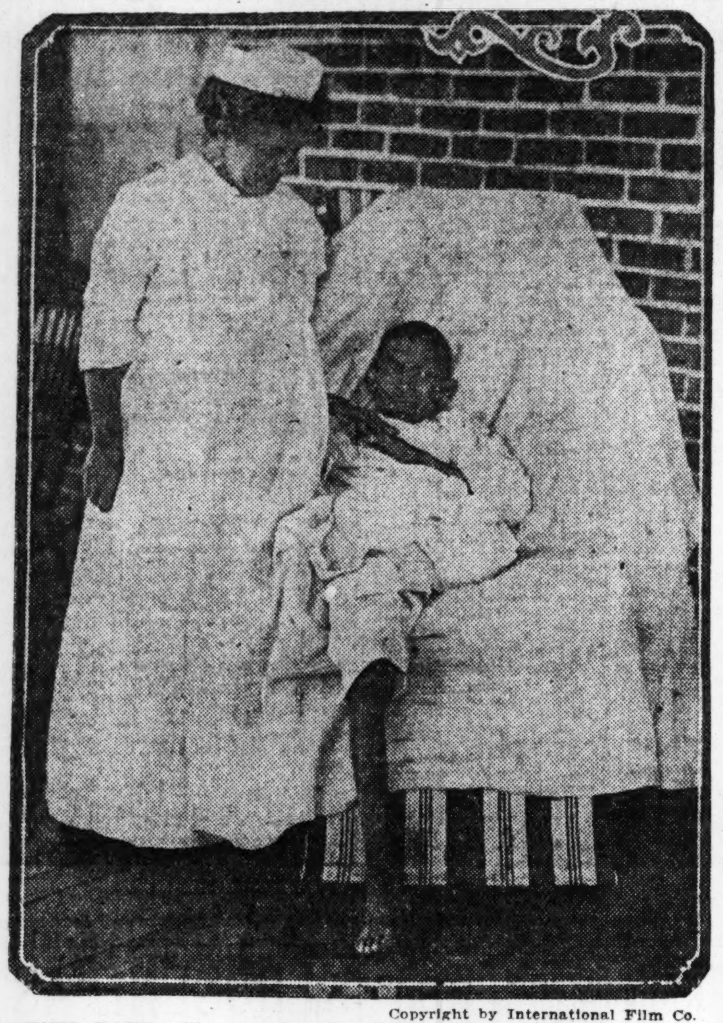
Boy Villista, Shot at Columbus, Tenderly Cared for in Hospital



Copyright by International Film Co.

JESUS PAEZ will remember the Villa attack on Columbus, N. M., until his death. Although only eleven years old, he was one of the Villa raiders who swooped down on the border town. While Villa directed the murderous work, the youngster held his chieftain's horse.

He was badly wounded in the leg and to save his life, it was necessary to amputate the injured limb.

The women of Deming, N. M., are now asking for contributions with which to purchase an artificial limb for him. One of the members of the Ladies' Hospital at Deming is standing alongside his chair.

ACCOUNT BOOK KEPT BY GRANT WHEN A CADET TO BE SOLD

In it He Signed His Name "U. H. Grant" Instead of U. S.—Part of Sanderson Collection.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Gen. Grant's account book, kept when he signed himself "U. H. Grant," instead of "U. S.," is to be sold next Tuesday, when the autograph collection of the late Howard K. Sanderson of Boston, who spent many years making it, is placed on sale here.

The book was kept by Gen. Grant when a cadet at West Point and contain the expenses charged against him by the storekeeper, tailor, shoemaker, barber and others. The articles desired and supplied bear the authorizing signatures of Gens. Richard Delafield, Charles F. Smith, Thomas J. Leslie, Irvin McDowell and Capt. John A. Thomas.

On the inside of the back cover, Cadet Grant practiced writing his name: "U H. Grant, Ulysses H. Grant," in spite of the fact that he was admitted to West Point under the name of "Ulysses S. Grant," through an error in which he acquiesced so that he became known afterward by that name. One of the entries in the book is: "2 prs. dimity pants, or punster breeches."

THREE AUTOMOBILES JAMMED BY CAR ON LOCUST STREET

Two Women, a Man and a Baby Figure in Mix-Up of the Machines.

Three automobiles were damaged and several persons slightly injured at 4:45 yesterday afternoon when an eastbound Hodiamont car struck the automobile of Charles E. Golterman, 7512 Virginia avenue, on Locust street, about 100 feet east of Tenth street. The Golterman machine was knocked against the automobile of Mrs. Hannah Owen of 4379 Washington boulevard, which in turn was jammed against the car of Dr. H. C. Crockett, of 3912 Lafayette avenue.

Mrs. Lillian Hartman, 57 years old, of 5027 Page boulevard, who was in the machine with Mrs. Owen, was bruised. She was taken home. Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Edmondson, who live with Mrs. Hartman, were also in the automobile and were slightly injured. Their two-year-old baby was thrown out but not seriously hurt. The automobiles were slightly damaged.

SENATE ADOPTS HOUSE BILL RETAINING DUTY ON SUGAR

Recedes From Amendment Which Lower Body Had Declined in Conference to Accept.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Late today the Senate approved the House bill repealing the free sugar section of the tariff law, under which sugar would have gone on the free list May 1.

By a vote of 59 to 10 the Senate receded from an amendment which it had passed extending the existing duty of 1 cent a pound for four years, and to which the House refused to agree in conference. The effect of the measure passed is to keep the 1-cent duty indefinitely.

Democratic Senators cast all of the 10 votes against supporting the House measure. They were Gore, Hardwick, Hughes, Husting, Johnson of South Dakota, Lane, Martine, Smith of Georgia, Thomas and Vardaman.

The repeal sought by the administration to keep up revenues, now needs only the President's signature to become effective. The one cent duty yields about $50,000,000 annually.

PRISONER IS SAID TO HAVE AGREED TO KILL J. P. MORGAN

Accusers Say He Was Willing to Run Financier's Auto Down or Leave Bomb in Office.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Harry L. Newton, a former munitions worker, who was arrested here Thursday after entering into an alleged agreement to blow up a munitions plant, was prepared to kill J. P. Morgan, according to an affidavit submitted today in the Tombs Police Court. On the strength of this document Newton was held for examination next Tuesday.

In the affidavit, made by Lieut. Barnitz, a detective, and corroborated by Felix W. Galley, a Fifth avenue contractor, it is sworn that Newton promised to kill Morgan, if well paid for it, by running an automobile at full speed into the banker's car. If this scheme failed, Newton promised, according to the affidavit, to carry a time bomb into Morgan's offices and leave it there, saying he could gain entrance by displaying a button inscribed "In His Majesty's Service," which he obtained when working in a Canadian munitions factory.

Newton was held in the court today on a charge of violating a section of the penal code dealing with "an attempt to commit a crime."

Newton was arrested after he was alleged to have agreed with detectives to destroy munitions plants in Dunkirk, N. Y., and Canada. He was arraigned yesterday and charged with bringing explosives from Canada. Exonerated of this accusation by the Court, he was next held on a complaint that he had a bomb in his possession in Buffalo. This also was discarded and he was then charged with conspiring to blow up the Federal building in this city, for which he was held until the new charge was entered against him today.

Newton is described as an expert mechanic and a native-born American.

DENTIST'S ERROR KILLS HIM

FRESNO, Cal., April 22.—Poison taken by mistake caused the death of Dr. C. W. James, a dentist, here today. Dr. James intended to swallow a solution which is impenetrable to X-rays and therefore make a photographic shadow of value in diagnosing digestive ailments. He took instead a substance of similar name but of deadly effect.

PAINTER ACTING GOVERNOR, BUT HE DIDN'T KNOW ABOUT IT

Major Went Away and Did Not Notify the Lieutenant-Governor of His Departure.

Lieutenant-Governor Painter Friday night automatically became Governor of Missouri, but up to last night had not taken up his duties because he had not been officially notifed that Gov. Major was out of the State.

Gov. Major departed from St. Louis for a week's tour of Southern states in connection with his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for vice president. He overlooked the usual courtesy of notifying the Lieutenant-Governor of his intended absence.

This is attributed by politicians to a speech Lieutenant-Governor Painter delivered at a Democratic gathering in Columbia last week. The Lieutenant-Governor, who is a candidate for the nomination for Governor, did not mention Gov. Major's name in his speech, but in describing his own qualifications for Governor, he said he could not dance, and he talked about the diversion of the school fund and inefficiency in the management of State institutions. It is said by politicians that the Governor took these remarks to be directed at him personally.

In response to a telegram from the Post-Dispatch asking if he would go to Jefferson City as acting Governor, the Lieutenant-Governor replied:

"I do not know that Gov. Major is out of the State. If he is and it is necessary, I will go to Jefferson City at any time. I am always ready to attend to any duty that falls upon me."

A notification to the Lieutenant-Governor by the Governor in leaving the State is not required by law, but it has been the custom for many years.

EXPERIMENT BEING MADE TO FIND SCARLET FEVER ANTITOXIN

Hospital Orderlies at Boston Inoculated in Attempt to Isolate Bacilli of Disease.

BOSTON, April 22.—An attempt to identify isolated bacilli as those of scarlet fever is being watched with interest by the staff of the city hospital. Germs isolated by Dr. Frank B. Mallory, assistant professor of pathology at the Harvard Medical School, as the probable bacilli of that disease, were injected four days ago into the veins of H. R. C. Mott and Hugh W. Rice, former orderlies of the institution, for the purpose of determining whether scarlet fever would develop.

The disease was expected to manifest itself within five or six days, physicians at the hospital said. Should Dr. Mallory's theory of the identity of the germs prove correct, a vaccine for treatment of scarlet fever could be readily obtained, it was said.

BRITAIN IMPOSES RESTRICTIONS ON U. S. STEEL TRADE

Dealers Forced to Guarantee That Orders Are Not Destined for England's Enemies.

Great Britain's attempt to prevent the importation of steel products into Germany has led to the promulgation of a stringent trade regulation that extends to practically every dealer in steel products in the United States. St Louis steel men have received notice from the large steel manufacturers that hereafter every sale of semi-finished steel products in the manufacture of which ferro manganese or ferro chrome is used (which means virtually all steel, including war supplies) will be made only on condition that the purchaser agrees to the "Consumers' Guarantee for Cres." promulgated by the British Government.

This means, a large St. Louis dealer in steel products said, that the entire steel industries of the United States is at the mercy of the British Government. It means further, he said, that military and naval preparedness are absolutely necessary if the United States is to maintain economic freedom. Great Britain's power to enforce this trade regulation comes from her great navy, he said.

Conditions England Imposes.

The conditions imposed as a result of the "Consumer's Guarantee for Cres" are: That orders for steel products in the manufacture of which ferro manganese or ferro chrome is used will not be executed to be sent, either directly or indirectly, to any country or state at war with Great Britain; that no sales of semi-finished steel products will be made without obtaining satisfactory assurances from the buyer that there is no intention on his part to export or to resell same for exportation to any country in Europe other than Great Britain, France, Italy or Russia; that if exportations of steel be made to a destination outside of Europe not being in British possesions, same are to be reported as far as possible to the British Consul General at New York, giving particulars of the goods so shipped and their destination.

The basis for the effectiveness of this order is in the fact that most of the ferro manganese and ferro chrome come from British possessions. India is the greatest producer of these metals. Other British possessions produce large quantitie and Russia, Great Britain's ally, also produces the ores for export. These ores are necessary for the manufacture of steel and at present the amount of them mined in the United States is comparatively small.

The order has made it necessary for American manufacturers to notify their customers of these conditions and to require pledges from all buyers of steel products that the conditions will be observed. Otherwise the supply of ores from British possessions is in danger of being cut off.

During 1915 the Post-Dispatch printed 5380 Classified Instruction Want Ads, a gain of 326 and 3635 more than the four other St. Louis newspapers combined printed during the same period.

OVERSIZE is a marked advantage in Goodyear No-Hook Cord Tires.

Three sizes, for example, have 23 to 35 per cent more air space than regulation Q. D. clinchers of corresponding dimensions.

This means a larger pneumatic cushion, made still more easy-riding because high inflation pressures are not necessary.

And this combines with the natural resilience of Goodyear Cord construction to produce utmost comfort; with its natural flexibility to give utmost protection against stone-bruise and blow-out.

LETTER ON NAVY'S 'UNPREPAREDNESS' SENT TO SENATE

Communication by Rear Admiral Fiske Transmitted by Secretary Daniels.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Secretary Daniels transmitted to the Senate today his response to the Lodge resolution, adopted April 12, calling upon him to submit a letter from the Navy General Board dated Aug. 3, 1914, and a communication from Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, then aid for operations, dated Nov. 9, 1914. The communications were described in the resolution as warning the Secretary that the navy was unprepared for war. They were first mentioned publicly when Representative Britten asked Daniels to produce them during his examination before the House Naval Committee recently, and he refused.

Admiral Fiske's letter is a long document beginning with the statement that the writer urgently requests "the attention of the Secretary to the fact that the United States navy is unprepared for war."

Search of the files of the Navy Department and the General Board failed to disclose, however, any such letter from the General Board as that mentioned in the resolution, according to Secretary Daniels. A letter from Admiral Dewey, president of the Board, containing such a statement is transmitted.

Admiral Fiske's letter is a careful analysis of the situation of the navy in the early days of the European war and contains the statement that if the country avoids war during the next five years it will be accomplished only by a happy combination of diplomatic skill and rare good fortune.

It asserts that the navy was then short 19,600 men and that while the ships were well organized and "pretty well drilled," that the department itself was neither "organized nor drilled in a military way."

"Perhaps this is nobody's fault," the letter continues, "and may be attributed to the fact that our navy has never had to fight a serious enemy; certainly not in a hundred years."

Admiral Fiske then appends an argument for the creation of a navy general staff.

Commenting on this letter, Secretary Daniels, in his communication to the Senate, says:

"This communication was not furnished to me and I did not know of its existence until long after it was written. It was filed with the chief clerk without my knowledge that it had been written. Although Rear Admiral Fiske was in my office daily, he did not tell me that he had placed the communication on file."

NEARLY AS MUCH HORSE AS MOTOR TRAFFIC IN COUNTY

Revealed in Official Recapitulation of Highway Census—Data Gathered as Basis for Plans to Use Road Bond Money.

The first official recapitulation of the preliminary highway census of St. Louis County, begun March 28 and continued for seven days, was made public at Clayton last night. Its most astonishing revelation, in the opinion of those who have been studying traffic conditions in the county, was that the horse is still holding its own with the motor car.

Twenty-one census takers, posted at points where 73 branches of traffic might be observed, counted 64,910 autos of all kinds and 64,859 horse-drawn vehicles, leaving a balance of 61 in favor of the former out of a total of 129,769. It had been thought that a greater motor predominance would be disclosed, particularly since some of the observation points were close to the city limits on highways greatly favored by motorists.

Practically all of the 129,769 vehicles were counted by more than one observer. It is estimated that a fourth of that number would closely approximate the net traffic for the seven days.

The survey is under the direction of W. E. Rosengarten, highway engineer of the public roads and rural engineering section of the United States Department of Agriculture. The recapitulation was prepared from the reports of the census takers by Emil Kronsburg of the County Highway Engineers Department.

Motor cars actually did predominate largely at all points east of the Denny road, but west of that thoroughfare horse-drawn vehicles were in such a great majority as almost to wipe out the discrepancy.

The busiest single traffic point was found on the St. Charles rock road, for the comparatively short distance between the Lucas and Hunt road and the city limits. Here 6374 vehicles were counted within the week. The nine next points were:

Gravois road, east of Tesson Ferry road, 6003; Manchester road east of Big Bend road, 5106; St. Charles rock road west of Lucas and Hunt road, 4752; Big Bend road south of Manchester road, 4577; Gravois road west of Tesson Ferry road, 4415; Natural Bridge road east of Florissant road, 3534; Lemay Ferry road north of Telegraph road, 3278; Manchester road west of Big Bend road, 3091; Denny road south of Manchester road, 2763.

While it was said that the census did not indicate which of the main thoroughfares leading out of St. Louis bears the heaviest traffic, the recapitulation shows only three of them mentioned twice among the 10 leaders. If this were taken as a criterion it would seem that the St. Charles rock road is first, the Manchester road and the Gravois road closely following.

The purpose of the survey is to get adequate data from which to prepare plans to expend the $3,000,000 in bonds for road and bridge improvement voted in the county, Feb. 15. It is expected to show the engineers where the heaviest strains on material will come.

Similar censuses will be taken in July, September and December. In later years other observations will be made as a test of the practical value of the improvements.

Rosengarten started work yesterday on another phase of the survey. He mailed a letter to each farmer and gardener whose address could be obtained, explaining the reasons for the study and asking for co-operation. Inclosed with the letter was a blank form to be filled out and returned to him.

The principal information sought was the number of acres owned or cultivated, the acreage of wheat, corn, hay and garden produce, the amount of livestock and forest products, the production to the acre, the amount consumed on the farm, how much tonnage is hauled in a year and the distance, the average weight hauled to the wagon or truck load, the amount of coal, feed, groceries, fertilizers, etc., hauled to the farm.

The blank form also asked where the nearest markets were located, what roads were used in hauling, what railroad stations were near, how many trips are made in a year, the number of hours for a single trip, what difference in time is meant by dry and wet roads, how often the roads are impassable, what annual loss can be attributed to bad road conditions, to what extent the parcel post is used, how many children in school, the distance to the school and how the condition of the roads affects attendance at school and church.

Although it will require many months to complete the survey, both County Highway Engineer William Elbring and J. C. Travilla, highway expert, declared a beginning of the improvements would not await its completion. They said they were working on plans and that these would be given to the public later.

1,500,000 BUSHEL ELEVATOR TO BE BUILT IN CARONDELET

J. T. Milliken Announces Project Has Been Financed—Will Be Erected on Iron Mountain Tracks.

A grain elevator of 1,500,000 bushels capacity will be built immediately on the tracks of the Iron Mountain System near Carondelet by interests identified with the Missouri Pacific Railroad, according to an announcement made yesterday by J. T. Milliken, wealthy chemical manufacturer and grain dealer.

Milliken is a director and one of the largest stockholders in the Missouri Pacific Railroad, and has been using his influence for some time to increase the elevator capacity of St. Louis. He told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the plans for the new elevator and financial arrangements for its construction have been completed and that a meeting of officials of the Missouri Pacific Railroad and directors of the Merchants' Exchange will be held this week to decide on a site. It is probable that the elevator will be built on the site of the old Carondelet Elevator, destroyed many years ago by fire. It will be of concrete construction and modern in every detail. The cost is placed in excess of $1,000,000.

A committee of Merchants' Exchange members, headed by J. O. Ballard, appointed recently to confer with officials of of the railroads in an effort to increase the elevator room here, was instrumental in bringing the present plans to a head.

AFTER DEATH—WHAT HAPPENS

C. W. Berg of Salina, Kan., an undertaker of 25 years' experience, states that very few people know what takes place during the time intervening between the death and burial of their loved ones. The undertaking business, semingly, has always been shrouded in mystery.

Death is sure and certain. When it enters your home you should be in a position to know all about what is required, from knowing how the body of your dead is being treated, to how to order a proper funeral without creating useless and uncalled-for expense.

Let me tell you all about the undertaking business "from the inside." Particulars free, in plain wrapper.

RECOVERS SPEECH AFTER YEAR

Woman Stricken Dumb Last May Suddenly Regains Power to Talk.

NEW YORK, April 22.—It will be a joyous Easter for Mrs. William Cuppinger of College Point, L. I., because she has recovered the gift of speech after nearly a year of silence.

Mrs. Cuppinger, who is 30 years old, became dumb last May. Her physician thought the loss of her speech might be due to the formation of a blood clot, and treated her with a hope of dissolving the clot. Last Wednesday his patient developed symptoms of grip. Friday night he was told Mrs Cuppinger was going insane. He hurried to her and as he came in she writhed as if in pain, then looked up and exclaimed: "I feel better now."

Mrs. Cuppinger said she felt something snap in her head and speech returned.

NEW CABINET IN CHINA TO HAVE CIVIL AUTHORITY

President Yuan-Shi-Kai Admits His Full Control Resulted in Disaffection.

PEKING, China, April 22.—In accordance with the mandate issued yesterday by President Yuan-Shi-Kai in which he admitted his full control of the administration had caused dissatisfaction and authorized the Secretary of State to organize a responsible cabinet, it was announced today that a new cabinet was being constructed.

Tuan Chi Jui, former Minister of War, has accepted the premiership and the war portfolio. The following other members of the cabinet which is being formed under the direction of Tuan Chi Jui have been virtually selected.

Foreign Affairs—Lu Cheng Hsiang, the incumbent.

Finance—Chang Hu, now vice Minister.

Interior—Wang Yih Ting, former Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Marine—Admiral Liu Kuang Hsun, the incumbent.

Communications—Tsao Yulin, now vice Minister of Foreign affairs.

Chow Tzu Chi, Minister of Agriculture, becomes director general of the bank of China.

President Yuan-Shi-Kai has agreed to surrender all civil authority to the new cabinet. The Peking government hopes that the premiership of Tuan Chi Jui, who is staunch Republican, will reconcile the southern provinces and put an end to the uprising.

Coal Man Runs for Congress.

Charles K. Cohn, a coal dealer of 2917 Easton avenue, yesterday announced that he was a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress from the Eleventh District.

A. C. STEWART DIES; STRICKEN FRIDAY WHEN ON A TRAIN

Lawyer Was Former Head of Police Board and Introduced Policy of Rigid Discipline.

A 33D DEGREE MASON

Served in Confederate Army in His Youth and Was Prominent in Church Affairs.

Alphonse Chase Stewart, 67 years old, of 5727 Cabanne avenue, attorney and former president of the Police Board, died at 6:30 o'clock last night in St. Luke's Hospital, from uremia, after an illness which began Friday afternoon on a train.

He was the head of the law firm of Stewart, Bryan & Williams, and was counsel for the St. Louis Union Trust Co. He was a native of Lebanon, Tenn., and as a boy in his 'teens served in Stearns' Fourth Tennessee Cavalry, of the Confederate army.

He was admitted to the bar in 1867, and practiced in Winchester, Tenn., and Meridian, Miss., before coming to St. Louis in 1873. He was a thirty-third degree Mason and was active in church and Sunday-school work, having been one of the leading laymen of the Cumberland Presbyterian denomination, which in recent years merged with the main Presbyterian body. He was one of the chief supporters of Missouri Valley College, in Marshall, Mo., and was the donor of the $75,000 Stewart Chapel there.

Gov. Folk, in 1905, made Stewart head of the St. Louis Police Board. He gave much time and energy to police affairs, and introduced a policy of military strictness in dealing with breaches of discipline on the part of policemen. The rule that no policeman shall enter a saloon, except in performance of his duty, was introduced by him. Stewart also inaugurated a policy of publicity in police matters, by opening Police Board meetings to newspaper reporters, who had formerly been excluded.

He is survived by Mrs. Stewart, who was formerly Miss Elizabeth Smith of Winchester Tenn., a son, Dr. Samuel Smith Stewart, and a daughter, Mrs. George H. Williams, formerly Miss Harriet Chase Stewart. His son-in-law, former Judge Williams, was one of his law partners.

GERMAN ABUSE OF PRISONERS IN SOUTH AFRICA IS CHARGED

Poorly Fed, Scantily Clad and Kept in Insanitary Quarters, Commission Report Says.

LONDON, April 22.—A Reuter dispatch from Cape Town, dealing with the report of a commission of inquiry into the treatment of prisoners of war by the Germans in Southwest Africa is in part as follows:

"Food rations were coarse and became so insufficient that men were reduced to waiting in line to drink the blood of slaughtered oxen and to boiling the soft parts of hides to extract nourishment. They were scantily clad and harshly treated, some being sent on long railway journeys clad in tunic, a short loin cloth and sandals and helmet, a spectacle, says the report, 'for women natives who saw them on the road.' The German Governor Seitz ordered them placed in irons during their transit. One officer, Capt. Geary was held in solitary confinement for six months in a small cell of filthy sanitary conditions and infested with vermin and threatened with confinement in dark cell if he dared to look out of the window.

"British civilians who were political prisoners, with women and children, were confined to common jails, sleeping 10 in a single cell with locked doors, resulting in sickness.

Gen. Louis Botha told the House the prisoners had been released and were no longer suffering.

Thankful for Great Relief the Remedy Brought Her

Says Fruitola and Traxo Possesses All the Merit That Is Claimed for It.

After completing the necessary treatment, Mrs. S. S. Cole, Lampasas, Texas, was so well pleased with the results that she wrote the Pinus laboratories as follows: "Fruitola and Traxo are all you claim. It removed a quantity of gall-stones and I feel sure it saved my life. I am well now and thankful to you for the great good your medicine has done me."

Fruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs and one dose is usually sufficient to give ample evidence of its efficacy. It is a great system cleanser. Following a dose of Fruitola, Traxo should be taken three or four times a day in order to rebuild and restore the system that has been weakened and run down by constant suffering. It is a splendid tonic, acting on the liver and stomach most beneficially.

Fruitola and Traxo are prepared in the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists. In St. Louis they can be obtained at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., 6th St. and Washington Av.

SCHOOL TREASURY BOOKS BURNED IN LE PAGE HOME FIRE

Man Who Used $37,000 of Funds for Deals Says Records Were Destroyed.

AUDIT OF HIS ACCOUNTS

Successor Will Not Take Office Until Figures Are Checked Up.

Stephen T. Le Page, former treasurer of the Outlying School District in East St. Louis, who recently confessed to his bondsmen that he had invested the $37,000 of school funds in his care in private real estate deals, has told the trustees of the district that all his school records, up to two years ago, were burned in a fire which destroyed his residence, at Edgemont more than a year ago. The trustees had ordered an audit of the books before August Eggman, the new treasurer, would accept them from Le Page.

Jesse I. Gedney, a trustee, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the destruction of the records would make the audit more difficult, but that he believed it could be made without them. The County Superintendent has a record of all the money turned over to Le Page, and the Board of Education has records of all the money paid out.

Considerable difficulty is being had in arranging for a loan on Le Page's real estate. The bank that had been expected to make the loan has expressed a disinclination to make it, but other negotiations are under way.

The following men are on Le Page's bonds: Maurice V. Joyce, P. W. Abt, Thomas L. Fekete, Charles B. Goedde, H. J. de Haan, A. J. de Haan, George Heller, H. C. Fairbrother, Robert Gillespie, L. B. Washburn, Fred Warning, Albert Le Page and Joseph Le Page, Fairbrother, Heller and Washburn are dead. None of the men signed all the bonds, Goedde having signed five of the six, Fekete, four; Abt, five, and Heller, three.

Le Page told his bondsmen that he had property worth $105,000, over and above encumbrances. One parcel of land which Le Page valued at $84,000, was inspected last week by three of the bondsmen, and they agreed that it is worth at least $65,000. They will ask that a loan of $35,000 be made, with this parcel as security.

NAVY BOARD AERO MAN NAMED

Bion J. Arnold Chosen to Succeed Henry A. Wise Wood.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Secretary Daniels announced today that Bion J. Arnold had been elected to represent the American Society of Aeronautic Engineers on the Navy Consulting Board, succeeding Henry A. Wise Wood, who resigned because he was not in sympathy with the Secretary's building program.

Arnold, an electrical engineer and inventor, was a member of the committee on aeronautics at the Columbian Exposition in 1893. He is a member of the Aero Club of America and former president of the Aero Club of Illinois.

30th Anniversary of Furniture Firm.

The thirtieth anniversary of the Mulvihill Furniture Co., 112-114 North Twelfth street, will be celebrated this week. This firm has been at its present location since its organization. Recently a seven-story building was erected to take care of Mulvihill's growing business. M. J. Mulvihill, founder of the firm, is still its active head. He says an important element in the firm's success has been its featuring of complete three-room outfits for newly-married couples on time payments. Some of the firm's employes have been with it as long as 24 years. A special sale will open tomorrow in honor of the firm's birthday.

SUES WOMAN ON $1960 NOTE

Wife of Preston Gibson Fails to Pay Obligation to Money Lender.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Robert Werntz of Annapolis, Md., through his attorney, Edward L. Ries, has filed suit in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to recover $1960 from Mrs. Grace McMillan Gibson, wife of Preston Gibson, on a promissory note. Mrs. Gibson made the note Oct. 29, 1914, payable in 90 days, to a Washington money lender, who sold it to Werntz at a discount.

Attorney Ries said no security was given to Werntz, and he understands no security was put up by Mrs. Gibson in the first instance. The attorney said his client had not informed him what excuse Mrs. Gibson has offered for non-payment of the note.

MISTRIAL IN COMMISSION SUIT

Jury Unable to Agree on Realty Agents' Claim of $375 for a Sale.

A mistrial was declared yesterday by Circuit Judge Koerner in the case of Albert Terry, a realty operator, suing Mrs. Ella B. Robinson for a commission of $375 in a real estate deal, after a jury had been unable to agree upon a verdict. Terry alleged that he had a contract with Mrs. Robinson to sell her home at 11 Princeton avenue, University City, and that as a result of his efforts the property was purchased by Dr. M. F. Engman for $15,000. Mrs. Robinson asserted she ended the contract with Terry before the sale took place.

Dr. Engman admitted that Terry was the first one to speak to him about buying Mrs. Robinson's home, but added that the plaintiff was not in the deal when it was closed. Terry won the case before a jury in a Justice of the Peace court, from which the defendant appealed.

629 OUT OF EACH 1000 ENLISTED MEN IN U. S. ARMY ILL IN 1914

Public Health Service Unable to Account for Showing as Against Other Federal Employes.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Officers and soldiers of the United States Army were sick oftener and longer in 1914 than any other body of men which came under the observation of the Public Health Service, according to a report on disability statistics published today.

During the year, the report says, 629 enlisted men out of every 1000 in the army were admitted to sick report. Disability due to disease was as the rate of 498 per 1000, and due to injury, 131. The average disability lasted 13½ days and the average number of days of disability per year for all the enlisted personnel was eight and one half.

Government employes in Washington, according to statistics covering 16,000 persons, lost only 5.84 days each on an average for disability, or nearly three days each less a year than for enlisted men.

The report said the Service was at a loss to understand this, inasmuch as a large percentage of Government employes are in middle or elderly life, while the big majority of enlisted men are in their 20s and are acepted only after rigid physical examinations.

BAKER DEFENDS "SPEEDING UP"

Secretary Wants Bill to Abolish System at Arsenals Killed.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Secretary Baker wrote a letter to Speaker Clark today urging that pending legislation to abolish so-called speeding-up methods at Government arsenals be defeated. He said there was no evidence that the system had imposed regulations unduly severe upon workmen, as implied by labor leaders who are advocating its abolition.

Operation of the system at the Watertown arsenal was cited by the Secretary as showing that ideal results had been obtained under it.

War Veterans to Give "Barn Dance."

Gen. Nelson Cole Camp No. 4 of the United States War Veterans will give a barn dance at the Army and Navy Club, 3621 Washington avenue, Saturday evening. The principal event of the evening will be an old-fashioned square dance. Some of the dancers will be Gov. Major, Lieutenant-Governor O'Hara of Illinois, and Dr. F. W. Veninza. The officers from Jefferson Barracks will attend.

SIX PRISONERS IN ILLINOIS JAIL ESCAPE, ONE RECAPTURED

Slat From a Bunk Is Used to Dig Through Three Layers of a Brick Wall.

KANKAKEE, Ill., April 22.—Six prisoners, charged with felonious crimes, participated in a jail delivery here at 6:45 o'clock this evening and five of them succeeded in eluding a large posse, headed by Sheriff Bothfu, which pursued them.

Alfred Hunter, a negro, awaiting trial on a charge of attempted murder, was captured shortly before 10 o'clock.

The prisoners, who included Gus Penman, Jesse Brown, Joseph Burns, Frank Miller, Charles Johnson and Hunter, effected their escape by digging through three layers of a brick wall with a steel slat from one of the bunks in the cells.

Penman, who is supposed to have led the prisoners, was convicted in Champaign County of murdering his chum, Harold Shaw. He was sentenced to life imprisonement, but was granted a new trial by the Supreme Court. Taking a change of venue, he was brought to this city for a second trial, which was to have begun on May 28.

LOSSES OF BRITISH OFFICERS IN WAR TO END OF MARCH, 25,033

Casualties During Last Month of the Period Were Again Heaviest on Eastern Front.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, April 10.—Officers' casualty lists show that during March the British army lost 372 killed, 690 wounded and 44 missing, a total of 1106.

The losses in officers since the commencement of hostilities total 25,033. Of these, 7792 were killed or died of wounds, 15,438 were wounded and 1803 are missing.

In March the losses were again heaviest in the eastern war theater, the Indians losing 73 killed, 91 wounded and 9 missing. Lancashire regiments had 13 killed, 27 wounded; Kents, 3 killed, 30 wounded; Canadians, 10 killed, 25 wounded; Royal Engineers, 12 killed, 25 wounded; Royal Field Artillery, 13 killed, 55 wounded. The flying corps casualties are higher, with 9 killed, 14 wounded and 13 missing.

Two Brigadier-Generals and two Major-Generals were wounded and one Colonel and 11 Lieutenant-Colonels killed during the month.

IGOE BILL AMENDING RESERVE ACT TO BE REPORTED FAVORABLY

It Allows an Individual to Serve as Officer, Director or Employe of More Than One Bank.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 22.—The House Committe on Banking and Currency will make a favorable report Monday on a bill introduced by Representative Igoe of St. Louis amending the Federal Reserve Act so that one individual may serve as an officer, director or employe of more than one bank, banking association or trust company in the new currency system.

The Federal Reserve Board is given discretion to determine when substantial competition exists between member banks. Where banks are in active competition an individual may not serve as officer, director or employe of more than one institution. Where such competition does not exist one individual may serve wth the principal institution with which he is conected and not more than two other member banks.

The bill was introduced at the urgent request of Festus J. Wade and other leading St. Louis bankers.

A similar bill was introduced in the Senate by Senator Kern of Indiana.

AMERICAN SANITARY TRANSPORT PRAISED IN FRENCH ARMY ORDER

Disregarded Danger in Removing Wounded Men From Zone Swept by Enemy Artillery.

PARIS, April 22.—The chief officers at the fighting front have given notable recognition to the American sanitary transport section, known as the Harjes Formation, by the issuance of a formal citation in army orders reading:

"This organization assured, during the period of 11 days' fighting from March 8 to 19, with absolute disregard of danger, the transportation of wounded in a zone particularly swept by enemy artillery. Moreover, all its personnel exhibited proof of remarkable devotion and endurance in maintaining throughout 19 hours daily a maximum service from this unit."

The section comprises about 30 automobiles with American volunteer workers. During the heavy fighting several of their cars were struck by splinters of shells, but no casualties resulted.

KAHANAMOKU IS SECOND TO CANN IN TITLE SWIM

Eighteen-Year-Old New Yorker Finishes Half Length Ahead of Hawaiian Star in 500-Yard Championship.

WINNER'S TIME IS FAR FROM RECORD

Cann Covers Distance in 6 Minutes, 24 2-5 Seconds, Eleven Seconds Faster Than Nearest Competitor.

Tedford H. Cann, the 18-year-old student of Hamilton Institute, New York City, showed his heels to the far-famed Duke Paoa Kahanamoku, the Hawaiian water wonder, and won first honors for the New York A. C., in the National A. A. 500-yard swimming championship event, held in the tank of the Missouri Athletic Association, last night.

The winner paddled the distance in 6m. 23 2-5s., completing the twentieth and last lap 15 yards ahead of the islander. Herman Laubis, a St. Louis youth representing the Missouri A. A., was the third to finish, some 12 yards in the wake of Kahanamoku. Halpin Burke, another local swimmer, also of the M. A. A., dropped out of the race after completing 12 laps.

Cann hopped off to the lead at the plunge and from the time that he first struck the water until the final pistol report, was never headed. He opened with a fast, well executed crawl stroke hitting at a good 100-yard dash pace for the first four laps, or 100 yards. He then worked into a slower piston-like stroke, taking fuller arm motion with a strong foot action and maintained this action until the final lap of the race, when he again waxed into a speedy sprint.

Time Is Shy of Record.

Cann fell some 10 3-5s short of the world's 500-yard record, which was set only last year by Ludy Langer of the Illinois A. C. Langer made the distance in 6m, 13 4-5s at the Frisco swimming championships. However, last night's winner was at no time really pressed and it was the consensus of opinion among the tank sharps last night that he could have clipped off from 7 to 10 seconds from the time, had the competition been keener.

Kahanamoku's showing last night was disappointing. When he swam the first length a second to Cann and then allowed himself on the following two laps to fall behind Laubis, it was thought that he was but executing a piece of Hawaiian water strategy and that he was but taking matters easily, purposely. Then, however, as the race aged, it was seen that the dusky contestant could not cut down the breach of the Easterner, but, instead, was falling behind. Duke's strokes lacked the power and definition of those of his opponent. It was evident that he was putting his entire effort into his paddling, but he simply lacked the steam. His turns at the completion of each length were far from good, it being necessary that he come fully out of the water each time.

Burke Drops Out.

Laubis swam a neat race considering the company in which he was traveling. He used a smooth, nice-looking crawl through the entire race. Burke went into a little too steep competition and after trailing through the earlier lengths was forced to drop out of the competition after swimming 12 laps.

An idea of the race as technically swam may be given by the following times caught by the watches: At the 100-yard mark the men passed as follows: Cann 62s.; Laubis, 67s.; Kahanamoku, 67s. 200-yard mark: Cann, 2m. 20s.; Kahanamoku, 2m. 25s.; Laubis, 2m. 27s. 300-yard mark: Cann, 3m. 40s.; Kahanamoku, 3m. 50s.; Laubis, 3m. 54s. 400-yard mark: Cann, 5m. 2s.; Kahanamoku, 5m., 15s.; Laubis, 5m. 20s.

Ted Can is prepped as one of the nation's swimming stars. He recently won the national A. A. U. junior 100-yard title and in so doing created a new mark, 5 1-5 seconds. In the senior 220-yard race held in New York last month he finished second-third to Vollmar and McGillivray. Raither, Wheatley and Kahanamoku were other stars who competed in this race.

Stuerman Beats Heath.

Several events were placed upon the program last night for the special amusement of the large gallery which witnessed the event. Stuerman, the former Yeatman High School lad, nosed out Chauncey Heath, who is at present engaged in a comeback effort, in the 100-yard dash. Roth finished third. Stuerman's time was 62s.

Elmer Bauer won from a field of four in a fancy diving exhibition, scoring more points than Goepel, Kretzer and Proctor. All of the divers had somewhat of an off night and the dives were not up to their usual standard. In a medley race, in which each swimmer traveled a lap under water and one lap at the breast, back and crawl strokes, Stephens, Horn and Potthoff finished in the order named. Potthoff and Horn as a team won the Rescue Race.

PENN'S VARSITY CREW BEATS YALE BY LENGTH

PHILADELPHIA, April 22.—The University of Pennsylvania varsity eight-oared shell crew defeated Yale over the mile-and-a-half course on the Schuylkill River here today by close to a length of open water. Yale's junior crew beat Pennsylvania's juniors by a quarter of a length. Today's races were Pennsylvania's first under the coaching of Joe Wright, the Canadian oarsman, and the victory of the varsity eight gave great satisfaction to the followers of the Quaker crews.

Both varsity crews got away together at the start, each doing considerable splashing. Pennsylvania struck a 40-to-the-minute clip. Yale, rowing somewhat slower, kept pace with Pennsylvania for a quarter of a mile. Neither was able to gain any advantage in the first half mile, but starting at this point Pennsylvania began to forge ahead and slowly left Yale in the rear.

Yeatman Holds McKinley Nine to Close Score

South Side Team, Strong Favorites, Win From North Siders by Only 2 Runs.

The McKinley High School baseball nine inaugurated its Interscholastic League schedule, with a 5 to 3 victory over the Yeatmann High team at High School Field, yesterday morning. The victorious South Siders, who hold the 1915 championship, were favored to win over the weaker Yeatman team, and the narrowness of the margin of victory came as a surprise to scholastic diamond followers.

The scoring in yesterdays game was all confined to the first three innings, not a runner crossing the plate, after the third stanza. McKinley opened the hostilities in the first inning, counting a pair of runs.

Coach Schieks' tossers lost their advantage in the first of the third, when the heavy end of the Yeatman batting list hit the ball to the effect of three tallies. This lead was short lived, however, the South Siders coming right back in this session with the same number.

Ted Menze, the hard-hitting center fielder, was not in the lineup. It was explained that Menze was indisposed and simply took an off-day. Rumor had it, though, that there had been a splitup and that Menze had quit the team. Wallace and Fries were the main lights for the winners with their faraway hitting. La Barge and Smith were the main hitsmiths for the losers.

LELAND STANFORD CREW DEFEATS CALIFORNIA U.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 22.—Leland Stanford Junior University won by five lengths its annual boat race with the University of California today, over the three-mile course of the Oakland Estuary.

The unofficial time was 18m. 23s., which was slow for the course. Stanford was disastrously defeated two weeks ago at Seattle by the University of Washington. The Stanford crew will go East for the Poughkeepsie meet in June.

WORLD'S RECORDS FALL AT DRAKE'S RELAY CARNIVAL

Mark for 220-Yard Dash Around a Turn Lowered by Hoyt, Officials Say.

BADGERS WIN LONG RACE

Wisconsin Men Run Away From All Competitors, Setting a New Mark.

DES MOINES, Io., April 22.—Three meet records were broken and two new world's records were established today in the university class at the seventh annual Drake relay meet, held in the Drake Stadium here.

In the special 220-yard dash the feature event of the program, Hoyt of Grinnell College romped away from his competitors, completing the distance in 21 2-5s. Hohman of Illinois was second, and Shearer of Drake a close third.

The remainder of the field, who comprised some of the fastest men for the distance in the country, were closely bunched behind Shearer. According to Coaches Stagg of Chicago, Farrell of Michigan and Gill of Illinois, Hoyt's time represents a new world's record for the 220 on a curved outdoor track.

(Editor's Note.—1916 Athletic Guide quotes D. J. Kelly as having made 21 1-5 seconds for the 220-yard dash "around a slight curve).

Wisconsin Wins 4-Mile Race.

In the four-mile university event, Wisconsin outdistanced all other competitors and broke the meet record for the distance, finishing in 18:03 2-5. The former record, also held by Wisconsin was 18:04 2-5. Wisconsin took from Chicago the meet record of 1:30 for the half-mile relay, made in 1915. Hohman of Illinois finished second with Hardy, of Notre Dame, a close third. The winner's time was 1:28 4-5, a new world's record.

The one-mile event in the University class also developed close competition, with Wisconsin, Chicago and Missouri in the first positions, and finishing in the order named. Smith, the last Wisconsin man to run, stepped across the line for a time of 3:22 2-5, cutting the former record held by Chicago by an even two seconds.

The two-mile university event was an easy victory for Purdue, Ames being the runner-up with Kansas third, in 8:01 2-5, 1 2-5 seconds slower than last year's time.

In the college class, Morningside won the two-mile event in 8:17 2-5, clipping three-fifths of a second from the former record, held by themselves, with Cornell and South Dakota runners-up.

In the high school class, East Des Moines broke a meet record by taking the mile in 3:36 4-5, two-fifths faster than the former record held by West Des Moines. Webster City clipped 1 2-5 seconds off the previous record, held by Hampton, in the medley event, going the distance in 6:56.

The weather was clear and cool and the track very fast.

Summaries:

University Class, two-mile—Purdue, first; Ames, second; Kansas, third; Drake, fourth. Time, 8:01 2-5.

Evers-Murphy Bout Is Postponed on Account of Small Attendance

A very small attendance, scarcely more than 100 paid admissions, caused the South Broadway Athletic Club to call off its boxing show scheduled for last night. Those who attended were given tickets for the next show, the date of which was not announced.

Eddie Evers, the boxer who was to have met Jimmy Murphy in the main event, gave a three-round exhibition with "Young Jerry," and that concluded the entertainment.

Johnny Ertle, claimant of the bantamweight title, was in attendance, accompanied by his manager, Mike McNulty. They had come from Hot Springs, Ark., to see the Murphy-Evers bout, while on their way to St. Paul. They will remain in St. Louis for a few days and will consult with local promoters relative to a match here for Ertle.

MURRAY EQUALS WORLD'S RECORD IN HURDLE RACE

BERKELEY, Cal., April 22.—Fred Murray, Stanford University's track star, who shone last Saturday by winning three events against the University of California, added to his athletic luster today by winning the 120-yard high hurdles in the world's record time of 15s. flat, and also by placing first in the 100-yard dash and in the 220-yard spring at the Pacific Association championship meet on the new California oval.

Oliver Millard of the San Francisco Olympic Club, long regarded as the premier among Pacific Coast distance runners, lost the five-mile run to Edgar Stout, a clubmate, in one of the most desperate finishes seen on the coast. Millard led for the entire distance, only to be nosed out at the tape.

Two new Pacific Association championship records were established when E. H. Schnell of Stanford won the 880-yard run in 1m. 59s. and F. L. Maker of the University of California negotiated 23 feet 1½ inches in the broad jump.

California won the meet with a total of 85 points. Stanford was second with 61.

Big Feet Made Hawaiian Man-Fish World-Famous

DUKE
KAHANAMOKU

Duke (His Name, Not His Title) Kahanamoku, Who Competed in Last Night's 500-Yard Title Race Here, Declares He Gains Propelling Power From His Extremities.

ANNA PAVLOWA owes to her nimble feet her renown as the world's most graceful danseuse; Charley Chaplin may look to his most mishapen pedal extremities as the direct source of that now far famed $670,000 yearly stipend; but it remained for Duke Paoa Kahanamoku to win laurels as a world's champion through the medium of his feet—and, when feet were passed out, Duke got a generous portion.

Duke has unusually large feet. They are long, wide and flat, and when he starts them in action one is reminded of the old-fashioned sternwheelers which steamed up and down the Mississippi in the old days.

Duke admits that it is his feet that have put him where he is today—the peer of most world's title swimmers. When asked as to what he attributed his success as a man-fish, he said:

"There are three things that have been conducive to my success. They are: My love for water, my hands and my feet—especially the feet. I get a good kick; and a good kick is the secret of championship swimming. The secret to the kick is their size."

Kahanamoku, who was here yesterday to compete in the 500-yard title swim, is a Government surveyor of Honolulu, Hawaii. Although it has not been generally known, Duke deals in theolites and logarithms during such time that he is not setting new swimming marks, for less capable disciples of Neptune to shoot at.

Kahanamoku Splendidly Built.

He is a pleasant, clean-cut looking, educated man, 25 years old and unmarried, although, according to his own statement, willing to change from the latter state. Duke is a splendid specimen of manhood, 6 feet 1 inch in height, tipping the beam at 195 pounds. He is pigmented to a shade of light brown, while his hair and brows are jet black and straight. He has large, dark eyes, a well-shaped nose, and wide protruding lips. He is heavily built as to shoulders and chest, tapering to a narrow waist, while his lower limbs are elegantly proportioned. Then the hands and the feet go to work and ruin that otherwise perfect symphony of physique.

Duke talks a great deal and talks as well as any American university alumnus. He has a splendid vocabulary and expresses himself in a pleasant, soft tone. He dresses well, and when called upon by a reporter, was attired in a light shade jaunty Norfolk.

But, back to the feet: Duke says he has had big feet since he was 5 years old and that when he was 10 years old he could wear his father's shoes. When 12 years old he started kicking his way to the lead in the island swimming championships and when 16 he was the admitted champion of Hawaii. He made his first trip here four years ago, sponsored by a certain Lew G. Henderson, who became interested in him. Duke knew nothing of indoor swimming when he came here for the first time. George Kistler, swimming coach of the University of Pennsylvania, got hold of him and taught him a few tricks. The islander gives Kistler credit for developing him.

Hawaiian's Wonderful Rise.

Duke went back home and kept on improving. He came back a second time and on this trip stole everything from this country except the natatoriums. He didn't take those because he prefers the Pacific Ocean. Last summer in the Hawaii championship meet Duke entered eight events and took four firsts and three seconds, breaking two world's records for good measure. He fin-flopped through the 50-yard dash in 23 seconds and furrowed through 220 yards of moisture in 2m 29s.

On his present tour he has not been very successful, having lost every race in which he has competed. Perry McGillivray nosed him out in the A. A. U. 100-yard swim and also in a 220-yard race in Detroit. Then, in the qualifying of the A. A. U. 220-yard event, he was eliminated by Vollmar and Wheatley.

This has led a large number of swimming devotees to believe that Duke has gone back. Listen to what he has to say concerning the matter:

"I can swim as good today as I ever could and, I hope, better. I will admit that in the past four years a great improvement has developed in American swimming, and that there are a number of clever young swimmers today. However, I attribute my recent defeats to too much Pullman travel and an inability to get sufficient practice. In Honolulu I am always in the water. After leaving the island, I went on one stretch of nine days without a workout. Then, when I did get to a tank, I had to jump right into competition. I have had no opportunity to gradually train into a desired condition. Then the travel has been very fatiguing."

The Duke left the city for Chicago late last night.

"Duke" Is a Name, Not a Title, Hawaiian Says

DUKE PAOA KAHANAMOKU suffers excruciatingly from two American mistakes. One is the mispronunciation of his name; the other the prevailing belief that the "Duke" prefix is a title.

"Duke is a given name, just like John or Henry," he explained to the Post-Dispatch man, yesterday. "I never hear my last name pronounced twice alike by strangers. Most persons merely mumble it. To pronounce Kahanamoku correctly, give the broad sound to all the A's and accent the second and fourth syllables, as if it were spelled Kah-hah-nah-mo-koo.

Central Players Steal 14 Bases; Cleveland Loses

Red and Black Baseball Team Outhits and Outplays Rivals 9 to 3.

Central High showed a slashing attack, a well-tightened defense, and with a clever pitching exhibition contributed by Waite, had but little trouble in trouncing the Cleveland High School nine, 9 to 3, at High School Field, yesterday afternoon.

The Walkerites looked far different than did they last Saturday when they ignominiously opened their season with a defeat at the hands of Soldan. The hitters hit, the runners ran, and the fielders fielded, yesterday, whereas the Cleveland tossers, with but few exceptions, failed to comply in any of these departments, except probably fielding.

Where Central especially shone was on the base paths, no less than 14 thefts being credited to the mid-city team. Five of these were gained by Catcher Herb Schleicher. Schleicher probably stole as many bags yesterday as he did during the whole of last season. Whitley purloined four, McElwee and Maroney two apiece, and Waite, one. Catcher Flack of Cleveland was unable to flag a single runner.

Princeton Wins at Tennis.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., April 22.—Princeton defeated the midshipmen on the tennis courts here this afternoon.

CORHAN MAY GET CHANCE TO PLAY IN CINCY SERIES

Cardinals, Idle at Pittsburg Yesterday, Open Four-Game Stand in Redland.

MEADOWS IS DUE TODAY

Hug Hopeful of Better Fate Than He Experienced in 1915, When Reds Won 4 in a Row.

PITTSBURG, April 22.—There was no game here today between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Pittsburg Pirates on account of rain and cold weather.

The game will likely be played off on Wednesday, Sept. 6, as the two teams have an open date. St. Louis plays here on Sept. 4 and 5, both being idle on Sept. 6, and Chicago plays here on Sept. 7.

In the meantime, the Cards are without a game on Sept. 7 also, opening up at home on Sept. 8. Their next visit here will be in June, for five straight games.

This is the first postponement of the season in Pittsburg, and it is the only postponed game the Pirates have on their list. The Cardinals, on the other hand, have now two postponed games to play off. In addition to today's call-off, they have a postponed game with Chicago at St. Louis.

The Cardinals left tonight for Cincinnati, where they will begin a series of four games. It is the intention of Manager Huggins to use Meadows against the Reds, with Hi Jasper to fall back upon.

Hornsby Hard to Displace.

Huggins also volunteered the information that Corhan would probably be in shape to take his position at short. Judging from the work of Hornsby in the two games played here, it seems that the California expert will not be badly needed at short. Hornsby certainly put up a splendid game here, and if Corhan is any better, he must be classed with the best in the league, and that includes Hans Wagner, who is generally conceded to be about equal to the best in any group of shortfield players.

The trip to Cincinnati is a rather chilly one to the Cardinals, who last year proved easy victims to the team that each winter wins the championship beforehand. Last year the Cardinals won only two games in the Queen City. Their first series there consisted of four games and the Reds took them all. On the second trip they won one out of four games, and on the third they split even, winning a game and losing one. One game had to be played off at St. Louis and the Reds took it.

YALE SWIMMERS LAND INTERCOLLEGIATE RELAY

CHICAGO, April 22.—Yale University swimmers today won the intercollegiate relay swimming championship of America in the contest held in the pool of the Chicago Athletic Association. The distance, 400 yards, was covered by the Easterners in 4:01 2-5.

Northwestern University was second and University of Chicago third. Among the spectators were representatives from Harvard, Princeton and other Eastern colleges. Summary:

400-yard relay—Won by Yale (Louis Ferguson, Carl Schlaet, R. Mayer, A. Rosener); Northwestern, second (L. A. Vitack, Ted Raymond, R. Simmonsen, V. Johnson); University of Chicago, third (E. J. O'Connor, Franklin Merne, C. V. Pavlicek, W. C. Earle).

Vitack led the field at the end of the first 100 yards; Schlaet was at the head in the second; Mayer was in front in the third and Rosner took the fourth.

WALTHER LEAGUE OPENS WITH 3 GAMES TODAY

The Walther League, one of the two semi-professional circuits in this city, will open its campaign tomorrow with three games, two of them at Kulage's Park, while the other will be decided in Collinsville, between the Pilgrims and the Collinsville outfit. Kleimeyer and Thias will form the battery for Pilgrim, with Scott and Hartman working for Collinsville.

In the first game at Kulage's Park, Zions and Emmaus get together, while the closing contest will be between Mount Calvary and Bethany. Schoenbush and Gerdes will be the opposing hurlers in the curtain raiser, with Roehnfeldt and Prigge fighting it out on the hill in the second.

Rippe, Brown, Mueller and McDonald will be the umpires.

Harvard Tennis Men Lose.

NEW YORK, April 22.—The West Side Tennis Club had a narrow escape from defeat here today by Harvard. The tally was four victories to three. R. N. Williams II, Harvard captain and rated number 2 on the national list, beat W. M. Washburn, rated No. 8, in singles, 7—5, 6—1. Harvard's men won both doubles. The sensation was provided by G. C. Caner and W. Rand 3d, beating Karl Behr and T. R. Pell, 6—4, 4—6, 8—6. In all of the rallies Behr was erratic. Rain and wind spoiled the display of true form in the contests.

BROWN NOTES

A delegation of commission men from Fourth street, mostly Germans, entered appearance yesterday behind a band that was assassinating "Tipperary."

The smartest play of the day was turned by Sisler in the seventh. Smith opened with a single. Gandil bunted. Sisler pounced on it and shot like a rifle to Lavan, forcing Gandil. Nine first sackers out of 10 would have played the ball to first. Sis is different.

Had the Yank lost, the Browns would now be in first place. If Cleveland tarries long enough they will be there. Yanks notwithstanding.

Klepfer held the Browns to three hits in Cleveland a week ago yesterday. He's a six-footer with a slow spitball and great control. Nothing rattles him.

The Browns succeeded in bunting Evans out of a job but with Turner on third and Klepfer pitching, the craft wasn't so easy. Tobin sneaked one bunt over in the 14th and Sisler followed with a good one that went as a sacrifice. Tobin got to third on Marsan's out, but Pratt was purposely passed and Ernie Johnson tapped to the pitcher.

Johnny Lavan's friends didn't take kindly to Jones' action in benching the Michigan surgeon. Johnny is going at top speed and he's a better batter in the pinch than at any other time. Furthermore his hit in the third inning was one of the cleanest of the day.

Elmer Smith has a bet that he will bat better than Benny Kauff this season. He combed three successive slams off Davenport and was taken out when Plank arrived. He faced Plank only once and fanned.

BROWNS EARN TIE IN 15 ROUNDS ON SISLER'S DARING

Michigan Wonder Tallies From Second on an Infield Out and Evens the Score, in the Ninth Inning.

By W. J. O'Connor.

"GAME called on account of darkness!" shouted Umpire Hildebrand at the conclusion of the fifteenth errorless inning yesterday when the Browns and Indians were deadlocked, 1—1.

"Whaddya mean, darkness?" demanded Philip De C. Ball, president of the Browns, who vaulted from his box and confronted Hildebrand as he was about to escape into the dug-out. "Don't you see the sun shining?"

"Game called on account of darkness," repeated Hildebrand as he vanished, leaving Ball to hold the mythical bag.

And so it is written. The Browns and Indians played the longest game of the current season, 15 nerve-racking rounds to a draw, although if the decision were given on points and left to a popular vote of an unbiased jury, the alien hurler, Ed Klepfer, who whipsawed the Browns 3—0 at Cleveland a week ago, might get the decision.

Klepfer toiled the entire route and more than held his own. He had the game apparently won, as the Browns wheeled into the ninth, having intrenched himself behind a one-run lead which was compounded on Smith's single, Gandil's sacrifice, Davenport's balk and an infield out in the second inning.

Sisler on the Job.

But in the last portion of the ninth, George Sisler, Michigan, '15, reached first on a grounder that took a bad short-bounce to Chapman. It was scored a single, although it might have been tabbed an error for the alien shortstop. Marsans followed with a sacrifice and then came Pratt with an impotent poke at Gandil, well over towards second. Klepfer was slothful in covering first. Gandil, in snap judgment, decided to make the play single handed. He dashed for the bag, slid into it and retired Pratt, but Gandil evidently didn't reckon with Sisler who was thundering in from second.

The Michigan Marvel turned third and slowed down to 50 miles an hour. Gandil lay there just a second, resting his nerves.

"Go!" shouted Jones to Sisler, who was torn with indecision. And Sisler went. Gandil realized his error and scrambled to his feet, firing the ball to O'Neill as he straightened up. Sisler dove feet-first for the plate and whizzed past O'Neill like the Twentieth Century Limited passing a tank town. Hildebrand had palms down and the score was knotted in the nick of time.

Prior to Sisler's historic raid, Eddie Plank Gettysburg '01, had taken up the pitching burden, vice Dave Davenport, who was benched to make room for pinch-hitter Clemons.

Plank in Good Form.

Planks' pitching was perfect for six frames and the ancient gunner from Gettysburg appeared to be good enough to endure to the end of time. In six innings, Cleveland made only one hit. Two men walked but Plank was always the master and even in the fourteenth, when Ernie Johnson's error put runners on third and first, the fans didn't lose confidence in the man Fielder Jones regards as the "daddy of 'em all."

Plank fanned seven men in six innings. Totally unlike his enforced effort at Chicago last Sunday, when he walked four men in one frame, Eddie yesterday had perfect control. He toyed with the alien sluggers. His pitching was the poetry of baseball.

Indeed, he appeared to be so good that Phil Ball might have been justified in yelping when Hildebrand called "time." Ball argued that Klepfer figured to weaken, having toiled for 15 frames. Plank he said was as fresh as paint. But there was nothing in Klepfer's record to indicate that he was withering under the strain. He passed only one batter in the long duel. He faced 17 different hitters and only three clean, keenly defined hits were made off his delivery. The others were bunts and scraches.

However, it was a covted game for the Browns. Had they won they would have gained first place; but it was seven minutes past 6 when Hildebrand abruptly ended it, and a vast majority of the fans were facing a call from the indulgent housewives, impatiently waiting at home.

At most, only another inning could have been played, and there was nothing in the record of either team to make anyone believe that the deadlock would be broken.

After the game Umpire Hildebrand explained his action. Said he:

"The shadows in this park are bad. What light there was fell on the bleachers. That made the batters swing into a white black ground. They were utterly helpless and complaining. I figured another inning could not be played sucessfully, so I called it. I didn't have a date or any personal interest in the matter. I thought it was my duty."

So there you are!

It Was an Errorless Struggle, but Mental Mistakes Yielded Both Runs

"FIFTEEN frames without a boot," as Ernie Johnson would say, is considerable ball game and considerable ball game it was. However, the mathematical tabulations of the battle—that is to say, the box score—doesn't reckon with mental miscues. Only manual errors seep into the official record.

Therefore the box score doesn't explain that both runs were fundamentally charged to glaring mistakes. Early in the game Dave Davenport, who should know better, committed a balk. In the second inning, Elmer Smith, who slammed the door to the hall of fame in Bob Groom's face on Friday, when he doubled in the ninth, the only hit of the game, made the first of his three hits, a single to left. He moved up on Gandil's sacrifice and was wig-wagged to third by Silk O'Loughlin when Davenport balked. It was such a flagrant violation of the rule that there was no argument. From third Smith easily scored on Turner's out at first.

In the composition of the Browns' only run we find that dilatory tactics on the part of Chick Gandil played an important part. Had Gandil not delayed his play on Pratt at first Sisler's dash for the plate would have been fatal. So in the end everything evened up.

Davenport Was Fit.

Davenport was very fit. One gone in the fourth Speaker singled through Deal and Smith doubled to right center, Speaker stopping at third. Davenport then buckled down and got rid of Gandil and Turner without a run going over. It was some pitching. Pratt tossed out Gandil, while Hartley heaved out Turner.

"We've got to get hits," reasoned Jones in the seventh, so he called out the reserves. Marsans had skied to Smith when Pratt singled. Jones then sent Grumpy (alias Ward) Miller up for Deal. Ward hasn't had much practice with the stick this season but he came through with a pop double back of Turner, Pratt pushing on to third. Then came a play that might have escaped those who are not alert to Jones' system.

Borton batted for Hartley, although the second guessers thought that Hartley should have hit for Hartley. Borton's best was a tap to Klepfer. There was absolutely no chance for Pratt scoring, but Jones sent him in just the same. He was easily retired.

However, Austin then substituted for Borton as a runner and Jones had two of the fastest men on the club on the bases. Austin swiped second without molestation as Klepfer pitched the first ball to Crandall, batting for Lavan. On the next pitch, Ward Miller bolted for the plate and might have swiped it had not Crandall fouled one. Crandall evidently didn't have the signal on this play and he wound up with a roller to Gandil.

There was another thrill for the Brown rooters in the 14th frame. One gone, Graney worked Plank for a pass. Chapman was safe on Ernie Johnson's poor fielding, getting a hit, but Speaker promptly forced him, Johnson to Pratt, making the second out. Jones sent Baumgardner out to whisper to Severeid who was catching. On the next play Speaker bolted for second. Severeid bluffed a throw to Pratt, then turned and confronted Graney who was tearing in from third. Graney was trapped and erased, Severeid to Austin to Johnson, who jumped on Graney's back with both feet.

The fans were cold and unresponsive to the Browns from the start. They adopted a sympathetic show-me attitude and were sitting on their hands when Eddie Plank, one of the game's greatest heroes, was called in to make his debut as a member of the Browns. The writer was in Chicago last Sunday when Plank was asked to relieve Davenport in a game the Sox lost. The Chicago fans gave Plank a tremendous hand. The Sportsmen's park rooters didn't "rap" to him at all yesterday. But Plank should worry. He didn't win pennants for Connie Mack on applause.

FINCHER VS. BAGBY IN TODAY'S GAME

WILLIAM ALLEN FINCHER, 21 years old, and a resident of Hollygrove, Ark., will pitch for the Browns today in the third skirmish with the Indians, and he will be opposed by James Samuel Jacob Bagby, 26 years old, of Georgia. Both are right-handers.

This will be Fincher's first appearance in the American League, as he was not a member of the Brown troupe on its recent visits to Cleveland and Chicago. The Indians will tarry here tomorrow for a game which was postponed from Thursday. Belleville's leading citizen, Bob Groom, will pitch the final game.

The Indians Lifted No Scalps, but They Put Up a Hair-Raising Finish

LANGFORD TO BOX FORMIDABLE RIVAL IN COLISEUM BOUT

Harry Wills, Tar Baby's Foe Here Tuesday, Is a Coming Colored Heavyweight.

HAS MET TOP NOTCHERS

Bouts With McVey, Jeannette and "Tham" Show He Is Greatly Improved.

By Harry S. Sharpe,
Referee for the Future City Athletic Club and the Post-Dispatch's Boxing Authority.

Sam Langford and Harry Wills, negro heavyweight pugilists, are expected to arrive in the city today for their eight-round bout at the Coliseum on next Tuesday night under the auspices of the Future City Athletic Club.

Reports from Boston indicate that Langford has been doing some training for this match, but it is probable that when he enters the ring he will look about the same as he did the night he boxed Jeff Clarke here, March 31. He looked fat, but his wind was good and he boxed an aggressive bout, knocking out Clarke in the fifth round. Sam will never have the trim build of an athlete again; but his knowledge of pugilism, gained by many years of experience and hard fighting, makes him a dangerous man in the ring whenever the gong sounds for the start.

Wills, if he has not neglected his training, should appear here in condition, as he has had ample time to do his training and, besides, has been boxing quite regularly for some time.

Wills Not Well Known Here.

Wills is not nearly so well known as Langford, the latter having been looked upon as a near-champion for a good many years; but in the past three years Wills has done so remarkably well as to attract considerable attention.

In 1911 and 1912 he knocked out "Battling" Taylor, Larry Brown, Sam Collier, Ben Pedes, "Kid" Brown and John Tholmer. In 1913 he knocked out "Kid" Brown, "Kid" Cotton and Jim Silliban. Then he boxed a 10-round draw with Jeff Clarke, the "fighting ghost."

While none of those heretofore mentioned amounted to very much, still the manner in which Wills disposed of them justified the belief that he was a comer and he was matched with Joe Jeannette, one of the very best negro heavyweights in the business. This was a 10-round no-decision bout and Wills made an excellent showing.

On May 1, 1914, Wills met Sam Langford for the first time, 10 rounds, at New Orleans, and it was one of the roughest affairs ever seen there, Wills picking up Langford and slamming him to the mat on several occasions. This bout brought Wills into special prominence, and he has been counted as one of the leading negro heavyweights ever since.

The next time Wills met Langford was on Nov. 26 at Vernon, Cal., in a bout scheduled for 20 rounds. For 13 rounds Langford was outpointed and getting a good beating. In the fourteenth round Langford worked close to his man and connected with a right hand swing to the jaw, and Wills was counted out.

Wills Has Good Record.

Following his California bout with Langford, Wills was matched with Sam McVey at New Orleans, on Dec. 20, and lost the decision at the end of 20 rounds.

On March 12, 1915, Wills won a 20-round bout from "Battling" Jim Johnson at New Orleans. Wills was then sent for and went East, where he was matched with Sam McVey on May 19 for a 10-round no-decision bout in New York City. It was a very close one and resulted in the pair being rematched for a 12-round bout in Boston on Sept. 7. This was won by Wills.

On Jan. 3 of the present year Wills met Langford for 20 rounds at New Orleans and won the referee's decision. They were matched right back again for another 20-round bout, and Wills had the better of it for 18 rounds.

In the nineteenth Langford came across with a terrific right jolt and knocked his opponent cold. It was a lucky finish for Sam. Following this, they boxed a 10-round, no-decision bout in New York City early in March, and Wills had the better of it, according to the newspaper accounts.

From the foregoing it may be seen that Wills is affording Langford the hardest opposition of any of the colored heavyweights today. Langford is going and Wills is coming.

The latter is a young giant, strong and a fighter. Right now he is fast and clever enough to outpoint Langford in almost any of their bouts that go the limit of specified rounds, but Langford always has a chance of scoring a knockout.

It is the latter fact that is making their bouts at the present time of absorbing interest.

The old "Tar Baby" is by nature and development a fighter, and has been one of the greatest known to the modern ring. He may be on the verge of retirement, but today there are a number of good heavyweights who dread the consequence of his punch and are perfectly satisfied that the color line has been drawn.

GIRLS' ATHLETIC MEET TO BE STAGED MAY 15

FULTON, Mo., April 22.—At a meeting of the athletic directors of the Girl Junior Colleges of the State, held this week at Centralia, it was decided to hold the annual track and field meet in Columbia on May 15. It is certain that Christian and Stephens College of Columbia, Howard-Payne of Fayette, and William Woods of Fulton will participate and it is possible that Lindenwood of St. Charles also will send a delegation.

The following schedule of events was arranged: 50-yard dash, 75-yard dash, shot put, discus hurl, broad and high jumps, throwing basket ball, throwing baseball, hurdle, relay and rifle shooting. The two Columbia colleges will be hosts. Last year only Stephens and Howard-Payne took part.

MEFFERT WORKING HARD

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 22.—Hal Meffert, athletic director of Rose Polytechnic Institute, is working hard to develop a winning track team for the local school. He has eight new men working out in the various events. In Ira Carter. Coach Meffert believes, he has a sure point winner in the high and broad jumps and the 220-yard low hurdles. Rose will join with the Indiana State Normal, also located here, in handling the I. C. A. L. track meet, which will be held in this city May 20. Previous to that the Rose athletes will clash with the Normalites, Wabash and De Pauw.

Russel Ford Released.

NEW YORK, April 22.—Russell Ford, who, three years ago was considered one of the best pitchers in the game, was given his unconditional release by the New York American League baseball club today. Ford jumped to the Federal League from the Yankees and was turned back to that club by the Buffalo Federals today because of the Federals' inability to dispose of him. He was immediately declared a free agent by the Yankees.

Kauff's Reputation Hurt by Facetious Reporters

BENNY KAUFF

Giants' New Star a Likable Fellow Without a Trace of Big-Head, One Biographer Writes, Trying to Correct False Impression.

THAT Benny Kauff, the former Federal League batting leader, who has opened the season with the Giants, is not in need of treatment for cranial elephantiasis—slang for the "big head"—is the conviction of Sidney Mercer of the New York Globe, who followed the fortunes of McGraw through his spring training season.

He declares a serious injustice has been done Kauff by unthinking writers desiring to make funny "copy" in picturing Benny as a vainglorious, absurd boaster, swelled with his own importance.

Mercer presents Kauff in a much more attractive light, as follows:

"It is a mystery how Kauff ever acquired the undesirable part of his reputation, for he is a most likable fellow. In our opinion, Kauff will be popular not only in New York, but all over the circuit. We have two excellent reasons to base this opinion on. One is that Benny does not wrangle with spectators, and the other is his unusual faculty for making friends off the field.

"The little chap is chock full of the right sort of confidence. He is not given to offensive boasting. His jaunty air of assurance is needed on McGraw's ball team.

"Nobody would believe in me if I didn't believe in myself," said Benny.

"As near as we can figure it out, Kauff has been misrepresented by various self-appointed press agents, and with his youthful penchant for liking everybody that likes him, Benny did not nail these harmful stories, but permitted them to be spread broadcast. He is far more dignified than the average fan thinks he is. Both on the field and off Kauff minds his own business. He talks plenty on the field, but seldom argues with umpires. When he is in there he has nothing on his mind but baseball. As much could not be said for many of the Giants last season.

Will Have Personal Following.

"Like Cobb, Kauff is sure to build up a great personal following. He will, therefore, be a valuable drawing card for the Giants. Unlike most pampered athletes, Benny is never disagreeable to strangers. He will stand and "fan" with a pest until he can make a clean breakaway, and he is always willing to converse at length with a sensible fan.

"Benny has that rare faculty of making every chance acquaintance a booster for him. He does not seek the spotlight—at least he has not since he joined the Giants—nor does he shrink from it. In hotels he does not remain in seclusion. His tastes are simple and his habits good. Also, when he grasps the hand of a stranger he looks that man in the eye and he doesn't run away. Benny is young. Maybe he will not be so affable after a few years.

"Kauff realizes that he is face to face with his big chance. He has beaten around the "sticks" long enough to be aware of what his opportunity means, and his heart is set on making good. By his courteous treatment of strangers he makes new friends everywhere. His boyish boasts were never intended to go beyond his friends, some of whom, in their ill-advised efforts to help him, really created harmful impressions.

"Aside from his baseball ability, which is unusual, Kauff possesses that rare quality known as 'personality' or 'magnetism,' and as a star at the Polo Grounds he will draw money at the gate. After seeing this sturdy young man drive the ball when he gets a good crack at at it, this threats against that right-field wall at the Polo Grounds do not impress one as idle boasts."

"Kauff is an easy man to handle," says McGraw. "He has sense and is willing to take advice. At no time has he pulled any prima donna stuff on me, and I don't think he will, because it is not in his nature. I think he's a great boy. I am sure they will like him at the Polo Grounds."

Kauff Admits That Cobb Is Greatest Player in National Pastime Today

NEW YORK, April 15.

BENNY KAUFF admits in the May number of the Baseball Magazine that Ty Cobb is the greatest player in the game. Here are the exact words of the new center fielder and hard hitter of the Giants:

"The claims that I would beat out Ty Cobb are bunk. I have been quoted as saying so a good many times. But I am willing to admit that Ty Cobb is the greatest player on the diamond by a long shot.

"Even if I was as good as he is, he would beat me out, for he has much more experience, so these fake claims are ridiculous. I have said and still say that I won't admit to myself that any ballplayer on the field can do things that I can't, for I want to be as good a player as I can.

"I have a good, natural eye, and am fast on my feet. I love to play baseball, have always loved it; why shouldn't I become a great player if I am lucky? That is my ambition; I admit it, and I will try as hard as I can to equal Ty Cobb or anybody else. But I know that I have a long ways to go first, and, of course, may never realize my ambition."

Arkansas Golf Tourney.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., April 22.—J. E. England Jr. of the Little Rock Country Club won the first Arkansas golf championship tournament here today by defeating L. M. Watts of Helena, 2 up and 1 to play, after they had halved the morning round. The tournament was played over the links of the Hot Springs Country Club.

The Benton school team, which last season defeated Shaw in the final game thereby landing the championship of the Public School League and the Post-Dispatch trophy, suffered defeat in its first game of the present season yesterday morning. The trimming came at the hands of the Cote Brilliante team by the score of 9—7.

This does not necessarily put Benton out of the running for the trophy this season, as the team still has four games to play with nines in Group G before the title elimination battles start. There is a chance for Benton to win all its others, while the winners of yesterday suffer defeats.

Eighteen games were played yesterday, the clash between Clay and Glasgow being called off for some unknown reason. There are 46 teams competing for the Post-Dispatch trophy, the games in Class A having been played last Tuesday, when Froebel beat Blow, 5—4; Sigel downed Oak Hill, 6—4; Gardenville trounced Shenandoah, 15—10, while the Carondelet-Clifton Heights game was postponed on acount of bad grounds.

One of the features of the contests played yesterday was the pitching of Kelly of the Crow team, who set Jackson down without a hit and fanned 17 batters in eight innings. His team won, 17—0.

Runners-Up in 1915 Win.

Shaw, which last season was the runner-up to Benton, started off on the right foot, walloping Garfield, 25 to 0. In beating the Penrose nine, 37—0, Marquette pounded out 26 hits, while Johnson, their pitcher, allowed only four.

Confusion attending opening games probably accounted for the failure of the winning teams to bring in to the Post-Dispatch the box scores of all the games, as stipulated.

The managers of all winning teams are requested to see that box scores of Saturday games are in this office not later than 4 p. m. unless played in the afternoon. In order to keep the records correct, the box scores are essential.

Box scores of mid-week games should be mailed to the sporting editor of the Post-Dispatch. Blanks for making out box scores can be obtained by applying at the sporting department.

Made One Hit, 13 Runs.

Although Dozier made only one hit off Oberville, Miller and Phillips, pitchers for the Clark School team, they won the game, 13—12. In the third round Dozier counted six times on four passes and three errors. Six tallies also came in the fifth, bases on balls and errors sending them across. Pitcher Passmare made the only bingle for the winners. The victors had 10 errors and the losers nine.

As it is necessary to have the box scores of all games in order to keep a complete account of the games, the captains of one of the contending teams should have them in the Post-Dispatch office no later than 6 o'clock each Saturday evening.

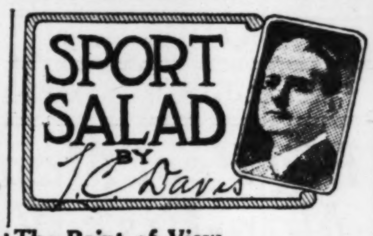
Chappell Draws Release.

CLEVELAND, O., April 22.—The management of the Cleveland American League baseball club announced today that Outfielder Larry Chappell, who came here as part of the Joe Jackson deal with Chicago, had been released to the Columbus American Association team and that Pitcher Herbert Kelley, a recruit left-hander, had been released to Portland, Ore., in the Pacific Coast League.



The Point of View.

THE no-hit game is popular
As per the way you view it;
The local rooters like to see
A local pitcher do it.
But when the guy who turns the trick
Is with the opposition
The rooters all agree it's quite
A tedious proposition.

AND there's another little thing
In which we might be fairer;
It's really quite ridiculous
The way we view an error.
A local player drops a fly—
Unmercifully we jeer him;
But if it's an opposing guy
We all rise up and cheer him

A Good Hand.

LEE FOHL of Cleveland says he has the greatest team of discards ever put together. If he could grab a few more aces like Tris Speaker, Lee would have a pretty fair hand.

Clean Up Week.

Charles Comiskey drew the banner opening crowd of the season—some 32,000 fans turning out to see the White Sox get trimmed in the inaugural. The seats in the park had been painted green and as the paint had not dried, some few thousand fans got their clothes stained and sent the bill for cleaning to Commy. Indicating that the Chicago fans are not as green as they were painted.

• • •

However, Commy doesn't mind a little thing like that. In the matter of spreading paint the Old Roman is an artist.

Oh, You Climbers.

WE are in receipt of a letter from a local seed company which reads as follows:

"We are inclosing a package of 'Cardinal Climber,' and we advise you to give this to Mr. Miller Huggins to plant out at Robison Field.

"We all want to see the Cardinals climb to the top and Huggins will be sure of a climber if he plants these seeds and the other Cardinals should go back on him."

The package of seed has been duly forwarded to Mr. Huggins, with the suggestion that they be planted at the foot of the flagpole, where they can take root and climb until they reach the pennant. Happy thought.

Bloomers.

At that we trust the Cards' friend and well-wisher hasn't got his seeds mixed and sent morning glories.

The wife of Tommy Connolly, dean of the American League umpires, has never seen her husband in action. Probably Tommy doesn't want her to see her "lord and master" as others see him.

Praise From Caesar.

CHIEF BENDER has been made a member of Pat Moran's strategy board. Connie Mack informed Pat that the Chief is the smartest baseball man that ever pulled on a uniform. He may be right. But why didn't Connie keep him?

May 4 will be Speaker day in Boston on which occasion the One-a-Minute boys will kick in to purchase a token of some sort for Tristram, whose stipend has been reduced to a beggarly pittance—somewhere in the neighborhood of $15,000, including bonuses and everything.

That's No Josh.

Josh Devore has been sold outright by the Phillies to Milwaukee. Looks like a pennant for Beerville. Josh always follows the flag, or the flag follows Josh, either way you want to put it.

Johnny McGraw released nine recruits at one crack before the season opened, which establishes a record for a single sale of ballplayers in less than carload lots.

Jose Rodriguez, who came all the way from Cuba to take Fred Merkle's job, found Fred so firmly entrenched in his position that he couldn't be dislodged. Whereupon Jose fell back upon his second line of defense in New London, Conn. Tough luck, Jose.

The Mound City.

THE Pittsburg Pirates complain that the pitching mound at Robison Field is too high. Didn't seem to bother Babe Adams very much the day he pitched that one-hit game.

Sam Dixon, who referees the colored bouts at the Future City Club, was shot in the right leg the other evening by a colored gentleman who enjoys the euphonious cognomen of "Hock Bones." The obstreperous gentleman, by way of emphasizing his right to his monaker, plugged his victim in the hockbone.

The Fighting Spirit.

ROGER BRESNAHAN has instructed his ballplayers that no "handshaking" goes on his team. They are supposed to stick out their jaws at the foe instead of their hands. The Duke, it will be recalled, while managing the Cardinals, stuck out his jaw at Bob Bescher, resulting in a nice job of bridge work for Roger's dentist.

PIKE'S PEAK HILL CLIMB ONE OF YEAR'S FEATURES

Revised entry blanks have been issued for what doubtless will be the most sensational motor racing event in the year—the Pike's Peak national hill climb. There will be three days of this remarkable race, Aug. 10, 11 and 12, the feature of which is the Penrose cup race. The event will serve as the formal inaugural of the world's highest highway over a course approximately 12½ miles to the summit of the famous mountain. The new road from Cascade to the top of Pike's Peak is 18 miles in length, reaching an elevation of 14,109 feet, and the start of the contest will be made from the five-mile mark at Crystal Creek.

Prizes of cash and plate valued at more than $7800 are offered. The automobile events, for both amateur and professional drivers, will be run on Friday and Saturday, Aug. 11 and 12, and the sanction for these has just been granted by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association. The motor cycle events are to precede the others on Thursday, Aug. 10, sanctioned by the Federation of American Motor Cyclists. Both sets of speed tests will be under the auspices of the Pike's Peak Auto Highway Co.

Tigers Expect to Win Valley Baseball Title

Missouri U. Team Will Have Veterans in Every Position Except Behind Bat—Kansas Jayhawkers Are Picked as the Contenders.

From the Post-Dispatch's Special Correspondent at Missouri U.

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 22.—Missouri U. sport followers are as confident that the Tiger baseball nine will cop the conference pennant this year as they were that the basket ball team would take the laurels last winter. The basket ball team was nosed out of first place by a five it never played, on a percentage basis, but there will be no alibi for losing in baseball, nor any excuse for failure.

There is no doubt from the dope as it lies on paper and from the showing the team has made in its two practice games that the Tigers have the best baseball team they have had in years. Last season they finished second to Kansas, but this spring even the Jayhawkers do not loom up as formidable rivals.

There is only one weak spot on the entire team, the catching station, and this will undoubtedly be improved on the trip through Oklahoma and Kansas, which the team is now taking. All the other places are filled by experienced players, excellent fielders and good hitters, with the proper amount of baseball sense and knowledge to run bases.

Veterans Fill Most Places.

The trip mentioned is a big one for the team, a pleasure jaunt as well as an excellent finishing-off of the practice season. The players left with Coach Brewer last Wednesday for Oklahoma to meet the Oklahoma University team and the Oklahoma A. & M. nine. On the return trip they play their first conference games with the Kansas Aggies at Manhattan, next Monday and Tuesday, and arrive in Columbia in time to meet the Oklahoma A. & M. nine on Wednesday afternoon.

From then on the schedule, so far arranged, is this: Ames at Columbia, April 28 and 29; Chinese University at Columbia, May 2; Ames at Ames, May 5 and 6; Kansas University at Columbia, May 11 and 12; Kansas University at Lawrence, May 19 and 20; Kansas Aggies at Columbia, May 22 and 23. Next week then sees a strenuous part on a heavy schedule.

Kansas will be the only real rival of the Tiger team this year, it is thought, although Ames is entitled to consideration for its heavy hitting force. The first tilt between Kansas and Ames has been played, two games on the Kansas field which went to the Jayhawkers by one run scores in extra innings. It is likely that when the Cyclones get Kansas on their home grounds they will make up for these defeats.

Tigers' Pitchers Good.

Missouri's pitching department is the strongest and best in the valley. It includes Taylor, a veteran, who has shouldered the burden of the pitching for two years, and who should be in great form as soon as weather is sufficiently hot to iron out a little rheumatism comes. Morgan, a substitute pitcher last year, who was really given little chance to prove his worth, and Bryant, Giltner, Slusher and Dippold of last year's freshman team, who show real class.

Giltner is probably the allround star of these sophomores, since he is not only a pitcher, but a hard hitter, a star fielder and a good base runner. His first trial on the mound is awaited with interest. Bryant is the most experienced man and probably the best pitcher. He has played lots of ball and in fact turned down an offer from a minor league team to play with the university nine this year. He pitched the entire 10 innings against Westminster.

Slusher and Dippold have not received a trial yet on the mound for the varsity. They will probably be the substitutes of the pitching staff and will fight it out with Owens for an outfield position when Taylor is pitching. Both are natural hitters.

The one sure thing in the outfield is Woody, captain of the team, a sure catch on fly balls, in spite of the injury he received to his knee during the last football season, and a hard hitter. Giltner seems the logical man for the left garden and Taylor for the right field when not pitching, because of his experience and hitting ability.

The infield is strong from the defensive point of view, though not so promising as hitters. Hogg at first is the best in the valley, a natural ballplayer, who is on the team for his third year and is the best hitter of the infield. At second is McMillan, an immense improvement over previous second sackers, including himself for a part of last year. Farmer, who made the team last year, will play shortstop. He is a fair hitter and because of his diminutive size has been switched to the leadoff position on the batting list. Davis at third has a wonderful arm and is experienced.

The choice for catcher's position to date seems to be Baumgardner a second-year man, who subbed at third base last spring. He is a strong hitter, a fair receiver, but weak on keeping the enemy baserunners where they should be. Lansing and Hamilton are fighting hard for this job, as they both fought for the center's place on last fall's football eleven. Lansing is a smooth catcher, but weak in hitting, while Hamilton is a slugger, but inexperienced at his position. It would not surprise the rooters, however, to see Hamilton develop into a first-string catcher by the close of the season, and he is only a sophomore.

Bethlehem Wins 2-1 Soccer Game From Chicagoans

Pullmans Put Up Desperate Defense, but Lose Near Close of Second Half.

SOUTH BETHLEHEM, Pa., April 22.—Bethlehem Steel, National Soccer champions, bid fair to repeat this year again. Today, in a semi-final cup game, the steel workers won from Pullman of Chicago 2 goals to 1. It was a return game following last Sunday's contest in Chicago which resulted in a scoreless tie. Just how hard the Bethlehem team pressed the Chicago boys is best told in the fact that Bethlehem had 11 corner kicks during the contest to two for Chicago and had no less than 25 unsuccessful tries for goal to 11 for Pullman.

The game was stubbornly and most aggressively contested. Both sides fouled considerably, but this was due largely to the great tension the 22 players were working under.

Within the last five minutes of play Bethlehem forced the Pullman's into four successive corner kicks. Three of these went to naught, but on the fourth and, just one minute before the final whistle the winning goal was scored.

Bethlehem was the first to score, but it was some little time before the locals were able to break up the Pullmans' attack. Clarke made the goal, getting the ball on a long drive from the center of the field and heading it into the net.

With the score in Bethlehem's favor at 1 goal to 0, the second half was even more bitterly contested than the first period. During one of these tense periods in the penalty area, the ball touched the left forearm of Pepper of Bethlehem. Referee Stark detected the infraction of the rules and called penalty. Shallcross was given the responsibility for the kick, and he made good. Duncan having no chance to save. Capt. Morrison of Bethlehem capped the climax of a wonderful game with the winning goal just before the half time ended.

Lineup:

Bethlehem.	Positions.	Pullman.
Duncan	Goal	Holmes
Fletcher	Right fullback	Blockley
Ferguson	Left fullback	Page
Murray	Right halfback— J. H. Cartwright
Campbell	Center halfback	S. Govier
Morrison	Left halfback	B. Govier

Pepper	Inside right	Mackie
Clarke	Center forward	Shallcross
Graham	Inside left	J. J. Cartwright
Fleming	Outside left	McNaughton

Goals—Clarke, Morrison, Shallcross (penalty). Referee—J. B. Stark, Detroit. Linesmen—James Walders, Philadelphia, and J. B. Carpenter, Bethlehem.

ST. LOUIS BOY STARS FOR CENTRAL COLLEGE

FAYETTE, Mo., April 22.—Haw of St. Louis is showing up nicely on the far corner for the Central College Eagles this year and Coach C. A. Clingenpeel is mightily pleased with the performances of the Mound City product. The Central mentor says he will be right among the topnotcher third-sackers before the season is very far along. Haw has been handling grounders nicely and in a batting way has shown much natural ability. He takes an easy, healthy swing at the ball and most always connects, striking out very seldom. It his first year at this difficult position and, barring a little nervousness during the early games, has been handling it like a veteran.

Phillies Sign Cooper.

PHILADELPHIA, April 22.—The Philadelphia National League club today signed Claude Cooper, outfielder, who played last year with the Brooklyn Federals. Cooper was a member of the New York Giants, two years ago.

Bresnahan Signs Player.

TOLEDO, O., April 22.—Manager Roger Bresnahan of the Toledo Baseball Club announced today that he had signed Jack Fluhrer, outfielder of the Chicago Nationals.

MUNICIPAL A. A.'S BASEBALL CIRCUIT HAS 1400 PLAYERS

Thirteen Leagues With 94 Teams Are Members of Association This Season.

4 OPEN SEASON TODAY

Mayor Henry Kiel, Park Commissioner Cunliff and Other Officials to Be Present.

When all the circuits connected with the Municipal Baseball Association get under way this season something like 1410 players will be interested and will represent 94 teams. To date 11 leagues have been completed, while it is expected that two more will be formed within the next week. One team is needed to complete a body to play in Forest Park, while the Carondelet League also needs another nine.

The campaign which was opened by three leagues yesterday and four that swing into action today will be the fourth of the Municipal Association. The association has grown steadily each year, new leagues and new teams swinging into line at each organization meeting held in the spring.

Without a doubt the Municipal Baseball Association is the largest of its kind anywhere. Cleveland has the honor of having more teams than St. Louis, but they are not connected with one association. All the regularly organized circuits in this city are members of the Municipal Association.

1400 Players Interested.

With 94 teams and 1410 players interested in the body, just think of the number of fans they will draw each week. Last year a conservative estimate put the attendance of the municipal games at 450,000. It is expected that this season, with only two major leagues playing in the city, even more fans will attend the contests.

The largest league connected with the circuit is the Sunday School, which has a roster of 20 clubs. This body will open its season next Saturday. The City, Sodality and Y. M. H. A. circuits will open their campaign next Sunday.

City officials will be on hand for the league openings this afternoon. Mayor Henry Kiel and Henry Menne, City Treasurer, will help inaugurate the South Side League's season at the Froebel School grounds. E. R. Kinsey, Emil N. Tolkacz, Nelson Cunliff and Rodowe Abeken will be on hand for the openings of both the Mercantile and Independent circuits.

Wolff Players Ineligible.

Rodowe Abeken, Director of Municipal Athletics, stated yesterday that the players of the Wolff team, who were suspended at the close of last season, were still ineligible and will be unable to join any of the clubs until reinstated.

Today's schedule is as follows:

SOUTH SIDE LEAGUE.

Grand-Gravois vs. Chippewa, 1 o'clock; Vogels vs. Cherokees, 3:30 o'clock. Games to be played on Froebel School grounds.

MERCANTILE LEAGUE.

Wagner Electrics vs. Stag A. C., Fairground No. 2; Ben Millers vs. St. Barbaras, Fairground No. [illegible]; Western Electrics vs. Geller-Ward & Hassner, Forest Park No. 8.

INDEPENDENT LEAGUE.

Wells Fargo vs. Weekes, Fairground No. 1, at 1:15 o'clock; Keen Kutters vs. Yucatans, Fairground No. 1 at 3:30 o'clock; Adams vs. Ellermans, Fairground No. 3, at 1:15 o'clock; Welsbachs vs. St. Louis Suburbans, Fairground No. 3, at 3:30 o'clock.

JUNIOR LEAGUE.

Steinlage vs. Wolff Juniors, Forest Park No. 9; St. Louis Suburbans vs. Harris, Forest Park No. 11; Peerless vs. Perpetual Help Juniors, Forest Park No. 12.

WAKENAN SHOWING GOOD FORM FOR NORMAL TEAM

MARYVILLE, Mo., April 22.—Wakenan, the star heaver of the baseball team of the State Normal School of this city, is after the record in the Missouri Intercollegiate Athletic Association in the way of allowing few hits in the games in which he participates. He got a good start when he held the hard-hitting William Jewell Cardinals of Liberty to one hit in their first class this week. Wakenan's biggest fault has been his wildness, and it was his undoing in the Jewell game, the Liberty boys winning despite their meager gathering of one-base swats.

Having Lost His Standing, Ouimet Will Have to Go Way Back and Sit Down

WILLARD THE ONLY REAL CHAMPION IN FIGHT GAME TODAY

His Size, as Well as Hitting Power and Skill, Make Him King of Heavies.

OTHERS ALL ARE JOKES

Present Day Title Holders Do Not Class With Those of a Decade Ago.

By Robert Edgren.

(Copyright, 1916, by Press Pub. Co.)

NEW YORK, April 22.—This is about the time of year for taking stock in the pugilistic world.

How many real champions have we in the six recognized classes? Not as many as in the days when there were great fighters in every class, developed by long fights in which decisions were always given. The short, no-decision bouts have changed all that.

Some of the old-timers can well remember when the list of champions ran like this:

Jim Corbett, heavyweight champion.
Bob Fitzsimmons, middleweight champion.
Tommy Ryan, welterweight champion.
Kid Lavigne, lightweight champion.
George Dixon, featherweight champion.
Terry McGovern, bantam champion.

A little later some of the positions had changed. Down the line it ran: Fitzsimmons, Ryan, Mysterious Billy Smith, Erne, McGovern. And then shifting again: Jeffries, Ryan, Walcott, Gans, Attell. Even since those days we've had brilliant stars in some of the classes. Men like Stanley Ketchel, Battling Nelson, Jimmy Britt, Young Corbett, Jack Johnson, have flashed across the hrizon and disappeared, but have left their mark in pugilistic history.

Only One Great Champion.

But today it's an entirely different story. There is one great champion—Jess Willard. Jess is champion largely because he is a giant in size and strength—a much bigger man than Jim Jeffries, who was once caled the "Cave Man." He is also a remarkably skillful boxer, having attained greater proficiency in defense than any other heavyweight of recent years, except Jack Johnson, and combined with it a hard-hitting offense that makes him easily the best heavyweight of the decade. Willard's title is genuine.

Now drop down a single notch to the middleweight class, which has boasted such champions as Fitzsimmons, McCoy, Ryan, etc. Al McCoy is now technically middleweight champion by virtue of having struck one single magnificent blow in a ring career several years in length. Al hit George Chip. He hit him hard enough to win the battle. McCoy can make the middleweight limit, and he'll probably avoid being knocked out, for he's awkward and enduring. But he doesn't go after decision fights—hasn't fought one in his life, that I know of. He's a no-decision champion of the world—and there are at least a dozen better middleweights, all waiting and hoping that some day some one will have the luck to polish off McCoy and put the musty old title in circulation again. Mike Gibbons is one of the best middleweights in the world, and would compare well with the old-timers. So would Les Darcy of Australia. These two are the best rival claimants of the real middleweight supremacy.

There is no welterweight champion to take the place of Smith, Matthews, Ferns, Walcott and Melody. James Joy Johnston claims the title for his scrappy Englishman, Kid Lewis. But Lewis has been fighting only decisionless bouts and he hasn't been knocking 'em out, either. He is now matched with Mike Gibbons, who is likely to end all aspirations for titles for the time being. Half a dozen others claim the welter title, but not one can show credentials any more than Lewis can.

No Welterweight King.

The lightweight class has a champion in the person Freddy Welsh of England. Welsh won the title on a decision given in England against the American champion, Willie Ritchie. Ritchie always claimed that he should have had the decision in that fight, as he chased Welsh through every round. I don't know what justice there may be in Willie's claim, if any. But he certainly did whip Welsh to a rag tag in Madison Square Garden, chasing him at top speed for 10 rounds and battering him all over the ring.

Welsh is one of the poorest champions the lightweight class ever had. Others like Lavigne, Erne, Nelson and Wolgast fought hard and often in defense of their honors. Welsh has gone through a number of no-decision bouts, but whenever pitted against a dangerous hitter has saved himself by swift flight and careful hugging, playing the part of anything but a champion. His latest defeat was dealt out by Benny Leonard, a Harlem lightweight, who was well within the weight limit of the class. Welsh didn't make the weight, and it is doubtful that he can make it now. He is a welterweight and likely to stay in the welterweight class while "defending" his lightweight title.

Kilbane a Clever Dancer.

Johnny Kilbane is featherweight champion, having won the title on decision from Abe Attell. There's no doubt that Kilbane can fight, if forced to. But like Freddy Welsh, he seems to have become amazingly timid since he became champion. They all dislike the idea of losing the titles that make the money flow in. Kilbane has become a clever dancer—and a light and fancy tapper and back-jumper. That's about all. He won't defend his title against any featherweight who might have a chance to defeat him.

Johnny Ertle is the bantam champion. He took the title from Kid Williams, who was disqualified for fouling him in a no-decision bout. A disqualification for fouling, like a knockout, is an automatic decision.

Ertle seems to differ from some of the others in that he is really a good, willing little fighting man. He has fought rather well since he supplanted Williams. The Baltimore "Kid" declares that he was "jobbed" in the Ertle match and that he never lost the title. So there is, it seems, some doubt of the genuineness of Ertle as a champion. Williams, however, has shown unmistakable signs of having gone backward since he met Ertle that there's little doubt that "Kewpie" is the better bantam at present.

Ouimet, Country's Greatest Young Golf Player, Barred by Absurd Distinction

He Has Sold Sporting Goods for Past Four Years

Yet What Was All Right in the Salesman, Became a Heinous Crime in the Proprietor, in the Eyes of the U. S. G. A.

Star's Competitive Future in Doubt, the Only Outlet for His Talent Lying in the One or Two "Open" Tourneys.

"WHAT does the future hold in store for Francis Ouimet, the country's greatest young golfer, who has just been declared ineligible to compete in amateur tournaments and who has declared he would never become a professional?

"Is this brilliant, talented young player to be blotted out because of an over-nice distinction as to what constitutes an 'amateur' player?" is a question all golfers would like to have answered.

Ouimet is only 23 years old. He has been national amateur and national "open" champion of the United States. At the age of 20 he electrified the world by outgaming Harry Vardon and Edward Ray, the most renowned of the English professionals, in the national open championship.

Since that time he has improved in steadiness and skill. He is considered this country's best golfing prospect.

Now, according to all indications, he is wiped off the golf map. He is ineligible for amateur tourneys, and can play only in the "open" events, to which all classes of competitors are eligible, without being professionalized.

Distinction Without a Difference.

OUIMET was banned by straining a point in favor of amateurism. For Ouimet was a golf sporting goods SALESMAN when in 1913 he beat Vardon and Ray. Now he is the PROPRIETOR of a store which sells sporting goods, therefore he has become a professional!

Few can see the distinction. Massachusetts clubs are said to have already disregarded the eligibility ruling by sending Ouimet invitations to compete in their amateur events.

Should he see fit to do so, the national body would be threatened with a revolt that might seriously shake it.

With Ouimet were barred three other prominent Massachusetts golfers who, in the belief of the powers that be in the U. S. G. A., are using their ability and reputation in the golfing world to sell golf balls and accessories. One of them, J. H. Sullivan Jr., is Ouimet's partner in his new venture.

The passing of Ouimet from amateur tourneys is a matter of great regret all over the golfing world. There never was a more popular player and the Massachusetts Golf Association did all it could to save him.

This week his name was included in the list of eligible amateurs sent by the Massachusetts association to the U. S. G. A., although the rule barring him was framed by the parent association in the winter. He was even given a handicap rating of "plus two," compared with "plus one," last year.

FRANCIS OUIMET...

Then the red tape began to unwind. Though Ouimet had been officially notified by the U. S. G. A. that he had been declared a professional, the M. G. A. had received no notice from his club. When his name was sent to the U. S. G. A., that body immediately sent word to the Woodland Golf Club, the club notified the M. G. A. and later the latter struck Ouimet's name off.

Will Never Turn "Pro."

WHEN Ouimet first gained fame he made this announcement:

"I intend to remain an amateur golfer. I know little about the amount of money there is in the game for the American professional golfers, but I know that I will derive much more pleasure from the game if I remain an amateur. It has never been my ambition to make money by playing golf. I love the game for its own sake."

Ouimet still stands by this declaration. He is not going to become an out and out professional, as the term is commonly understood. When the U. S. G. A. passed the rule, which many believed was aimed at him particularly, he said he would make no attempt to play in amateur tourneys. Naturally he cannot give up playing golf, and the only course left for him, if he does not intend to make money from golf, except in the course of his sporting goods business, is to play in "open" tournaments. He will undoubtedly enter the United States "open" and such other open tournaments of standing as his business permits. From the outset he has steadfastly refused to comment on the rule that debars him.

Ouimet's friends are not reticent, however, as to the injustice of the rule. They point to J. M. Ward, who is rated as an amateur, although he is the former baseball star who acted as manager of the Giants a few years ago; to Tilly Schaefer, former shortstop of the Giants, who is allowed to compete in all grades of golf on the Pacific Coast, and to hosts of others.

Ouimet does not sell his ability at golf, like a regular professional does. Of course, before he started in business on his own hook, his sales increased because of his ability at golf and his pay envelope grew larger; but fame is something that usually brings reward. His friends say he might just as well have been declared a professional from the outset because a few years before he beat Vardon and Ray, he had been a caddy on the links of the Country Club at Brookline, where he won the open championship from the Englishmen.

Ouimet's Sudden Rise.

OUIMET'S career as an amateur golfer has been as brilliant as his rise was sudden. Before the fall of 1913, he was little known except to golfers in Greater Boston, although he had appeared in the Lesley Cup matches as a member of Massachusetts team and had made several unsuccessful attempts to qualify in the National Amateur Championship. In 1913 he was put out at Garden City in the National Amateur tournament by Jerome D. Travers, the defending champion, 3 up and 2 to play, in one of the best matches ever played for the championship.

On Sept. 20, 1913, he made golfing history by winning the United States open at the Country Club in Brookline. No amateur had won the title up to that time, and Ouimet was only 20 years old. Vardon and Ray, British professionals, both former holders of the British open championship, were on hand to take the title back to England. The three were tied in four rounds at 304, and there was an 18-hole playoff next day. Ouimet won with a card of 72 to 77 for Vardon and 78 for Ray, clinching the match by a great 22-foot putt.

On Sept. 5, 1915, he won the United States Amateur Championship at Ekwanok, defeating Travers, 6 and 5. He won the Massachusetts Amateur title in 1913, 1914 and 1915. On May 28, 1914, he won the Amateur Championship of France at Versailles, in the course of a European trip for which his expenses were paid by the Woodland Golf Club with the express agreement of the United States Golf Association that it would not affect his amateur standing.

Doolan's Pinch Hit Gives Cubs 8 to 7 Victory

Veteran, Sent to Bat for Mulligan, Punches Out a Bingle Against Reds.

CHICAGO, April 22.—Mike Doolan, batting for Mulligan, drove in the winning run in the ninth inning of a hard fought victory which Chicago scored over Cincinnati today, 8 to 7. A belated rally after home runs by Flack and Saier had given the Cubs a good lead gave the visitors seven runs in the last three innings. This gave them the lead but singles by Flack, Saier and Zimmerman, Williams' sacrifice and Doolan's bunt retrieved the victory for the Cubs. HOPPE AVERAGES 59 FOR 65,000 POINTS

Willie Hoppe and Koji Yamada have reached San Francisco in their exhibition balkline billiard match series. Since Oct. 20 last Hoppe and the Japanese expert have missed only four afternoons and nights of play on different tables and in all sections of the country.

A total of 65,000 points has been contested, and Hoppe has the remarkable grand average of 59.

GRID MEN TOO "LADYLIKE"

LAFAYETTE, Ind., April 22.—"Too ladylike" is the criticism of the Purdue football squad, undergoing spring training by Clero O'Donnell, the new coach, who arrived recently from the East. His methods of coaching are entirely different from any seen here and are proving popular with the players and the student body in general. Coach O'Donnell is paying especial attention to the manner in which the men run and the Purdue players are becoming familiar with the low, crouching position, which has been dubbed "the duck waddle."

Golfer at Best Between 27 and 37, Is Opinion

At Least Five Years Needed for One to Know Anything Much About Game.

At what age is a golfer at his best? This question has been discussed on numerous occasions, and the consensus of opinion shows that the experts agree on that period of 10 years when a man is between 27 and 37.

It has been asserted that it takes at least five years for one to know very much about golf, but it is unlikely that many can possess in that length of time the mature experience which is necessary in the make-up of a truly great player. By the time a man has reached the age of 27, provided he has started in as a youth or very young man, he should have imbibed a sufficient knowledge of the game to turn his physical powers to account. But players vary both in the matter of temperament and physique. Some develop early, while others give over years to the gradual accumulation of skill and knowledge. If this general opinion is correct, a player should be at his very best at the age of 34.

However, it is worth remarking that because a man is extraordinarily proficient when he has passed 40, or even greater age, and still can beat his younger rivals, it does not follow that he was not better at 30, or would not have been better when much younger had he been in the game at that age. It is likely that the age up to which a man is at his absolute best is higher among the professionals than among amateurs, but only because the incentive of earning a living keeps them up to the mark. Some years ago an eminent British authority observed that no amateur was at his best after the age of 30. It seemed a very extreme and severe remark, but, after all, it is not very wide of the mark. Middle-aged and elderly players need find no discouragement in these observations, for they refer only to golfers of the very highest type and of championship timber.

SIX BASKETBALLERS ARE AWARDED LETTERS

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., April 22.—Six members of the basket-ball squad of Indiana University have been awarded letters for their services during the past season by the Athletic Board of Control. They are: Capt. Maxwell and Buschmann of Indianapolis; Whitake, South Bend; Nash, Sharpsville; Mullett of Columbia City and Porter of Lebanon. Only two of the men will be ineligible for the team next year, when Coach Williford expects the Indiana basket shooters to make a better showing.

The awarding of the basket-ball "I" at this time revives the question of whether it would be better to award the monogram in all branches of sport as a part of the commencement week exercises. Those in favor of the change, including Prof. C. J. Sembower, president of the Athletic Board of Control and Indiana's faculty representative in the conference, say it would make an impressive ceremony and would add dignity to the letter in the minds of the students and witnesses of the exercise. It is proposed that one day during commencement week, which is now known as "Gala week," be set aside for the awarding of the letter and that former "I" men be invited to return on that day especially.

The "I" men of Indiana University were the first to form an organization and, since its beginning three years ago, it has become a power for good in the development of athletics at the State institution. If the proposed change is approved, the "I" men's organization will have a leading part in the ceremony.

Kansas City Now Assembling Team For A. A. U. Meet

St. Louis Athletes Will Have to Go Some to Beat "Doc" Reilly's Outfit.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 22.—Any squad of athletes that figures in lowering the colors of the Kansas City Athletic Club on the track in the Western A. A. U. meet at St. Louis this season had better make a close study of the Blue Diamond rostrum and then reverse the opinion. That is the tip handed out by Dr. J. A. Reilly, athletic director of the local club. The maker of championship track teams for the Blue Diamond has an exceptionally strong team this year.

As a nucleus around whom Dr. Reilly will construct the team this year that he believes will be the superior of former ones, are Davis, sprinter; Lee Talbot, weight man; Pierce, half-miler; Frizzell, high jumper; Farrall, half-miler and Barnes, in the shot-put.

Davis is the Missouri Valley champion in the century and is a star in the 220. In addition he is a pretty good half-miler. The ability of Talbot in the weight is too well known to need comment. Dr. Riley is depending on him to march to an easy victory in those events.

Pierce of Kirksville is a Western A. A. U. champion in the 440 and is expected to win that event in the meet. Frizzell is the Kansas City Aggie's mainstay in the high jump and holds the M. V. C. title in that event.

Farrell, William Jewell star, is the champion half miler among the college athletes of the State. Barnes, a local boy, who has starred in the indoor meets here, should be able to win a few points in the shot.

These able athletes will be the representatives of the K. C. A. C. when they finish school this term. And their presence on the team is the reason Dr. Reilly thinks he will lead the squad to the eighth straight Western A. A. U. championship this season.

YANKS GET ONLY FIVE HITS, BUT BEAT NATIONALS

Double by Pinch-Hitter Bauman Wins for Donovan's Men, 3—2 in 11 Frames.

HARPER IN GREAT FORM

Holds Gotham Crew Hitless From Fourth Round, but Blows in Final Session.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—New York beat Washington 3 to 2 today in a thrilling 11-inning game. The visitors got only five hits off Harper, but all of them figured in the scoring. High's single, Cook's sacrifice and Gedeon's safety put over the first run in the fourth. The locals tied the score in the sixth on Foster's triple and Rondeau's double.

The Yankees went hitless from the fourth to the eleventh, when Nunamaker singled, Maisel got a Texas leaguer, and both scored when Bauman, hitting for High, got a two-bagger. For Washington, Morgan drew a pass, Henry got a single, McBride sacrificed and Morgan scored when Williams, hitting for Harper, hit to Peckinpaugh. Score:

FOSTER'S WILDNESS GIVES ATHLETICS GAME, 6—2

PHILADELPHIA, April 22.—Wildness on the part of Foster and timely hitting by Oldring and Strunk enabled Philadelphia to defeat Boston again today, the score being 6 to 2. Shore took Foster's place in the third inning and was taken out for a pinch hitter in the seventh, Pennock finishing the game in good style. Nabers kept Boston's hits scattered. Four of Philadelphia's five hits were two-baggers. Henriksen hurt a finger on his left hand catching a line drive of Meyer's bat and his place was taken by Shorten. Score:

CHICAGO AND YALE ARE AFTER GREEK ATHLETE

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 22.— Demetrius Theodore, a Greek student at Drury College in Springfield, has received an unusual honor prior to graduation by being offered a fellowship in the University of Chicago and a valuable scholarship in Yale University. The young Greek has been prominent in athletic affairs of the school, making his "D" for two years in track work.

Last year he won second place in the mile run in the first annual triangular meet between Drury, Springfield Normals and Rolla Miners and won the same event in the Missouri intercollegiate track meet. He is a member of the track squad this year and is expected to be a point winner in the distance events in the three or four meets scheduled for the Panther team. Theodore also has held forth for several years on the Drury "Cubs," the second football team, and has shown considerable ability as a boxer.

Shoes for Home Runs.

The home run knockers of the American League teams are promised a pair of "American Gentlemen" shoes for each home run they make this season. All they have to do is to present the order to the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., St. Louis, who are to distribute them.

TO BUILD $10,000 BOAT

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 22.—The proposed high-power motor boat to be called "Miss Minneapolis," has been ordered built by the Minneapolis Athletic Club's board of directors. It will cost $10,000, which was raised by public subscription. "Miss Minneapolis" will be ready for the water some time in June and will represent this city in various national power-boat races during the 1916 regatta season.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Phils Again Shock the Talent.

NEXT to the shock handed "form" by the celebrated runaway of the Boston Braves, in 1914, the worst collision between performance and dope in the baseball world occurred last year when the despised Phils ruined the self-esteem of many a bold picker.

Nobody could see this club with a field glass at the start of the 1915 season and it was unanimously conceded a lease on the basement.

This year, although the Phils won the flag, the same attitude has been maintained by many dopesters, who still could not see the club. It's young yet, this 1915 race; but the National League has already arranged itself almost precisely as it did last year at this time. And again, it's the Phils that are out there showing the way.

Old Man Dope always declared that this club was the only 1915 team in the league that showed consistency. It's personnel is unchanged this year, except for some additions to its outfield and pitching strength. If it shows the same courage when challenged as it did last year, the dopesters will be ground into the dust again.

There has never been a real reason for giving any National League club preference over Moran's team, except possibly in case of the Braves, for whom everything went wrong in 1915.

That National Stadium.

INCOMPLETE returns on the plan to establish a National Athletic Stadium at Washington, D. C., at a cost of $1,500,000 or more, indicate that the District of Columbia squirrels were concentrating a murderous attack on the top-piece of Congressman Hulbert, the originator of the bill.

The onslaught was said to have been provoked by the announcement that the distinguished legislator was about to be breveted a "kernel."

He deserves it, too. Mr. Hulbert's plan, roughly, involves the erection of a U-shaped stadium, with permanent seats for 6000 and room for 40,000 temporary seats; cost $1,545,000!

The Yale "bowl," a concrete affair with over 68,000 permanent seats, cost about $500,000—less than one-third the Hulbert idea.

If Washington and not St. Louis does build the national stadium, it ought to provide seats for 100,000 persons, at a cost of not over $600,000.

Either that, or a lengthy explanation is in order, as to why "bowls" worth $500,000 in New Haven cost three times this sum in Washington.

By building the affair of alabaster and making it an architectural gem, a million or more could easily be used. And if that is the idea, we are FOR it.

We Need a "Bowl" Here.

EVEN should Washington build the proposed amphitheater, St. Louis ought to give serious consideration to the building of a "bowl" in this city, where no outdoor inclosure of adequate seating capacity is available—if we except ball parks.

The uses of such a structure would not be merely athletic. It could be employed for all sorts of pageants and outdoor spectacles of a civic or amusement nature.

Events of Middle-west importance, and even of national character would be held in it, because of its central location with reference to the rest of the country.

It could be built for one-third what Congressman Hulbert proposes as the cost of the U. S. stadium.

It's Coming, Men.

THE time is surely coming when all big athletic events will be held under the auspices of the national municipal body. St. Louis should be ready to handle any or all finals for national titles.

A national amateur baseball championship is a near prospect. It will be the biggest thing in baseball some day, for the teams involved will be made up of real representatives of the cities, instead of mere hired mercenaries.

The magnitude of a national amateur baseball championship can be guessed from statistics about the local municipal league.

These show that 1400 players are involved in the decision of the local title. If local championships of other cities were conducted on a similar scale, the magnitude of interest in a national final will be appreciated.

This is no dream. Nearly eight years ago the municipal idea was first broached in this column. It provoked a merry laugh. It is on the verge of reality today.

We're Losing Money, Bo.

MISSOURI'S statutory attitude toward boxing it costing it about $50,000 a year. Public boxing has no status in this State. But under the present conditions "private" boxing contests are held and crowds ranging from 500 to 5000 persons attend each show.

St. Joe, St. Louis, Kansas City, Joplin and the lesser towns all have one or more boxing clubs. St. Louis has four in active operation and others of desultory activity.

Since the game exists only in "private" these bouts are not now a source of revenue to the State. No license or permit is required, nor is any revenue per capita exacted from the receipts.

It would be different if the legislators wiped out the existing law, put on the books back in times when glove contests were absolutely unknown, and replaced it with a modern one, establishing a commission and exacting a revenue of from 5 to 7½ per cent of all admissions taken in.

New York Makes $182,274.

IN the four years that the New York commission law has been in operation the total receipts from the sale of tickets amounted to $3,435,812.26, of which the State of New York received $182,274.14—a sum which will pay the interest on a lot of 5 per cent bonds, Bo.

A similar law for Missouri would help the boxing game, clean it up a bit and put money in the State treasury.

Test for Joe Stecher.

IN Baltimore, next Friday, the most talked-of young man in Nebraska—"Scissors" Joe Stecher, will be called on to show something more than exhibition form. On that day he will oppose Gus Schoenlein, who thumps opponents on the wrestling mat under the name Americus.

Arrangements to handle an attendance of 12,000 persons, all home-town rooters for Americus, have been made. Thus, if any doubts concerning the sincerity of Schoenlein's first defeat by Stecher exist, they need not taint the honesty of their second meeting. Gus has been training for weeks.

Before his own following he will do his best. That is as nearly a certainty as anything connected with wrestling can be.

ON the occasion of their first meeting Americus was thrown twice in a total of eight minutes or thereabouts. The time required to defeat Schoenlein was utterly out of proportion to the known merit of the Baltimorean and doubts have therefore been cast on the integrity of the contest. Investigation brought out the assertion that Schoenlein was not in shape for the go and had underestimated Stecher.

If Stecher can turn over the Oriole in anything like the brief space he required the first time, he will have to be accorded full homage. Americus ranks with the very best second raters in the U. S.—or did.

About "Strangler" Lewis.

THE Nebraskan is not monopolizing the mat "hope" field. Chicago admirers of "Strangler" Lewis—real name Gustave Friedrich—seek to match him with Stecher, thus far without success.

That there is some acumen back of Stecher is manifested in this refusal. Lewis once wrestled a draw in two hours and five minutes with Stecher and has "come on" since that time. He is a strapping young man, formerly physical director at the Kentucky State University. He is 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 235 pounds and has a swan-like neck of only 18 inches in circumference!

If he continues to grow he should amount to something, someday, eh Bo?

MISSOURI'S TITLE GOLF EVENTS TO BE HELD IN JUNE

Men's and Women's Championships to Be Decided in Kansas City Week of 19 to 24.

RECORD ENTRY EXPECTED

Cy More and Miss Semple, Both of St. Louis, Are Present Holders of Honors.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 22.—The six days between June 19 and June 24 will be "Golf Week" in Kansas City. Between the dates two championship golf tournaments will be held here—the Missouri State tournament for men, at the Blue Hills Club, and the Women's State Championship, at the Mission Hills Course.

The State tournaments here this year probably will excel all the previous contests in the number of entries and the closeness of the fight. The men's entry list in the 1915 classic was 265 and the women's 85. Golf enthusiasts here promise 300 men candidates this season and more than 100 women contestants.

Preliminary arrangements for the two tournaments were made by a committee of Kansas City golfers who met with Bonner Miller, secretary of the Missouri Golf Association, at the Blue Hills Club yesterday. Two good-sized committees have been named to take care of the details, and each committee contains representatives from every club in Kansas City.

An extra feature of the program will be the fight for the Springfield Country Club trophy, contested for by teams of four men each, representing the different clubs on qualifying day. The quartet with the lowest medal total will win the cup. A similar contest will take place the same day in the women's division, the trophy being fought for being the W. F. Cutler team cup.

It is hard to pick the probable winners of the big 1916 State gold classic. Cy More of St. Louis, a youthful athlete, who hits his drives around the 300-yard mark, is the present men's title holder, and A. W. Warren of St. Joseph is runner-up. Miss Grace Semple of St. Louis is women's champion and Miss Laurie Kaiser, another St. Louis expert, was second in the race last year.

But this season the contest is being held in Kansas City, which will give the home players a little advantage. C. R. Jones, present city champion, is in fine form this year and will put up a battle for the State trophy. G. L. Cinley, M. B. Nelson, W. A. R. Summers and the Rev. Dr. Burris Jenkins should all back up Jones' offense in clever style.

It was announced that the action in holding the tournament in June, instead of later in the year, was to allow students and professors at Missouri University a chance to compete. There are a number of good players at Columbia. The commencement exercises there will be over by June 16.

FORTY-THREE STATES TO GET FEDERAL AID

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Forty-three of the 48 states will qualify for Federal aid in roads under the Bankhead bill, recently reported favorably by the Senate by its Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads.

Indiana, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi and Texas are the five states which have yet to equip themselves with a centralized direction of roads improvement. Indiana has an active campaign in progress which ought to prove successful, energized in great degree by the Hoosier State Automobile Association, which is affiliated with the American Automobile Association. Indiana is a great automobile producing state, and a large percentage of its farmers have adopted the self-propelled vehicle.

South Carolina is giving the question of a State highway department serious consideration. Georgia is in an equally hopeful condition, while Mississippi in its House of Representatives recently voted against the creation of a State Commission. The legislators opposed the legislation because it called for an engineer with a salary of $2500 a year. Maine pays $5000 and possesses an unusually competent official.

Texas under the Bankhead measure would obtain more Federal co-operation than any other state in the Union, its area taking it into first place, though it falls behind many other states in population and road mileage. It is a certainty that Texas will provide a highway department within three years, for section 3 of the Senate measure contains this proviso: "Except that amounts apportioned for any fiscal year to any state which has not a state highway department shall be available for expenditure in that state until the close of the third fiscal year succeeding the close of the fiscal year for which such apportionment was made."

MOTOR CYCLISTS FORM MILITARY CORPS

In order to aid in the general movement for national preparedness, Los Angeles motor cyclists, with the co-operation of Manager E. E. Welborn of the Appeal Manufacturing and Jobbing Co., California Harley-Davidson distributers, and Manager A. T. Smith of the Los Angeles Firestone branch have formed an auxiliary to the California National Guard.

Sunday, March 18, a large number of Harley-Davidson riders, with their machines, reported to Capt. Jesse McComas at the armory of the California National Guard at Los Angeles. Practically every machine was equipped with Firestone nonskid tires.

The men were supplied with uniforms and given information as to the possible duties of a motor cycle reserve of the guard. Thursday, March 23, a large squad of riders reported at the armory to consider the matter of enlistment as a motor cycle reserve squad of the California National Guard, which, in case of continued military action in Mexico, would be summoned for active service.

OLD FORD DISCOVERED

The first Ford car sold in Toledo, O., has recently been rediscovered, and a still more interesting feature is the fact that the car, after seven years' continuous service, is still on the job

Stanley Roberts of the Roberts-Toledo Auto Co., Ford agents in the Ohio city, recently took in the Ford car and its number somehow stirred vague memories in his Ford selling experience. Digging down into dusty records of his Ford sales he finally discovered that this was the first machine he had sold in Toledo when he began the business of selling Fords there seven years ago. A few days ago Mr. Roberts was trying to sell his car, but now he admits that money would not buy it.

For the past three years the old veteran has been doing service on a mail route of Jersey City, O. It was originally bought for somewhere in the neighborhood of $850. One of its descendants sells for $390—showing the extraordinary reduction in price that has taken place in the last seven years.

CONSUMER'S LEAGUE LOSES

The suit of the Automobile Co-operative Association, a consumers' league, against the B. F. Goodrich Co., the Republic Rubber Co. and the Diamond Rubber Co., alleging discrimination, has been decided for the tire companies. The allegation was that the companies refused to sell the consumers' league at dealers' prices and $450,000 damages was asked.

The answer was that the companies had always refused to sell to clubs, consumers' leagues and similar organizations at trade prices, as a matter of protecting the interests of the legitimate dealers. The jury found for the defendants.

CAPEN GARAGE SELLS OUT

An automobile landmark in St. Louis has gone out of existence in the discontinuance of the business of the Capen Motor Car Co., 4739 McPherson avenue. This garage was established by Sam D. and Wallace C. Capen in the early days of motoring. The company at various times had the agency for leading cars, including the Locomobile and several trucks.

The building has been leased to the Garford Motor Truck Co., incorporated, builders of the Garford truck. W. E. Conway Jr. will continue as branch manager for the company in St. Louis, with a well-equipped service department for Garford owners.

HUBBARD IN ST. LOUIS

H. H. Hubbard, former manager of the St. Louis branch of the United States Tire Co., has returned to that position for a few months. Mr. Hub- of O. S. Johnson, who was in the postion for a few months. Mr. Hubbard will be district manager for the company, looking after Missouri, Southern Illinois, Tennessee, Mississippi, Arkansas and the State of Texas. Johnson has gone to Detroit with the Gibney Tire Co.

SLEEVE VALVE MOTOR SHOWS GAS ECONOMY

In the opinion of many keen observers, the present price of gasoline is serving to clarify the situation in regard to the vast difference between economical and wasteful automobile engines. During the past two months, as the price of gasoline has steadily climbed upward, attention has been focused directly upon a few cards noted for their economical use of fuel. Among these the Knight sleeve valve motor has long held a leading position and it has been more especially in the public eye during the last year by virtue of its use in the Willys-Knight, a car of moderate price.

"While the economy of the sleeve valve motor has long been well known to manufacturers and users of cars equipped with this type of motor," says John N. Willys, president of The Willys-Overland Company, "little attention has heretofore been paid to its economical operation, principally because heretofore it has been sold only at a high price and the owners were not as vitally interested in the cost of gasoline as the buyers of more moderately priced cars."

"We realized from the beginning," continued Mr. Willys "that while the sleeve valve motor was principally known for its ability to improve with use, its power, reliability and freedom from repairs, sooner or later its pronounced economy would take first rank with its other sterling qualities. Now that the motor has been placed within the reach of the average buyer, we find from what our owners tell us that our judgment has been more than vindicated and our dealers all over the country are receiving the most flattering reports of gasoline consumption.

PREPAREDNESS AND THE LINCOLN HIGHWAY

F. W. Haines, President, Regal Motor Car Co., writing to the Trenton Motor Ca. Co., St. Louis, says: "When the Lincoln Highway was started. four years ago, 'preparedness' was not known. We thought of the Highway as a splendid road for our machines. Within the last year and a half 'preparedness' is in everybody's mind and naturally road building has had an added impetus. Other highways have been started, and the Lincoln Highway, now practically finished, will give us the nucleus of a highway system. Motor cars play the important part in warfare today—and roads a still more important part.

"Back in the year 312 B. C. the Romans constructed a road called the Appian Way. This road was made of lava and Roman cement and was used in many of the campaigns of the Roman armies. Many miles of this old road are still available to the modern motor car.

"Thousands of Regal owners in the United States have been quick to join in this great road building movement, and no doubt many are now members of the various automobile clubs that stand ready to offer their services and cars in time of need."

DORT MOTOR SAVES FACTORY SHUT-DOWN

The powerful Dort motor, which has shown such wonderful efficiency in the Dort touring car, had an opportunity again to demonstrate its remarkable worth in a novel way last week.

The spring thaw and unusually heavy rains combined in raising the Flint River, at Flint, Mich., besides which the Dort factory is located, to a height of 15 feet above its normal level. A miniature flood resulted, and drove all the workmen from the shops. But for a happy idea of Mr. J. D. Mansfield, the General Sales Manager the shops would have been shut down for several days, a very serious thing at this time of the year, with dealers all over the country clamoring for Dort cars.

Two chassis were run out of the motor assembly department and their engines attached to a large four-inch centrifugal force pump lent by the local fire department. In less than two hours the water level in the entire Dort factory has been appreciably reduced, and by afternoon all the men were at work again. In spite of the fact that the rived continued at its high level for two or three days, there was no trouble in keeping the Dort shops and offices free of water.

ENGLISH GIRLS SELL DODGES IN LONDON

Despite the restrictions that the British Government has placed upon the automobile business, there are still many cars being sold in England and Dodge Brothers Motor cars, because of their sturdiness and moderate price, rank among the leaders.

The war has made so many demands on the young men, however, that there are few automobile salesmen left. This has opened a new field for young women, and there are a number of them engaged in demonstrating and selling cars.

The picture of Miss Dorothy Stone in a Dodge Brothers roadster recently appeared in London papers with the following announcement:

"A Dodge Brothers motor car, driven by Miss Dorothy Stone, who has been appointed by Messrs. Charles Jarrot and Letts, Ltd., in association with Messrs. Thrupp and Maberly, Ltd., to demonstrate the car, and at the same time serve a patriotic purpose by taking a man's place so that he might fight for his country."

CADILLAC CHIEF IN AEROPLANE FLIGHT

President Henry M. Leland, of the Cadillac Motor Car Co., recently enjoyed his first flight in an aeroplane at Ormond Beach, Fla., says I. G. McNeice of the local Cadillac agency.

The machine, which was a Wright biplane, piloted by Miss Ruth Law, reached an altitude of more than 1800 feet.

In writing of his experience to the factory, Mr. Leland said:

"I was fearful before mounting the plane that I might become dizzy and sick, so my pilot promised to go gently. After we started, it seemed to me that we were near the ground and going very slowly.

"When I found that there were no unpleasant sensations, I kept motioning and calling for her to go faster and to go up higher. At last she yelled 'You're up 1600 feet, and are going 60 miles an hour. For heaven's sake, what do you want? This isn't a Cadillac Eight'."

GREAT ADVANTAGE IN TAKING DOWN MITCHELL

Users of "The Six of '16" Mitchell find a great advantage in the readiness with which the car can be taken down. This fact guarantees permanency of service. It assures a car out of commission only a minimum of the time. It means that repairs can be readily be made, and when extended use makes a complete overhauling necessary, this can be accomplished at smallest cost.

This is a big consideration now that automobiles are bought with the idea of yielding service over a number of years.

Nevertheless, the automobile, like any other mechanical device, must from time to time receive attention. It must be taken down. The most advantageous car permits that this be done in a minimum of time. The claim is made that John W. Bates of the Mitchell-Lewis Co., has accomplished this with the Mitchell.

NEW BATTERY DEPOT

The Battery Service Co., now at 2308 Locust street, will be installed at Twenty-third and Olive streets, after May 1, with a well-equipped service station for all batteries. The company has secured the distributing agency for Willard batteries. W. O. Suhre is president, M. J. Cline, vice president, and J. H. Freeman, service manager.

CHEVROLET-FORD CONTEST.

On Saturday, April 1, W. W. McCurdy demonstrated a Chevrolet car in New Haven before a large crowd. During the demonstration Theo. Kuhn, the Ford agent, drove out a new Ford, but did not attempt the feats that Mr. McCurdy had the Chevrolet perform. After discussing the power of the two cars Mr. McCurdy and Mr. Kuhn agreed to hitch the rear ends of the two cars together and to pull for one minute. The Chevrolet had on smooth tires, while the Ford had on non-skid tires. Besides, Mr. Kuhn used his brakes to hold the Ford while speeding up his motor. Nevertheless, when the judge of the contest called "time," the Ford had been pulled about five feet to the rear. It was then agreed to put chains on the cars and to pull without the use of the brakes. The Chevrolet displayed its wonderful power by spinning the wheels until the chains ground down to rock that was solid enough to hold, thus enabling it to drag off the Ford twice in succession. After the contest Mr. Kuhn drove the Chevrolet up the New Haven hills. Upon his return he acknowledged that he had the wrong idea of the "Chevrolet Four-Ninety." He also stated that its performance compared favorably with that of many six-cylinder cars.—From The Franklin County Tribune, Union, Mo., April 14.—Advertisement.

CARS NOW BOUGHT ON CONSERVATIVE BASIS

Now that automobiles have come to be regarded as a staple article, like real estate, furniture, machinery and other things involving a large unit of expenditure, the public quite naturally weighs automobile worth to a greater extent than formerly, and chooses cars on the basis of an investment. Instead of relying upon first-hand impressions, motor-car buyers consider the dollar-for-dollar value, and choose accordingly.

"This policy of careful buying on the part of the public has had its effect in producing record sales of Studebaker cars," says L. J. Ollier, vice president and director of sales of the Studebaker Corporation. "We have always built our product with an appeal to conservative buying uppermost in consideration. We appreciate, of course, that there have been and undoubtedly always will be a certain element of buyers who seek oddities either in appearance or in mechanical features. But this element is in a diminishing mincrity. The great majority of motor-car buyers look at their automobile purchase from a conservative standpoint.

"It was not so many years ago when the public figured automobile value on the basis of price alone. They took for granted that the higher the price the better must be the value. Those were the days before quantity production came into vogue, and with it the introduction of increased efficiency methods in the manufacture and distribution of cars.

"This conservation which is guiding the public in choosing cars has brought the standing of the manufacturer prominently into the foreground. Buyers now investigate the stability of the producer as well as the product before placing an order.

"In the April 3d issue of Motor World, an automobile publication, a whole page was devoted to telling where it is possible to get parts for orphan cars, meaning those the builders of which have gone out of the automobile business. Examples such as these have made the stability of the manufacturer of increasing importance. Automobile buyers do business with companies which are in the automobile business to stay.

TRUCK AND TEAM OWNERS TO MEET IN ST. LOUIS

Committees of the St. Louis Team Owners' Association are meeting frequently for the formulation of a program of entertainment for the annual convention in St. Louis of the National Team and Motor Truck Owners' Association. The convention will be held June 26, 27 and 28. About 300 delegates representing the local associations from all parts of the country will attend.

The forwarding of freight by motor truck or horse-drawn vehicle will be one of the principle points of discussion. The ladies' auxiliary will plan for entertainment of ladies who may attend. Hupp Tevis is chairman of the Executive Committee, Farwell Walton of the Finance Committee, R. F. Mitchell of the Entertainment Committee and A. J. Kuepfert of the Publicity Committee. Frank F. Tirre is general secretary.

AUTO THIEVES CONVICTED

Automobile theives are finding St. Louis an undesirable field for their operations. Last week three, including one woman, were convicted and given terms in the penitentiary.

Sergeant-Detectives Helmholt and McGauly some time ago arrested Sam Rinehart, alias F. W. Roberts, who had stolen three cars here, and also Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Foster, alias Glen Seamen, alias George Williams, alia Snell, who had recently come to St. Louis and stolen a number of cars, among them one belonging to Joy V. Allison.

Rinehart was convicted in Judge Fisher's division of the Circuit Court and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary, and the Fosters were convicted by a jury in Judge Kimmel's division of the Circuit Court and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary. This is the first time a woman has been convicted of this crime in St. Louis. The Fosters are known to be "itinerant automobile thieves" who have operated in other places than St. Louis. There are probably a larger number of persons convicted of this crime in St. Louis than in any other large city.

TIME PAY PROTEST.

Unqualified indorsement of the denunciation hurled by R. H. Collins, general sales manager of the Buick Motor Co., against a general extension of the deferred payment plan of selling automobiles, is voiced by Jay V. Hall, general sales manager of the Olds Motor Works.

"No man should buy an automobile until he can afford it," says Hall. "Any other course is sure to end in disaster, not only for the individual, but for the industry as well.

"To date the growth of the automobile business has been absolutely sound, at the expense of no other industry, and of positive benefit to all. A wide application of the deferred payment plan would change this completely, by causing many men to assume obligations they have no business to carry.

"In a majority of instances the dealer would be the man to suffer. A period of financial stringency among his trade, and he would have a quantity of half sold cars on his hands of secondhand value, little value, little cash, and no credit at the bank to tide him over."

LARGEST IN HISTORY.

Shipping cars valued at $3,000,000 during the 29 days of February, the Chalmers Motor Co. has just accomplished the largest month's business in its history.

"It is something more than a coincidence that the shortest month in the year should prove to be a record-breaker for Chalmers shipments," said C. A. Pfeffer, vice president and assistant general manager, yesterday. "This is not merely a business spurt, but the result of a steady growth in Chalmers business starting six months back. Entering February with an average daily shipment of 110 cars, we closed the month with 193 cars shipped on February 29, the largest day's shipment since we first began the manufacture of motor cars."

TRUCK FLEET'S HARD DRIVE IN MEXICO

Negotiating roads that were repeatedly declared impassable and bringing food and ammunition right up to the fighting front, motorized military transportation has played an important part on the punitive expedition into Mexico, according to a letter received by the Packard Motor Car Co. from one of its expert drivers who is accompanying the army in its pursuit of Villa. The letter, written on April 6, gives a thrilling account of what desert trucking under military necessity means. It reads, in part, as follows:

"We are back in Columbus, N. M., after having done 600 miles into the interior of Old Mexico. The roads are not roads at all, and you can never realize what we have accomplished.

"We have been to the direct front—within seven miles of where Villa is supposed to be hiding—and were the first to reach the Seventh Cavalry, who had been eight days without supplies.

"If you could have seen those boys when we reached them on April 1. It surely was no April fool for them. They had been 40 hours in the saddle and had literally killed 60 of their horses because of lack of feed and water for the animals.

"In going through to them we went 40 miles further than any other trucks have penetrated and we are surely getting the credit for it. Gen. Pershing has named us the 'Flying Squadron' and has asked Gen. Funston to detail our company to carry supplies to his command. We leave tomorrow morning at 8 to go through to the front again.

"Columbus is wild about the Packards, since some of the others here made 110 miles in 24 hours and shouted about it, while we clipped nine hours from their record and didn't consider it any feat at all."

OUR CITIES IN MOVIES

One of the staff motion picture photographers of the Ford Motor Co.—Rudolph Vallon, has been assigned to take an interesting series of films for the Ford Animated Weekly. This consists of representative scenes in the life of the largest American cities.

Mr. Vallon is now taking the cities of the Southwest. He had some interesting experiences recently with his camera, stationed on the Mexican border when the United States troops were dispatched in pursuit of Villa. He also secured some remarkable pictures taken in the spring training camps of the National and American League baseball teams. The new American city series will be started in the Ford Animated Weekly this week. So large has grown the demand for Ford films that the titles are now being translated for circulation in South America and Europe.

NOW OVERHAUL YOUR LAST YEAR'S CAR

"A thorough spring-time overhauling is one kind of motor car insurance that every automobile owner can afford to take out," according to Jas. E. Newell, President of the Newell Motor Car Co., distributor for the Haynes "Light Six."

"As the Spring and Summer wear on, the motorist who is running his car for the second season may discover that a rigid inspection at this time of the year will stand between long repair bills and perhaps costly accidents. Overhauling does not mean a superficial inspection of the chassis and body, and the tightening of a few noticeably loose nuts. It includes a thorough and systematic job of putting the vehicle in the best possible condition.

"It is a good plan to begin the overhauling with the motor, and take in the details of the car one at a time. If nothing else is done the grease and grime from a year's running should be washed from the cylinders and motor base with gasoline. The interior parts of the motor, particularly where carbon deposits occur, should be swabbed out with a kerosene soaked cloth.

"The man who takes care of his own car can readily remove the lower part of the crank case, or oil reservoir, and clean this thoroughly. It is good practice in connection with the operation to throw out all the black and used oil and fill the reservoir with new lubricant. At the time the lower part of the crank case is removed, the bearings of the connecting rods on the crankshaft can be easily inspected."

DEMAND BETTER TIRES.

"The cry of the public is for better tires—less tire trouble—fewer tire changes — longer tire life — lower cost per mile," declares L. C. Rockhill, manager automobile tire department, The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. "The pneumatic tire made the automobile possible, but for many years pneumatic tires came in for a full share of criticism. They were credited with being responsible for the high cost of motoring—and blamed for most of the motorist's trials and tribulations.

"This was the condition that we set about to combat, and to make Goodyear tires go farther, last longer and cost less in the end. That this has been accomplished, and the fear of tire trouble eliminated, is evidenced by the fact that Goodyear sales increased 235 per cent in the first three months of 1916.

"The savings resulting from factory efficiency, large production and economical distribution, we put back into the product in extra quality, extra material and substantial betterments. We could save over four million dollars in 1916 by omitting these improvements."

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

WIDE LOSSES ARE SCORED BY WAR INDUSTRIALS IN THE NEW YORK MARKET

Uncertain Foreign Outlook Drops Prices 10 to 20 Points on the Week.

SELLING IS ACTIVE

Values Touch Low Point Since January in Yesterday's Decline.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 22.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"It still remains to be seen what the future course of the stock market will be, and that cannot be safely judged at the moment. Perhaps what disconcerted Wall street most of all, when the President sent his ultimatum to Germany, was the discovery that the expected shock was non-existent. It was in the natural order of things for the stock market to pass into a 'war panic,' and prices did decline with more or less rapidity. But a scrutiny of results at the end of the day pretty conclusively proved two things—first, that the investing public, whose mood and attitude governs the longer movement of the markets, were not selling; second, that the well-known investment shares, whose values are the measures of real conditions, had practically not been dealt in at all, and had suffered only slight declines.

"The break in prices had affected those familiar footballs of speculation, the 'war industrials,' which are as ready to fall on rumors of peace negotiatons as on the hint of withdrawal of our Ambassador from Berlin. The speculators who sold down even these stocks on Wednesday, were not entirely sure whether their own sales were based on the State Department's note to Germany, or on the hint of a purchasing agent for the allies, that munitions purchased in America might be reduced.

The Market Recovers.

"This being so, a recovery next day was inevitable, and it occurred exactly as it has occurred a dozen other times in the past six months. As a war market, the display was certainly disappointing.

"To old inhabitants of the Stock Exchange it recalled the day after war had been declared on Spain in 1898. All Wall street stood around to witness the spectacular collapse, and nothing happened. After a period of tedious activity the speculators timidly began to test the market on the side of rising prices, and forthwith the upward movement began which, with occasional relapses and ocasional spells of inactivity, lasted pretty nearly throughout the Spanish war.

"Now analogies are highly dangerous in matters of this sort. Spain and Germany are two different antagonists, and the war of 1898 could not, under the worst of circumstances, have been in the class with the present conflict. Nevertheless, it is not without interest to recall the three reasons later assigned by the financial community for the market's action of that year. The actual break with Spain had been long expected, foreshadowed, even discounted in prices. The underlying economic situation in this country was exceedingly sound. Finally, the subconscious financial mind did not believe that the war itself could be disastrous.

The Foreign Outlook.

"There is at least some food for reflection in that other episode. The question, what the actual consequences of a break with Germany would be, is a matter of conjecture. There are complications at home and abroad, which the mere fact that armies and fleets cannot meet one another would not entirely remove. But, on the other hand, Stock Exchange prices have certainly been discounting something since the beginning of January, and there can be no question as to the country's economic soundness. The financial markets will strike the balance of all three considerations.

"They will also necessarily be influenced by the ebb and flow of financial belief as to the attitude of Germany itself. It is still possible, notwithstanding the Holtzendorffs and Reventlows, that the intelligence of the German people can be reached at this stage of the neutral, outside world's denunciation of the German navy's madness, and that a break with the United States may be averted by the German nation itself. But the world knows too little nowadays of what is really happening in Germany to be sure of anything.

"Final stock prices showed violent declines on the week. Yesterday's market recorded losses of 5 to 10 points on many issues."

LONDON REVIEW

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 22.—It is too early as yet, in the city's judgment, to predict the outcome of the latest note to Germany. London is watching the position with the profoundest interest, but maintaining comparative silence, recognizing that President Wilson's task is already difficult enough, without hasty forecasts regarding it from another country. But this does not prevent unanimous expression of opinion that your Government's peremptory demand for observance of the recognized laws of naval warfare is both sound in matter and courageous in manner.

The financial outlook is fairly satisfactory. In particular, the recent severe depreciation of French exchange is receiving careful attention. The problem will most likely be solved on the lines of large credits to be established on Paris account, both here and in America, and this combined with release of gold for export by the Bank of France. Any credits established in New York, however, will presumably be secured by collateral. Our exchequer bonds are selling well, but longer-dated loans are unquestionably hampered by the new income tax arrangements.

The crisis in our Cabinet, though grave enough, is regarded by financial London as only a passing incident; because, however much the Cabinet may be divided, the nation is united. Opponents of the Government have insufficiently recognized the Cabinet's delicate problems, both with the allies and with neutral nations.

While the Cabinet has not been vigorous enough concerning the organization of our resources, it has been also too much inclined to reserve all powers and organization for Government departments, instead of freely employing general business talent.

The chief problem of compulsory service manifestly consists in the difficulty of combining adequate efficiency in navy or army with maintenance of our industrial and financial power, having regard not merely to our own responsibilities, but responsibility of financing our allies. This problem will be solved by the business men themselves. The outcome of the crisis will probably be for the best, with even more vigorous prosecution of the war.

It is said, very positively, that evidence still increases, through the city's channels of information, of both social and financial distress in Germany.

National Bank of Commerce shares sold 4 points lower on the local Stock Exchange yesterday, transfers being recorded at $105.50 to $104, compared with sales Thursday at $108.50. As trading closed best bids were $103.50 and offers $104.50. Other bank and trust shares were about steady as compared with yesterday's call.

United Railways 4s sold a sharp fraction lower between sessions on the transfer of $8000 worth at $60. That price was bid for more as the session ended, with offers at $60.12½. United Railways stocks were inactive, but about steady on the quotations recorded.

The break in the Wall street market made buyers cautious in trading in stocks influenced by word-order business, and Chicago Railways Equipment was offered 1 point lower at $101, without bids. Wagner Electric stock was about $4 a share lower on offers at $244, without bids. Bonds were steady on the issues mentioned.

CATTLE VALUES IRREGULAR ON WEEK'S TRADING

Poor Grades Are Lower While Good Offers Are Firm; Sheep in Demand.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	12,575	9,773	10,397
Hogs	54,863	45,707	38,871
Sheep	8,115	9,505	8,696
Horses & mules	4,114	3,194	5,273

Cattle receipts were slightly heavier last week. The market did not suffer to any material extent as a result. Buyers were in the market at all times and they wanted the beef, but simply took the opportunity afforded them to cut prices. They demanded a 10c discount on the medium grades, but were unable to tamper with the choice steers above $9.00. The best steers on sale was a small drove of $10.00 beeves. Choice to prime yearlings sold for $9.85. There were plenty of steers above the $9.00 line, but the bulk ranged from $7.75 to $8.75.

Vealers topped at $11.25 early, but late $10.75 was the best price paid. Market was about steady with the previous week. Stockers and feeders sold steady, and with a strong demand for the choice grades prices soared to the high point of the year. Best grades brought $8.35, with the bulk from $6.75 to $7.75. She-stuff sold steady to strong. The clearance for the session was thorough.

Southern Cattle Strong.

Texas fed cattle reached $8.75, the top for the year, while the bulk sold from $7.50 to $8.50. Some fed stags sold for $7.50, with a load of 1330-pound cattle, on the oxen order, at $7.80. There was a strong demand for these, and it was evident that sellers could have handled more had they been available.

Mixed classes sold generally steady. On fed, medium grade steers the market was 10c to 15c lower. But aside from these it was a steady affair. Canners sold from $4.50 to $4.75. Some Alabama fed steers at $7.30 was the best in the steer line from this section. There was a thorough clearance for the week.

A moderate supply of hogs was received. However, the market was on the decline most of the week and prices at the close showed a loss from the close of the previous week of around 25c on the best grades and 25c to 50c on those that were not so good. Hogs with both weight and quality were very scarce, and they were the ones that the buyers were looking for and were willing to pay highest prices for.

At the opening of the week the top of the market was $10, and the bulk went at $9.70@9.90, but later the top was down to $9.80 and the bulk went at $9.50@9.70. Quite a lot of plain mixed hogs sold at $9.35@9.55, and the old rough sows and stags went at $9@9.25. Southern hogs, unless they were guaranteed to be strictly corn fed, were very poor sale.

Pigs and lights suffered more than the hogs, with a little more weight, as it took good grade lights under 165 lbs. to bring $9.15@9.60, while the fair grades went at $8.50@9, best pigs $8.10@8.50, fair to medium $7.40@8, and the poor grades $6.50@7.25.

Sheep Supply Is Small.

Wool lambs from Colorado went at $11.40@11.65, if strictly good, others sold at $10.50@11.25, clipped lambs $9.50@9.75, and springs $12@16. Spring lambs in order to sell satisfactory must be good and weigh not less than 45 lbs. Buyers were not at all anxious for lambs that weighed much above 80 lbs. No yearlings were offered.

Sheep were scarce all week and the good kinds hard to find, even in small lots. Best wool sheep brought $9.50@9.75, fair $9.25@9.50, clipped mutton sheep $7.25@7.75, wool bucks $7.50, and clipped ones $6@6.50. Choppers and thin sheep of all kinds sold very irregular.

COTTON FUTURES SLIGHTLY LOWER; TRADE IS QUIET

Foreign Outlook Makes Buyers Cautious During Last Week's Markets.

The cotton market was narrow last week. The range of prices for July contracts in New York was not wider than 15 points, the lowest being 11.94c and the highest 12.09c. The last close, Thursday, was 12@12.01c.

Something unexpected, apparently, is needed to move the future cotton markets, which seem to have discounted the possibility of a break with Germany. It would be hard to say what the continuance of the trouble in Mexico would mean to the cotton market. But a conflict with Germany might have either a depressing or a stimulating effect on prices. There is, of course, a certain amount of general depression that accompanies a serious break, and there is a drawing in of money that would otherwise be available for loans, etc. There is danger of even the small number of cotton carrying ships being reduced on account of other and more pressing need, and this would probably affect the price of cotton more than any other influence. Then there is the danger of Germany's destruction to commerce being increased by no further need for care regarding neutral America.

On the other hand, an open break with Germany would mean instant and active preparation for war, even thought it might not be expected to follow, and this preparation would require large lots of uniforms, tents, wagon covers, webbing for belts, extra clothing of all kinds and numberless small articles that are made of cotton, to say nothing of an increased quantity of fiber for ammunition.

The New Crop Acreage.

The Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau says under date of April 19: "Planting cotton began in the more northern part of the region and progressed satisfactorily. In the central part it is coming up to a good stand. In the southern part of the area some replanting is necessary on account of frost damage of last week. Throughout nearly all of the central part of the region, and in parts of Texas, work of replanting is being delayed on account of dry weather."

Cotton exports for the six days ending Thursday (Friday being a holiday), were 80,377 bales, compared with 115,238 last year. The total for the season was 4,289,029 bales, compared with 7,049,493 last year. There are 14 weeks left in this season, and it seems reasonably sure that enough cotton will be exported to bring the total to 5,500,000 bales. Stocks at the ports were 1,362,668 bales, compared with 1,426,981 the same day last year.

Spot Cotton Markets.

Quotations in the principal spot markets of the country are as follows: Galveston quiet, middling at 12.35c; New Orleans steady, 11.88c; Mobile quiet, 11.75c; Savannah steady, 11⅞c; Charleston steady, 11⅝c; Norfolk steady, 11.75c; Wilmington steady, 11½c; Houston steady, 12.25c; Augusta steady, 11.75c; Memphis steady, 12c; Little Rock quiet, 12.25c.

The demand for spot cotton is fairly good, with desirable lots sold at a little above quotations. Sellers of cotton are not making sacrifices to effect sales.

Strained foreign relations brought about material declines yesterday in the value of wheat on the Merchants Exchange. Prices closed unsettled, 2c to 2⅛c net lower, with May at $1.08 and July $1.08⅜@1.08½. Corn lost ⅝c to ⅞c, and oats ½c to ¾c.

Liquidating sales, which were general in the wheat pit throughout the day, met with no active demand until just before the close. Week-end evening up of trades led to a moderate rally during the last 15 minutes, but in the main sentiment continued bearish, despite prospects of a good decrease in the United States visible supply total on Monday.

The action of a majority of wheat traders seemed to depend chiefly on the course of the New York stock market, in so far as stocks appeared to gauge diplomatic conditions, especially the crisis with Germany. To some extent, however, the Kansas State crop report, suggesting a yield 26,000,000 bushels larger than in 1915, became effective as a cause of lower prices.

Unfavorable weather for the seeding of wheat in the Northwest was more or less ignored by dealers, except as tending somewhat to check the force of downturns in the market. Adverse field reports from the soft winter states were also for the moment given scant notice, although one well-known expert was out with a forecast of less than half a crop this season in Illinois and Indiana.

Corn gave way with wheat. Declines, however, resulted in persistent buying on the part of strong interests. Oats received fair support, owing to the purchase of 600,000 bushels in Chicago for export. The market, nevertheless, showed evident weakness on account of the setbacks to the value of other grain, and because of the excellent crop outlook for oats.

The Foreign Situation.

Never since the war started has the foreign situation, from the wheat market standpoint, proved more complex. On the other hand, should the United States be drawn into the conflict, the question whether we would be able to export our supplies to Europe becomes an open one. On the other hand, with the United States involved, there is every reason to believe that other neutral nations, which have suffered from Germany's submarine campaign, would very shortly join the allies. Several close students of the situation predict that should this happen, Turkey and Bulgaria would very quickly be disposed of, or would realize the hopelessness of their position and sue for peace.

They claim that this not only would open the Dardanelles to Russian wheat shipments, but would place Austria in a vulnerable position, and as she is on unusually friendly terms with the United States, she might very shortly forsake her ally, Germany. With Germany in a position where she would have to fight every big nation in the world, the hopelessness of her task would no doubt appeal immediately to her people. In which case a peace settlement would be in order, or a possible revolution be precipitated.

For these reasons many wheat traders believe that should the United States be drawn into the conflict, lower wheat values would be inevitable, and they have been favoring the selling side on the rallies, despite the poor outlook for the domestic winter wheat crop, and chances of late seeding in the northwest; as even with a materially lower wheat yield than last year, the carry-over from the last record-breaking crop will be sufficient to lift the total wheat in the country next fall to close to 1,000,000,000 bushels, last year's yield, even if the next harvest should be materially reduced, as present official reports indicate it will.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash wheat was 1c to 2c lower and in fair demand.

Cash corn ½c to 1¼c lower and in fair inquiry on the decline.

Cash oats ½c to 1c down and in fair demand.

Fruits.

STRAWBERRIES—Lower, partly on account of larger offerings, but chiefly because of poorer quality and condition of the bulk of the stock on sale. Three cars Louisiana berries on market selling (but not cleaned up) at range of 30c per 24-pint case for moldy and leaky cases up to $2 for fancy berries. Express receipts from Alabama somewhat soft and moldy ranged from $2 to $3 per 24-pint case and 4-quart cases sold at $1.50. Mississippi pint cases sold at $1.25 to $1.50.

POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF REAL ESTATE NEWS

BY BERRY MOORE

NEW APARTMENT IN WEST END TO COST $150,000

Charles F. Levy of Hub Furniture Co. to Erect 15-Suite Building at Clara and Waterman—To Have Many Novel Features.

SPRING ACTIVITY IN REALTY IS ON

Limit Building in North Parkview Sold—Lincoln Structure in Northwest Part of St. Louis Disposed Of.

Apartment plans and sales of buildings of that type form the dominant feature of the market in both North and South St. Louis, according to announcements of real estate agents.

Charles F. Levy, president of the Hub Furniture Co., has purchased the southwest corner of Clara and Waterman avenue, and will erect on the site an apartment building at a cost of $150,000.

The price paid for the site, which was owned by the F. H. & C. B. Gerhart Real Estate Co. and the Gehner estate, was $25,000. It has a frontage on Clara of 175 feet by a depth on Waterman of 140 feet.

The building, to be three stories, will comprise 15 apartments, ranging in size from seven to 10 rooms. Each will have sun, sleeping and open porches, and three bathrooms, which will be elaborately appointed.

Individual Phone Booths.

The apartments as contemplated will be attractively grouped and will introduce some novel features, including individual telephone booths. The rentals will run from $125 to $175 a month.

The site, which was purchased by Levy at the instance of the Weisels-Gerhart company, is in the heart of the choicest and most rapidly developing apartment house districts in the West End. The Claridge, occupying the northwest corner of Clara and Waterman avenues, was completed about eight months ago at a cost of $125,000. All the apartments in this building are under three-year leases, providing for a monthly rental of $125.

The price paid for the southwest corner of Clara and Waterman avenues, the site acquired for the proposed building, almost twice that paid for the corner was occupied by the Claridge, only 40 feet smaller.

As agent, Jos. A. Bardenheier, in conjunction with W. J. Bartling, sold the Limit apartments at 6251 Delmar boulevard to Josephine Mueller, for $45,000.

The building, which is just inside the city limits, is three stores, containing six apartments of five rooms and sun parlor, and has a garage with provision for four machines.

The sale was made for Herman Alles, who recently erected the building.

Nine-Room Residence Sold.

Messrs. Bardenheier and Bartling, in this conjunction, also disposed of a 9-room residence and a two-family flat located respectively at 2116 S. Grand avenue and at 1330 and 1334 La Salle street. The value at which they were transferred was not disclosed.

The Limit apartment building is in North Parkview, the ground occupied by it having been purchased at the auction sale held in this addition three years ago.

The northwest corner of Manchester and Gibson avenues, improved with a two-story brick building, embracing a store and flats, was sold by William Hertling Jr. to the Mary Francis Realty Co. for $40,000. The sale was promoted by the William S. Drozda Realty Co. There is a two-story building on the corner of Manchester, comprising a store and six flats, and a building at 4159-71A Hertling place, having 14 suites of three and four rooms. The lot is 125x187 feet.

Ample Transportation.

The location is two blocks south of Chouteau avenue and one block west of the Sarah car line loop, which furnishes ample transportation facilities for this district.

Other sales included a 10-room house and a lot on Waterman avenue. The house, which is at 5527 Waterman avenue, was acquired by Mrs. John B. Hughes, for $12,500. It has 10 rooms, finished in hardwood and has a steam-heating plant. The premises include a garage for five machines.

This sale was effected by the Benj. F. Altheimer Jr. Realty Co.

The lot, 30x130 feet, located on the south side of Waterman avenue, 350 feet west of Waterman Way, was purchased by R. J. Graham as a site for an eight-room residence, construction of which will start soon.

This sale was made by John S. Blake & Bro. Real Estate Co., in connection with Charles E. Bradley, making one of several concluded by the Blake company in this district during the last month.

Spring Demand Sets In.

The spring demand has fairly set in in this section, which, according to Blake, will be one of the leading centers of activity in the West End. This firm has several other deals pending for property in this locality, which in all probability will be wound up before the close of the coming month.

J. H. Pueser and Chas. H. Gundlach sold the recently constructed Lincoln Building, at Florissant and Alice avenues, to William H. Rover and Miss Sophia E. Rover, represented by H. W. Herwick. The price paid was between $20,000 and $25,000.

The Lincoln Building has three stores on the ground floor and five handsome office suites, together with some apartments, on the second floor, the floor plan of the building being especially attractive.

This building was erected by Gundlach about eight months ago, and his real estate office occupies the corner store

THE recently elected officers and directors of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange will be installed at the annual banquet to be held May 15.

C. M. McDonald will head the board the succeeding year, with R. D. Kaime as vice president, John W. Dowling, treasurer, W. W. Butts, secretary, and J. B. Seibertz, assistant secretary. The new directors are Hugh H. Stewart, B. F. Dickmann, W. E. Caulfield, Clarkson Carpenter, John W. Dowling and W. W. Butts. McDonald, who succeeds the late Charles Z. Trembley as president, served successively as secretary, treasurer and vice president of the Exchange, while Kaime has been a member of the board for two terms. Dowling is a former secretary. As secretary and assistant secretary, Butts and J. B. Seibertz succeed themselves.

It is understood that the new board has an ambitious program, which will be outlined at the banquet.

PASTEUR INSTITUTE LEASES BUILDING AT GRAND AND BELL

Corner Is Improved With 15-Room Residence and Offices—Option to Buy Taken.

The Pasteur Institute, of which Dr. R. H. B. Gradwohl is president, has signed a long term lease, with option to purchase, on the southeast corner of Grand and Bell avenues. This corner is improved with a 15-room residence and physicians' offices.

The lot is 70x150 feet and is owned by Dr. Julius C. Erhardt. The lease was negotiated by the Ben Altheimer Jr. Realty Co.

This firm has made several large deals in Grand avenue property recently. It sold the southeast corner of Grand avenue and Morgan street for the Drummond estate to Felix Scalzo for $85,000. It also closed the lease on the property 400x150 feet adjoining the southwest corner of Grand and Morgan upon which the Palladium skating rink is now situated. Another deal was the sale of a lot 100x225 feet at 2729 North Grand avenue to Dr. Oliver O'Bar.

BUYS HOME IN THE COUNTY

President of Net and Twine Company Plans Improvements.

The McCourt home on the Warson road, just south of the Litzinger road, was sold last week to President Adams of the Adams Net and Twine Co., for a home. This county home site has 18 acres of fine soil, with fruit; a seven-room bungalow, with barns, garage, chicken and pigeon houses.

Deer Creek, a picturesque stream, flows through the place. Adams plans extensive improvements. J. Richardson Thomas, sales agent of the Benjamin F. Thomas Realty Co., represented both McCourt and Adams.

NEW INSURANCE AGENCY

South Side Company to Take Over Yeckel Realty Business.

The South Side Insurance Agency was incorporated last week. The officers are Louis F. Yeckel, Oscar W. Earickson and Otto F. Leffler.

The new agency will take over the entire insurance business of the Louis F. Yeckel Realty and Agency Co., which will confine its activities to the real estate and loan business.

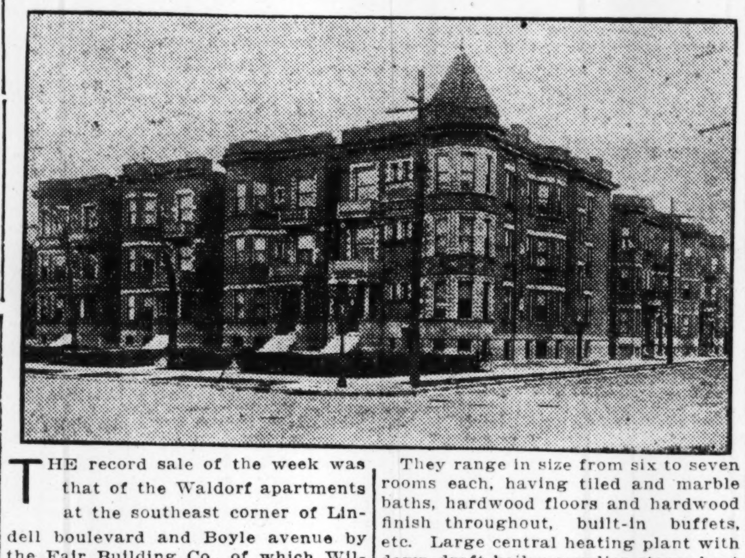
BUSINESS COLLEGE GETS LEASE

Jones & Henderson to Occupy Fourth Floor of Olivia Building.

The Jones and Henderson Business College, 3608 Olive street has leased for a long term, the fourth floor of the Olivia Building at the northwest corner of Grand avenue and Windsor place and will take possession June 1.

The premises leased occupy space 46x108 feet. The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. closed the lease for account of Nathan Frank, owner of the building.

Lindell Boulevard Apartments That Were Sold for $175,000



THE record sale of the week was that of the Waldorf apartments at the southeast corner of Lindell boulevard and Boyle avenue by the Fair Building Co., of which William Hambley is president, to a nonresident client of J. I. Epstein, for $175,000. The Waldorf, which comprises 24 apartments and which are in the heart of the New Cathedral parish, form an attractive group.

They range in size from six to seven rooms each, having tiled and marble baths, hardwood floors and hardwood finish throughout, built-in buffets, etc. Large central heating plant with down-draft boiler supplies steam heat for the entire property. The apartments have a frontage of 130 feet on Lindell boulevard by a depth of 213 feet along Boyle avenue.

The annual rental of the apartment is $15,000.

THREE OF 20 BUNGALOWS JUST PUT UNDER WAY REPORTED SOLD

West Lewis Park Improvements, Under Direction of James A. Davie, Find Quick Favor.

Although work on them has just been started, three of the 20 bungalows being built by James A. Davie in West Lewis Park have been sold.

The bungalows are of different size and affect the true California type, with the most up-to-date ideas introduced in them.

As president of the Rannels Investment Co., Davie built many bungalows in Northwest St. Louis, these being in most instances sold before completion.

WESTERN UNION MAKES LEASE

The Western Union Telegraph Co. has taken a lease of quarters at 1807 Olive street for a branch station which is to be established to meet the increasing demands of this district. The lease was made by Isaac T. Cook, represented by Grosvenor Bell, for Dr. Alexander Dumenil, the owner, represented by the J. E. Kaime Real Estate Co.

Improvement on South Jefferson.

Alterations will be started tomorrow on the building on the northwest corner of Jefferson avenue and Crittenden street. This property was purchased by the Haase Realty Co., from the J. H. Gebken Improvement Co. It is planned to remodel the building into an up-to-date funeral chapel at an outlay of about $15,000.

Edwin Moll Buys a Home.

Benjamin F. Thomas sold last week the home of Mrs. Carrie S. Ellison on the Laclede Station road to Edwin Moll. It is an eight-room house, with city conveniences on a lot 80x275, filled with flowers, shrubs and fruit. Moll intends to raise high-grade chickens and homer pigeons.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

20 LOTS SOLD IN WEST WALNUT MANOR IN WEEK

Majority of Purchasers in Northern Addition Said to Have Building Plans.

David P. Leahy is jubilant over the outlook for West Walnut Manor, which is being handled by the David P. Leahy House and Home Co. of which he is president.

Upward of 20 lots were sold in the addition last week and the majority of the purchasers have building plans, Leahy stated to a Post-Dispatch reporter. He also reports the sale of several bungalows which were erected by his company. These are being sold at special prices and on monthly payments.

Two corners in the addition were among those which changed hands, the buyers having plans for business buildings which are incidental to a rapidly developing section, Leahy says.

Approximately 1000 houses have been built in West Walnut, which comprises 2400 lots and the upbuilding of which was inaugurated by Leahy only three years ago. This he regards as a phenomenal record in view of the adverse conditions marking that period. The growth of the manor, which has set the pace for that section of the city, is attributed by Leahy to the St. Louis and Jennings Railway, which forms an extension of the Union avenue line from Florissant and Hamilton avenues. The Jennings line was recently extended from Jennings station to Edgewood, near Suburban Garden, and it is intimated that the line ultimately will be extended to downtown St. Louis, with a 3-cent fare. West Walnut Manor is the larger of a chain of subdivisions laid out by Leahy in northwest St. Louis.

COMPANY BEGINS PLANS TO BUILD 20-STORY HOTEL

Avenue Building Co. Increases Capitalization From $2000 to $1,100,000.

A notice of the increase in capitalization of the Avenue Building Co. from $2000 to $1,100,000, with $898,000 of the increase paid up, has been filed in the office of the Recorder of Deeds.

H. H. Hodgdon holds 3980 shares of the common stock and 4994 first preferred. One share each of first preferred is held by Daniel K. Catlin, John D. Davis, Ernest W. Stix, Aaron Fuller, Tom W. Bennett and Lloyd P. Wells.

Tom W. Bennett, president of the Mortgage Trust Co., told a Post-Dispatch reporter that the increase in capitalization was for the purpose of building the projected new 20-story hotel at the southeast corner of Ninth street and Washington avenue. Hodgdon, in whose name most of the stock appears, is assistant treasurer of the company, and is representing the company in the matter.

FRANK L. DITTMEIER R. E. CO.

The Frank L. Dittmeier Real Estate Co. reports sale of 4114-14A-16-16A and also 4118-18A-20-20A De Tonty street. Each building has 40x140 feet, with all street and sidewalk improvements. Sale was for account of De Tonty Realty Co. to Frederick H. Portmann and Louisa L. Portmann, his wife, who were represented by M. Weinberg of the Frank L. Dittmeier Real Estate Co. Purchase was for investment. The Portmanns paid $25,000. Mr. and Mrs. Portmann gave as part pay a residence in Lindell place, known as 2908 University street. Portmann was allowed $12,500 for this property, making a total transaction of $37,500. The Frank L. Dittmeier Real Estate Co. will have charge of the buildings on De Tonty street.

Also 4932 Margartta avenue, a two-story frame residence, arranged as three large rooms on the first floor and two rooms on the second floor, including porcelain bath, for P. H. Tamplin and wife to a client; price paid $2500.

Also 2344 Whittemore place, a three-story brick residence of four large rooms on first floor, including porcelain bath, four large rooms and bath on the second floor and three rooms on the third floor, including all modern improvements. Property sold for Mrs. C. T. Wallace and wife to H. B. Chester and Helen Chester, his wife; price paid $6000. Purchasers will occupy part of the home and will rent the balance.

Also 35 feet of ground on the west line of Belleview avenue, 195 feet north of College avenue, by a depth of 135 feet for the American Real Estate, Building and Investment Co. to a client of the Borders Realty Co. Price paid, $525.

Also 30 feet of ground on the east line of of Clarence avenue, between Penrose street and Carter avenue, for the Federal Investment Co. to a client of M. Weinberg, who has given this office a contract to build a modern, two-story brick building, arranged as flat of four and five rooms. The investment will aggregate $6000.

This office also has disposed of nearly 6500 feet of ground in the O'Fallon Park district, and reports loans aggregating $24,650 in the last week.

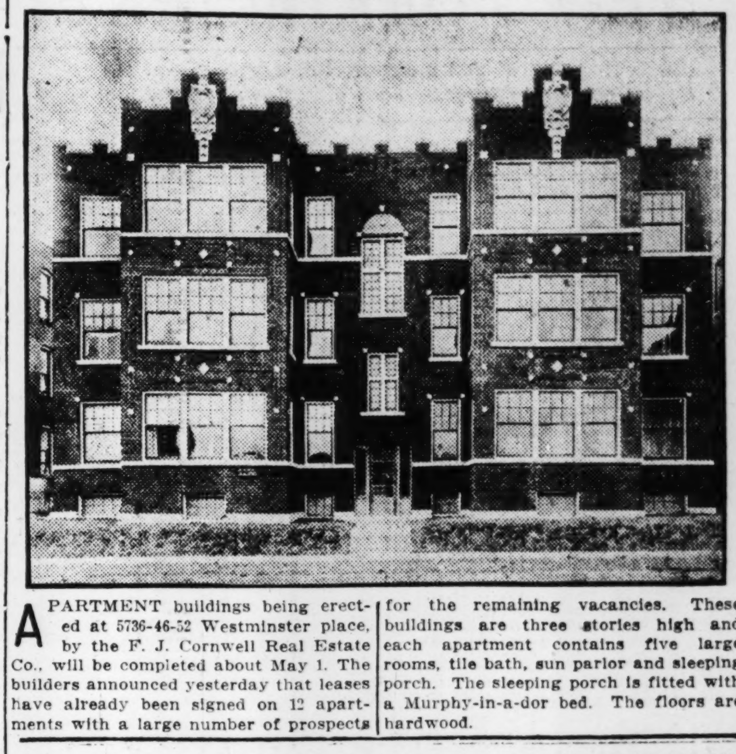
STRODTMAN & STRODTMAN.

Strodtman & Strodtman report the following sales: A lot 30x128 feet, west side of Second street, between Dock and Buchanan streets, for a client of A. R. Schollmeyer, to Penrose Investment Co. The purchaser will improve the lot with a one-story warehouse building. A lot 30x128, with five-room frame house, 7057 Mitchell avenue, for Charles A. Johannsen to Levi J. Jones. A lot 30x125 feet on north side of Alcott avenue, between Thekla and Theodore avenues, from Penrose Investment Co. to William F. Kulage. Also 2457 East Arlington avenue, bungalow containing five rooms, reception hall, tile bath and furnace, Holly Real Estate Invetment Co. to Louis Scharrill.

BARNGROVE & SPECHT.

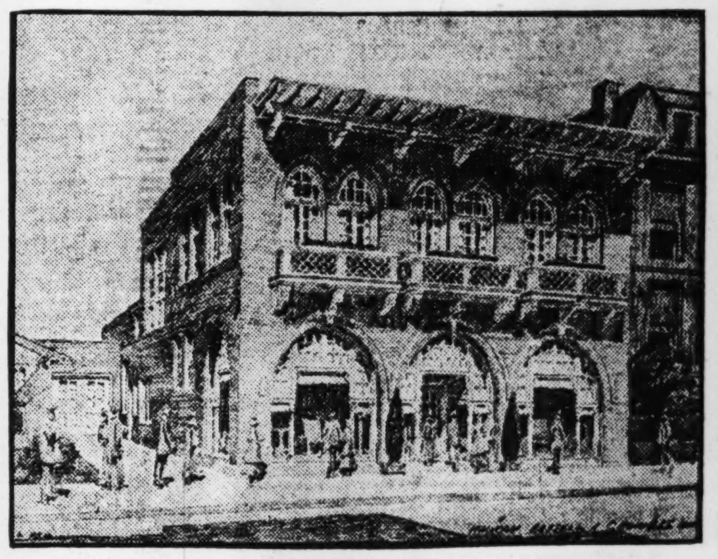
Report sale of double flat, 4211-11A-13-13A Botanical avenue. This flat is one of the first of three rooms to be built in this city having the sun parlor feature. It is on a lot fronting 50 feet on the north line of Botanical avenue by a depth of about 123 feet. Sale was for account of Eduard H. Wellenbock to a client of Barngrove & Specht. The seller was represented by Wm. J. Abbott Realty Co. and the purchaser by Fred W. Curl of Barngrove & Specht.

Three-Story Apartments Nearly Finished in the West End



APARTMENT buildings being erected at 5736-46-52 Westminster place, by the F. J. Cornwell Real Estate Co., will be completed about May 1. The builders announced yesterday that leases have already been signed on 12 apartments with a large number of prospects for the remaining vacancies. These buildings are three stories high and each apartment contains five large rooms, tile bath, sun parlor and sleeping porch. The sleeping porch is fitted with a Murphy-in-a-dor bed. The floors are hardwood.

Artistic Building Being Erected at Grand and Washington



THE Lucks-Orwig Decorating Co. is erecting a three-story building on the south side of Washington avenue, near Grand, which is attracting much attention. It is in the Italian style of architecture and promises to outrival the most artistic small buildings in the city.

The building has been designed especially for the decorating company, by Mauran, Russell & Crowell.

The Lucks-Orwig Decorating Co. was incorporated in April, 1912, with H. M. Orwig secretary, it succeeding Lucks Bros. It is now located at 4398 Olive street.

The site was purchased through J. H. Farish & Co., which projected the building and which has been a factor in the development of this section, especially central Grand avenue.

NORTH PARKVIEW SALE ENDS; AUCTION TOTAL IS $210,404

61 Lots Disposed of Yesterday and Owners Decide to Let No More Go at Ruling Prices—Highest Figure Was $82 Per Foot.

The auction at North Parkview closed yesterday with the sale of 61 lots for a total of $110,404. This, with the 44 lots disposed of Saturday of last week, makes the aggregate $210,404.

A few of the purchasers of these lots have building plans, but the majority, according to John S. Harris, manager of the auction, bought as a speculation, as extremely low prices prevailed throughout the sale.

The highest sale was lot 12, block 1, at $82 per front foot. The lowest was lot 20, block 10, $15 per front foot.

The Delmar Investment Co. paid for lot 4, in block 1, fronting on Delmar boulevard, $77 a front foot, while the northeast corner of Delmar and Westgate avenue, 104x125 feet, was also knocked down for $77 a front foot. The identity of the buyer in the last instance was not disclosed. Incidntally, block 1 is bounded by Delmar boulevard on the south and by Von Versen avenue on the north, it being the southern block of the addition.

F. J. Cornwell & Sons purchased four lots in block 1, fronting on Von Versen avenue for $56 a front foot. These were the highest prices recorded at yesterday's sale, while corner lots in the addition were sold as low as $25 a front foot.

Chain of Apartments Likely.

It is understood that the Cornwells who are among the most extensive apartment builders, will shortly begin the erection on their newly acquired ground of a chain of high-class multi-family buildings.

Several choice lots were yesterday knocked down to Sam Hamburg Jr. for clients of the Rosenbaum-Hauschulte Real Estate Co., with which he is identified.

There remain unsold in the North Parkview addition 156 lots, but the owners, Harris says, decline to further sacrifice the property. Louis A. Cella, president of the Delmar Improvement Co., owner of the ground, Harris said last night, is on the verge of forming a company to build up the unsold lots on the south side of the addition with high-class apartments.

The Dyas Realty Co., of which D. L. Dyas is president, bought three lots at the initial sale which, it is announced, will be improved with large apartment buildings.

The sale yesterday started at 2 p. m. and closed at 6:30 p. m.

Harris says that the results, while in favor of the public, did not displease the owners; however, rather than take the average prices received for the unsold property, the owners thought it to their advantage to divide the property among themselves at a private auction which will be held in their offices sometime this week, the bidders to consist of the owners only.

Yesterday's Buyers.

HEATH ACQUIRES BUSINESS OF THE CASE-HEATH CO.

Firm Change Due to One of "Fastest Team" Arranging to Enter Eastern Realty Field.

Chauncey P. Heath has bought the realty holdings, business and good will of the Case-Heath Real Estate Co., of which he was vice president, and under his direction the company will continue to operate as heretofore.

W. Lyman Case, who was president of the Case-Heath Co., has completed plans to enter the real estate business in the East.

Case and Heath, before combining, worked together in a big real estate office. They were known as the "fastest team" on the local real estate track, their deals being often quite impressive. As the Case-Heath Real Estate Co. they have been equally successful, some of the largest deals of 1916 having been engineered by them.

The new firm is a member of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange and of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges. As heretofore, it will conduct a general real estate and financial agency. The office of the company, of which T. E. Horner will continue to be secretary, is at 1006 Chestnut street.

SOUTH SIDE TRUST CO. TO OPEN FOR BUSINESS TOMORROW

New Financial Institution Will Do General Banking at Broadway and Pestalozzi Street.

The South Side Trust Co., Broadway and Pestalozzi street, will open tomorrow with a capital of $200,000 and a surplus of $20,000 cash.

"We have every reason to believe that we will have a large clientele," O. J. Gossrau, the secretary and treasurer, said. "There are many business concerns in this district that find it inconvenient to bank downtown, and we are confident that we will receive at least $250,000 in deposits our opening day. We are specializing on savings accounts, which will receive 3 per cent interest; time certificates, six months, 3 per cent interest; and 12 months' time certificates, 4 per cent interest. The savings department will be open every Monday evening from 5 o'clock to 7:30."

The officers of the new institution are: A. C. F. Meyer, president; Henry Menzenwerth, vice president; B. G. Brinkman, vice president; Otto J. Gossrau, secretary and treasurer. Board of Directors, Eberhard Anheuser, Adolphus Busch III, August A. Busch, B. G. Brinkman, F. C. Hahn, R. A. Huber, O. J. Gossrau, Theo. Lange, Henry Menzenwerth, A. C. F. Meyer and L. F. Yeckel.

EFFORT BEING MADE TO HAVE FLORISSANT AVENUE IMPROVED

Jennings and Ferguson Improvement Associations Co-operating in Campaign.

The Jennings-Woodland Improvement Association is attempting to have Florissant avenue improved from the city limits through Jennings to Ferguson. A special Road Committee of the association is co-operating with a similar committee of Ferguson. A campaign of education and publicity is being carried on and later it is proposed to circulate petitions among the taxpayers to be submitted to the County Court.

It has been decided by a board of arbitration appointed by the County Superintendent of Schools that the Jennings School District be divided as proposed, but defeated, at the recent school election. The new district embraces West Walnut Manor.

THREE LARGE STORES AT ALICE AND FLORISSANT AVENUES SOLD

John H. Pueser Realty Co. and Charles Gundlach Close Important Realty Transaction.

The business corner at 5371-77 Florissant avenue, fronting 82 feet on Florissant and 125 feet on Alice avenue, has been sold by the John H. Pueser Realty Co., in co-operation with Charles Gundlach, to William H. and Sophia E. Roever, clients of H. W. Herweck.

This corner is improved with three large stores having plate-glass fronts, erected last fall by Charles Gundlach. On the second floor are eight office rooms, with hot and cold water in each, and a flat of four rooms and bath. It is equipped with a steam-heating plant and electrical fixtures throughout. The property is under a rental of $3300 a year.

Vacant property adjoining this on Alice avenue will be improved with a four-family apartment.

Method of Shipping Eggs for Hatching

In shipping eggs for hatching purposes the packing must be more carefully done than in shipping market eggs There are almost as many ways of packing eggs for hatching as there are men who pack them, but a simple and inexpensive method is related by a writer in the Kansas Farmer.

"For one setting of 15 eggs I take a common market basket called one peck in capacity," he says. "I line the bottom of the basket with excelsior then take a handful of the same material and wrap it around the egg, making a tight wad of it, about the size of a large orange. I do this with all of the eggs, then pack the wads tightly in the basket, packing some excelsior on the sides and ends of the basket so as to keep the wads from being shaken around, anad finish off by putting a layer of excelsior on top of the wads. Then I sew muslin tightly over all and label and address the package. For three settings of eggs I use a half-bushel basket and proceed in the same manner as with the one setting

"Since the parcel post system has gone into effect I have shipped many eggs for hatching that way, but I use more excelsior when I ship by mail than when by express. Packed in this manner the eggs invariably reach their destination in good condition, and I have shipped them to the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

"In cold weather I wrap a piece of paper around each egg before wrapping them in excelsior. Tissue paper is the kind to use for this purpose. The addition of the paper to the excelsior is to guard the eggs against chilliness while en route."

PURINA CHICKEN CHOWDER

Chicken Chowder Makes Chesty Chix

Something more than grain feed is necessary to properly mature a chick. Purina Chicken Chowder is a scientific combination of the necessary ingredients, such as linseed meal, granulated meat, alfalfa flour, bran, etc. Use with Purina Chick Feed for quick results. Chicks reach the laying period earlier, are stronger and less subject to disease.

Purina Poultry Feeds are sold only in checkerboard bags by leading dealers.

Quisenberry's Answers to Poultry Problems

Feeding Breeding Stock.

Will the corn, wheat and grain ration, with lots of green stuff and water, give better eggs for hatching purposes than soft feeds? I fear I have been using the wrong method with my pen of breeders. I penned them and let them have what they could consume easily of each kind of remains from the kitchen, bread scraps, roast meats, egg shells, etc., also some eggs, as there are always more or less coming from the table of a big hotel. Also give them sour milk and all the green stuff they want. Makes them look mighty fine and lay to beat the band.—A. Mc., Big Spring, Tex.

Your hens no doubt would lay well with such a ration as you are giving them, but am quite sure they would lay more fertile eggs and the eggs would hatch much better, and you would have fewer chicks die in the shell, if you used a ration composed chiefly of wheat, corn and hard grains, or a good commercial scratch grain, compelling the hens to take lots of exercise in scratching for their grain and by giving them an abundance of green food, grit, oyster shell, charcoal and water, or milk if you have it. One feed a day of scraps from the table would perhaps help some. I would separate your breeders from the laying hens and feed the layers as you have been, but feed the breeding stock more hard grains and less soft and fattening foods.

Incubator Problems.

There seems to be a difference of opinion in regard to cooling and turning the eggs during incubation in an incubator. One authority says turn and cool the eggs once a day from 10 to 30 minutes, after the third day; another turns the eggs twice a day and cools them once a day; still another advocates turn and cool them after 24 hours' incubation twice a day for about 15 minutes. tion twice a day for about 15 minutes. The latter seems more to correspond with the hen, nature's way. The manufacturers of incubators give full directions in regard to this, and it is well enough to adhere to them, but why they differ in regard to the process of cooling and turning its not easy to understand.—E. W. D., Vincennes, Ind

This question, like all others, has two sides to it, but from what experience I have had, operating many different kinds of incubators for a number of years, will state that during the hot dry season, I think it advisable to use more or less moisture with any machine, regardless of what the manufacturer may say. When the ground is damp, and when the air seems filled with moisture during the rainy days in the spring months, it is seldom necessary to add moisture to the incubator, providing you have plenty of ventilation in your incubator room. We usually provide moisture by placing a shallow pan of water below the egg trays. Do not place this where it will obstruct any openings or provision which has been made for ventilation. The reason that some incubator companies differ in their recommendation is that they use these questions as talking points in selling their machine, but any of the reliable manufacturers will tell you what has actually proven best in the case of their own machines. We never add moisture until after the third day of incubation and we always discontinue after the eighteenth day. If you supply too much moisture after the chicks begin to pip the eggs, you will prostrate many of them if your temperature is kept at 103 or above. They will then die and stick to the shell even after the egg is practically pipped. This is often caused by excessive moisture. After the chick has broken the shell and begun to use its lungs for breathing, you can kill many of them by an excess of moisture at that time. My experience has been that the eggs should be turned regularly twice a day, following the third day up until the eighteenth day. I think the experiments made by all the experiment stations indicate that the percentage of hatch can be increased by doing this. The eggs should usually be cooled once a day. We regulate the time of cooling by the warmth of the egg. It cannot be regulated by minutes. We simply close our eye and touch the side of the egg to the closed eyelid. If practically all the animal heat seems to have left the egg, we know it is ready to be placed back in the incubator. It will require a longer time for cooling toward the latter part of the hatch than at the beginning, because there is more animal heat in the egg caused by the growth and development of the embryo.

The men who have jobs to give out should be told what you can do through a frank statement in a Situation Want Ad in the Post-Dispatch if you are seeking work or a better position.

STARTING CHICKS AS RECOMMENDED BY QUISENBERRY

Guarding Their Temperature and Giving Them Proper Food the Main Lines of Caution.

By T. E. QUISENBERRY,
Former Director of the Missouri Poultry Experiment Station, Mountain Grove.

Since the advent of the incubator probably more chicks are hatched during April than in any other month in the year. If these chicks can be safely brought through the first three weeks the rest will be comparatively easy.

The first crisis in the life of the newly hatched chick lies in the transfer from incubator to brooder. In this connection there are two dangers to be avoided—(1) the chilling of the chicks while they are being transferred, and (2) having too low a temperature in the brooder. During the first few days of its life the chick is very sensitive to cold. Chilling nearly always results in a stunted chick, if not a dead one.

When the chicks begin to hatch, the interior of the incubator should be darkened by hanging a piece of burlap or other heavy cloth over the front. Otherwise the chicks will crowd to the front and some of them will get trampled to death. The chicks should remain in the incubator for at least 12 hours after the hatch is completed, or about 36 hours from the time the hatch begins.

Fully 24 hours before the chicks are to be transferred the brooder lamp should be started. This will give the brooder time to become thoroughly warmed through, and the operator time to regulate the lamp to the proper temperature. The temperature under the hover should be 100 degrees at the time the chicks are placed in the brooder. This is a slightly higher temperature than is sometimes recommended, but experience has convinced the writer that it is none too high, in view of the fact that the temperature in the incubator at hatching time is 104 to 105 degrees.

If the weather is cool and the chicks are to be carried any appreciable distance, baskets lined with heavy cloth should be used, and the chicks covered with cloth, so as to exclude the outside air as much as possible. The work of transferring is best done about evening. The chicks will then immediately go under the hover and stay there. By the following morning they will be somewhat used to their new quarters and ready for their first food.

Don't Feed Them Too Soon.

Do not make the all too common mistake of feeding the chicks too soon. At the time the chick is hatched it has in its body the whole yolk of the egg from which it came. This yolk is nature's lunch basket," and is intended to supply the chick with nourishment during the first two or three days of its life. Until this yolk has been entirely absorbed there is no need for other food; in fact, feeding will do more harm than good.

There is almost no end to the number of "first foods" recommended for baby chicks. Some are good, and some are not so good. The writer has tried nearly all of them.

The first nourishment which the chicks should receive is sour milk or buttermilk. This is placed before them half a day before water or any solid food is given them. The lactic acid in sour milk is an effective preventive of white diarrhea, while the milk itself contains just the nutrients which the chick needs. Even in the city, where milk costs real money, we are convinced that it will pay well to provide a good drink of it for the chicks every morning during the first week. Do not place water before them until they have had all the milk they want.

The first solid food consists of a mixture of two-thirds rolled oats and one-third bran, with a small amount of fine charcoal. This mixture is fed dry, being scattered on a clean board or paper four or five times a day. Only what will be cleaned up in 15 or 20 minutes should be fed at one time. Then the feeding board or paper should be taken away until time for the next feeding. "Little and often" should be the feeding motto for the first week.

Clean sand is liberally sprinkled in the litter of cut clover or alfalfa about the time the first feed is given, and no grit is given before we have found sand better than commercial chick grit for starting the chicks, as the average commercial grit is too sharp. The commercial grit is all right after a week or 10 days.

Feed After Third Day.

After the third day of feeding, commercial chick food in small quantities should be scattered in the litter to induce exercise, the amount being gradually increased and the oatmeal and bran decreased. After the first week a mixture of nine parts bran and one part beef scrap can be kept before them at all times. From that time on the chick feed should be scattered three times daily in a fine litter of at least two inches of cut clover or alfalfa, which must be free from dust or mold.

Now just a word about brooding temperatures. It is hard to lay down any general rule, for conditions vary. In general, however, and provided the weather is normal, the temperature under the hover may be reduced at the rate of about 1 degree a day, until no artificial heat is required. This will make the temperature 93 degrees at the end of the first week, 86 degrees at the end of the second, and 79 degrees at the end of the third week. Avoid extremes and sudden changes, in both temperature and feeds. Watch the chicks more closely, even, than the thermometer. They will tell you when they are comfortable

CHAMBERLAIN'S PERFECT BRAND TRADE MARK CHICK FEED

R-L-T IN NAME OF NEXT PRESIDENT, PROPHET PREDICTS

Palmist, Astrologist and Psychologist Comes From France on Lecture Tour.

NEW YORK, April 22.—A slight, smooth-shaven, dimpled man of quiet demeanor, but with a faculty of seeing and hearing things all the way across the Atlantic, kept the 220 passengers and the officers of the French liner Chicago guessing and when the ship arrived here from Bordeaux they were still pondering. He is Willie de Kerlor, astrologist and palmist, who founded the Occult Club in London.

While the Chicago was waiting at Bordeaux for word from the French naval authorities that it would be safe for her to depart, he went to Capt. John Batiste Mace of the liner and predicted a safe voyage. The captain smiled.

"But it must be so," the man persisted. "The aspect of the sun is in sextile to Uranus. But we will be seven hours late in sailing."

Capt. Mace expected any minute word to get under way, but there was something in the manner of the man who addressed him that interested him. It was just seven hours later that the Chicago was signaled to proceed.

A Weather Prophet.

For two days the weather was all that could be asked for. There was not a sign to a mariner's eye of any atmospheric disturbance, but that evening the slight man went out on deck, took a squint at the stars and informed Capt. Mace that on the sixth day the Atlantic would ruffle up. It did.

Last Sunday he went to the captain and told him it would hail on Tuesday afternoon.

"Hail on the 18th of April?" the captain inquired skeptically.

It hailed.

The day the Chicago left Bordeaux De Kerlor predicted that she would arrive here Thursday. Her last westward trip was made in 12 days and the one before than in 13 days. They were good passages for her. His prediction was correct.

De Kerlor was asked as the Chicago was being warped into her berth who the next President of the United States would be.

"The next President will be a man whose name begins with the letter R," he replied after staring a moment toward the Jersey shore. Before his questioners could ask whether it would be Roosevelt or Root, he added:

"There will be an l and a t in his name, too."

Further predictions he made were that the war will last two and a half years longer; that the allies will be the victors and that Germany will continue her submarine warfare.

"Will America become involved in the war?" he was asked.

"Philosophy says wise men rule the stars," he replied. "The duty of the wise men is to keep America out of the fighting that she may spend her energy helping those afflicted by the conflict."

He read the palms of the ship news reporters, told their pasts with wonderful accuracy and made predictions that coincided in several instances with their plans. He correctly told one reporter that he had a seven-year old daughter, another reporter he had two children and gave their ages accurately, and related a business matter that had been in the mind of one of the men for several days.

De Kerlor is 32 years old. He is a Pole, but has lived in France and England nearly all his life. At the Psychological Congress held in Paris three years ago he exhibited prints of four of the most extraordinary palms ever seen. One was a hand marked "A Modern Slave," which he said was that of a domestic servant. It was distinctive for its small thumb, large palm and extraordinary intersection of lines.

Hand of a Lunatic.

The hand of a "violent lunatic" showed a strange "whirlpool" where the head line ended, as if the hand were registering the confusion into which the mind of the unhappy owner was sinking.

The "unfortunate avitarice" was the hand of a French noblewoman who was almost killed in a fall from an aeroplane, and he called attention of the members of the congress to the relation between the head line and the life line and the shortness and faintness of the former.

His "hand of organization" was that of H. Gordon Selfridge, the American owner of a London department store. It showed long fingers, a square palm and a head line remarkable for its length and strength. He pointed out that all the lines were strong, well marked and well balanced.

De Kerlor is going to lecture here in the homes of wealthy Americans, he said, who became interested in his work abroad.

"But I want, most of all," he said, "to teach Americans to relax, to cultivate the artistic so they can enjoy life while combining the practical with the idealistic. I am also going to take a neurological course at Harvard, and above all, I am going to become an American citizen. While I have never been here before, I know this is the country for me to live in."

His wife, who came with him, is an Italian poetess and the only niece of Prof. Schiaparelli, who discovered the canals of Mars. She said he was not an astrologist or palmist.

Everyone engaged in raising poultry for profit should endeavor to take advantage of every source of profit. The value of poultry feathers is an important reason for dry-picking the birds. Dry-picked body feathers bring 17 to 19 cents per pound, while scalded feathers are worth less than 1 cent a pound. The demand for feathers is steady, and their sale adds to the poultry man's profits.

CITY TO BE CLEAN AND BRIGHT FOR BIG CONVENTION

And After the Democratic Gathering the Purpose Is to Keep It Continuously Neat.

St. Louis is to be cleaned up and painted for the Democratic National Convention, and after that it is to be kept cleaned and painted. The St. Louis Continuous Clean-Up and Paint-Up campaign has been inaugurated for the purpose of making St. Louis cleaner and brighter all the year. The movement has the assistance of civic, commercial and social organizations. The city has been districted and the districts are being placed in charge of associations.

General meetings are being held for the apointment of subcommittees to carry the campaign into every district. One such meeting was held Friday night at the Carondelet Library. Business, civic and school patrons' associations from Chouteau avenue south to the city limits and west to Gravois avenue, participated. Another similar meeting is to be held soon in the northern part of the city.

National Bureau Headquarters Here.

The National Clean-Up and Paint-Up Campaign Bureau is locted in St. Louis and was originated four years ago by a St. Louis man, Allen W. Clark. Through the efforts of the national body, clean-up campaigns are being waged in more than 6000 cities in the United States.

The work of the campaign has been classified into the following lines, with the chairmen named at the head of each division: Refuse Clean-up, Charles M. Talbert; Tree Planting, Julius Koenig; Fire Prevention, Chief F. E. Henderson; Housing, Dr. Max C. Starkloff; Vacant Lot Gardens, Street Drinking Fountains, Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin; Flower Boxes, Business Men's League; Fly Extermination, Mrs. Eugene T. Senseney; Unsightly Advertising, James L. Barngrove; Appearance of Buildings, Joseph B. O'Reilly; Smoke Abatement, Mrs. E. R Kroeger.

Under the head of Refuse Clean-up, which is under the direction of the Street Department, will be household waste, permanent plan, Coliseum and Union Station districts, smooth paving about Union Station, flood lighting, signs on public buildings, rubbish boxes and newspapers. This department will seek the active co-operation of the business men in not allowing rubbish or waste paper to be thrown on the sidewalks or in the streets in front of their places of business and in sweeping the sidewalks either in the night or in the early morning. Also that such advertising as they may place on or in front of their places of business be sightly and that they dress their show windows as attractively as possible. They will be asked to paint the front of their buildings, and if they have in mind reconstruction, repair or painting work of any kind, to have it done prior to the first of June. This also applies to the merchants in the residence districts.

Tree Planting Project.

The Tree-Planting Committee's work will be a campaign on tree planting along the streets, yard planting and school gardens by the school children, and preparing for introduction of ordinances covering the protection of trees and planting.

The Fire Prevention Committee will look to the cleaning up of rubbish and work in conjunction with the Building Department of the city in eliminating shacks and inspecting roofs.

The House Committee, which is under the direction of the Health Department, will look after the sanitation of yards, tenements, lodging houses, garbage receptacles, etc.

A broad and comprehensive plan is being prepared for turning the unsightly vacant lots covered with tin cans and refuse into gardens of blossoming flowers and grassy lawns, or recreation grounds, such as tennis courts, baseball diamonds, playgrounds or well-kept truck gardens. In carrying out this plan the chairman is seeking the co-operation of the boy scouts, Real Estate Exchange, neighborhood societies and clubs, Police Department, school children and the Bird Club of St. Louis, in efforts to have bird houses erected in the parks and vacant lots.

It is the plan to have flower boxes to brighten up the downtown districts as well as in the residential sections of the city.

Mrs. Eugene Senseney, as chairman of the committee on fly extermination, has begun her war on the flies, and St. Louis bids fair to be a flyless town.

Billboards throughout the city are being subjected to close censorship, as also are the other advertising methods, such as displays on vacant buildings, from which rubbish accumulates. This committee is working in conjunction with the Committee on the Appearance of Buildings, whose work is to see the owners and real estate agents in charge of vacant property and have the buildings kept in a santiary condition.

City to Remove Rubbish.

The city will remove all rubbish free of charge if it is collected and placed in receptacles convenient for handling. Wagons will visit districts on certain days, and the householder is urged to have everything in readiness.

Householders are urged to give attention to the condition of the lawns and yards, as well as to the outward appearance of the home and surrounding buildings, to paint up and to make continuous war on dirt.

The officers of the St. Louis Continuous Clean-Up and Paint-Up campaign are: Charles M. Talbert, Director of Streets and Sewers, chairman; T. W. Van, Business Men's League, vice chairman; Robert N. Beldwin, Civic League, secretary; John G. Lonsdale, president National Bank of Commerce, treasurer. The members of the Executive Committee are: A. S. Barns of the Medical Society, Allen W. Clark of the National Clean-Up and Paint-Up Bureau; K. F. Niemoeller, Associated Retailers; Flint Garrison, publisher of the Dry Goodsman, and Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin, president of the Woman's Council.

EFFECT OF RECENT BANKRUPT DECISION ON MISSOURI CASES

Will Cause Change in Statute as Applied to Preferential Transfers of Real Estate.

EXPLAINED BY REFEREE

W. D. Coles Says Transfers of Personal Property, However, Will Not Be Affected.

The United States Supreme Court recently handed down a decision construing the Federal bankrupt law, in which many former decisions regarding the transfer of land by a person within four months of the time he became a bankrupt were overruled. Walter D. Coles, referee in bankruptcy for the Eastern Judicial District of Missouri, at the request of the Post-Dispatch, yesterday gave the following explanation of the effect of the decision on bankruptcy cases in Missouri:

"The case you refer to has authoritatively settled an interesting question of bankruptcy law, upon which there has been some diversity of opinion among the several United States Circuit Courts of Appeal. As is generally known, the bankrupt law seeks to prevent a failing debtor from preferring favored creditors, and aims to bring about an equal and ratable distribution of a bankrupt's property among all his unsecured creditors.

"To effect this result, the law provides that certain preferential payments and transfers made by a bankrupt to any of his creditors within four months prior to the commencement of the bankruptcy proceeding may be set aside. In this connection, the bankrupt act provides that where the preference consists of a transfer of property, the four months period during which the transaction is liable to be attacked by the initiation of bankruptcy proceedings 'shall not expire until four months after the date of the recording or registering of the transfer, if by law such recording or registering is required.'

Where Difference Arises.

"In construing and applying the provision of the act just quoted, all the courts have agreed that where the preference consists of a transfer of property, and where the instrument of transfer is 'required' by law to be recorded, the transaction is open to attack as a preference, if the transfer is recorded within four months prior to the filing of the petition in bankruptcy. The difference of opinion has arisen over the question of what transfers are 'required' by law to be recorded within the meaning of the bankrupt act.

"Some courts have taken the view that, if the State recording laws require the transfer to be recorded in order to render it valid as against any one other than the parties themselves, that it is 'required' to be recorded within the meaning of the preference sections of the bankrupt law. Under this view, if the State recording laws require the transfer in question to be recorded in order to render it valid as against subsequent purchasers or encumbrancers, the transfer would be treated as one 'required' to be recorded within the meaning of the bankrupt law.

"Other courts have taken a different view, and have held that since a trustee in bankruptcy represents only the rights of creditors, that transfers of property are not 'required' to be recorded within the meaning of the preference provisions of the bankrupt law, unless the State recording laws make recording necessary to render the transfer valid as against creditors. The doctrine last stated is the one that has prevailed, and is the one applied by the Supreme Court of the United States. Hereafter, of course, the rule announced by the Supreme Court of the United States will be followed by all State and Federal Courts in cases where this particular provision of the bankrupt act has application.

Will Bring Change in Law.

"The authoritative determination of this question by the Supreme Court of the United States will bring about a change in the bankrupt law as heretofore applied in certain jurisdictions. It is believed that the recent decision will make no change in the law in Missouri as regards transfers of personal property. It will, however, effect a change in the bankrupt law as applied to preferential transfers of real estate made in Missouri.

"In this State transfers of real estate are required to be recorded in order to render them valid as against subsequent bona fide purchasers and encumbrancers without notice, but such transfers are good as against the transferror's creditors, although not recorded. Hence under the doctrine of the case just decided a conveyance of real estate in Missouri is not 'required' to be recorded within the meaning of the preference provision of the Bankrupt Act.

"It results, therefore, that in the case of a preferential transfer of real estate in Missouri, the four months period, within which it remains liable to be set aside under the Bankrupt Act, begins to run from the date the transfer is made, and not from the date it is recorded. If the transfer is kept secret for four months, and no bankruptcy proceeding is begun within that time, it cannot thereafter be successfully assailed as a voidable preference under the Bankrupt Act. This, I believe, is about the only practical effect that the decision will have upon the administration of the bankrupt law in Missouri."

D'Amico, Baritone, to Give Recital. Nicola D'Amico, Italian baritone, will give a recital in the Odeon Monday night, May 8, assisted by Melba Hoerner, danseuse, Ross Hoerner, pianist, and Charles Kunkel, pianist, the last named accompanying the soloist. D'Amico's selections will include the prologue from "Pagliacci" and several from Verdi, Tosti and Massenet.

CLARENCE H. HOWARD URGES PURIFICATION OF THE MOVIES

President of Business Men's League Tells of Being Shocked at a Film Show.

Clarence Howard, President of the Business Men's League, speaking before the Town Club at a luncheon yesterday noon, on "Fellowship as Applied to Community Life," urged the purification of motion picture theaters of St. Louis. Howard told of a visit lately to a West End picture show, where, he said, he had been shocked by one of the films. In the film women were roughly handled, robbery, murder and lesser crimes were shown, he said.

"Isn't it too bad," Howard added, "that such a great constructive force should become the devil's aid? We are all responsible; we all wink at it. It is time for St. Louis and the Town Club to make a decided stand on this question. I intend to bring the question before the Business Men's League." The speaker advocated "constructive occupation" for children and commended the Boy Scout movement.

Howard was followed by John H. Gundlach, president of the Pageant-Drama Association, who advocated as a concrete evidence of the spirit of fellowship the establishment of a playground in each city block.

COFFEE COMPANY ROBBED OF $995, MOSTLY LAUNDERED BILLS

Burglars Believed to Have Reached Safe by Fire Escape and Through a Skylight.

After knocking the hinges and combination from a safe in the office of the H. P. Coffee Co., 1001 Spruce street, burglars removed the safe door and extracted $995 from a tin box. The robbery was discovered when employes opened the office to begin work yesterday. The money taken was in newly laundered $5 bills and in new $1 and $10 bills.

Police investigation showed that the thief, evidently, climbed a fire escape at the west end of the building, occupied by the General Electric Co., got into the building through a skylight and then descended by a stairway to the first floor office.

The coffee concern is owned by George H. P. Petering.

Woman to Lecture on the Soul.

Mrs. I. M. Keller will lecture under the auspices of the New Thought Society at Metropolitan Hall, East St. Louis, tonight at 7 o'clock, on "The Resurrection of the Soul."

U. S. IS SEEKING WAY TO USE SHARK MEAT FOR FOOD

Fisherman Now Said to Be Selling Flesh for Deep Water Swordfish on Several Markets.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—Preliminary experiments are being conducted by the United States Bureau of Fisheries in the preparation of shark meat as a food. Fisheries experts say there is good ground for the belief that a demand for the article will be created. Even now, they say, sharks are more universally eaten than is generally known as trap fishermen off the Massachusetts coast ship all of the large species of shark, with one exception, caught in their traps. The head, fins and tail are removed and the shark then looks not unlike a deep water swordfish. They are shipped to Boston and New York and sold as deepwater swordfish, the fishermen receiving from 3 to 8 cents a pound.

In the United States there is a prejudice against the use of sharks for food that results in waste of what rightfully should be a resource, fisheries experts declare. In England and Wales almost 6,500,000 pounds of dogfish, valued at more than $100,000, were landed in 1913. As the flesh of these small sharks, when properly prepared, is palatable, there appears to be no valid reason against its use, officials say.

STATE ARMORIES UNDER GUARD

Militia Officials in Washington Refuse to Tell Reason.

NORTH YAKIMA, Wash., April 22.—Armed guards have been placed in the State Armory day and night, it was learned today. A special guard has been placed over the arms and ammunition.

National guard officials refused to make a statement. All State armories have been ordered guarded.

St. Louis' ONE BIG Result Medium!

A LOOK AROUND

By Clark McAdams.

THE hero of the ballad who was all dressed up and had no place to go was no worse off than the Republican party is in this year of grace. Mr. Wilson has raided Col. Roosevelt's establishment within the past week of the last bit of political thunder the Colonel had under lock and key, and the race in November looks like a farcical contest between a four-legged fox and a three-legged hound. With the Chicago convention less than two months off, the Republicans find themselves without either a man or an issue. If they mention the tariff some corporation increases the wages of its employes and advertises for more men. If they suggest a leader, the country groans. It looks now as if Justice Hughes would probably run on his record as a gloom. He has not laughed in 30 years. The Republican party is in exactly the humor to welcome that sort of leadership. Its political future looks precisely like the entrance to the Hoosac Tunnel, and with Hughes for groan leader it could probably go up against it in November with a much softer and deadlier squash than any other combination of the man and the issue could possibly effect. Justice Hughes' is one of those despiriting names with which a political assemblage is easily confused with an undertakers' convention. The mere mention of that sepulchral cognomen makes the Republicans in this part of the country howl for the soothing syrup. It is a great mistake to say that he stands for nothing. He stands for a great many things, all of which are more or less employed to keep down the levity when cemetery associations meet. With Hughes running for President on his record as a gloom, the band playing the dead march from "Saul," and Roosevelt trying to drown himself in the horse trough at Sagamore Hill, the Republican pursuit of Wilson in the forthcoming autumn would sweep down this vale of tears as the one perfect nocturne in our political history.

Sleeping Porches Real Haven for Tired Man.

AN entirely new conception of porches seems to have come over us. Heretofore porches have served no real purpose in domestic architecture. There was a widespread impression that houses should stick out here and there, and it was much easier to stick on a few porches than it was to extend the house. The modern movement may be said to have begun when someone thought of sitting on the porch to get the air. Porches were at that time insecure, and usually fell off under a certain tonnage, which had the effect of introducing the more or less solid porch of five years ago. The solid porch proved a delightful improvisation, and when someone lingered in the hammock too long and slept sweetly and soundly through the night, the discovery easily followed that the porch is a good place to sleep. For two or three years the contest between the porch as a mere lounging place and the porch as an outdoor bedroom was very spirited. One could see the two types working side by side. Something had to be done about it. People on a sleeping porch could not sleep while people on a lounging porch adjoining the premises were running around in their shoes, nor could lovers love another truly in the quiet of the night when someone on the adjoining porch was lustily breathing through his gills. It broke the spell which love had cast, and established what the Greeks knew full well, that Venus and Morpheus have nothing in common. The upshot of the whole matter was an unconscious agreement among us all that the porch is, in truth, a place to sleep. Once that became understood, the sleeping porch became the very lodestar of our domestic life. If you have none, people wonder how you rest. Peddlers with sleeping porches on their backs pass down the street every morning, and by the time one gets home in the evening a dozen new outside respositories for weary humanity glisten from the walls of homes about. There is no other kind of porch, except to be laughed at. It is the new note in domestic life, and we all gladly and fearlessly close our eyes where the nightbird twittereth hard by. Don't laugh. Build.

Russian Troops in France Blow to War Prophets.

WHAT were all the war prophets about while Russia was slipping those troops around to Marseilles? The announcement that they are there came as the first real surprise of the war. Soon after hostilities began we had persistent reports that Russia was sending troops into France by way of England. Any number of people, some of them American tourists, reported having seen trainloads of these men passing through England. There was no question about them being Russians. They were a hairy and unkempt lot, and when the townspeople spoke to them they said something sounding like Umpthtghoaughfydths! which the Britsh interpreted as probably meaning, hurrah! That story persisted until time dissolved it, much as the morning sun can dissipate fog. What occasioned it we never knew. It was credible enough. The allies desperately needed men in France and Russia had the men. It was almost beneath the contempt of a war expert to point out where the men would naturally come from. When it became certain enough that the men had not come from Russia, or from anywhere else, there was a long period of what is sometimes described as profound silence. Evidently, the obvious thing was not the thing to be looked for. Time passed and passed. Then we suddenly learned that the Russians actually had put troops into France, and not one word of it had come to us from any source whatever. It was enough to provoke a war prophet to fall on his goosebone. How many seers suicided when they heard it we do not know. The returns are not in. What we must conclude at once is that we really know very little of what is going on in Europe. It is not hard to find someone who has the whole situation in his mind as exactly as a General on the field has the pins placed in his map, but somehow that sort of thing doesn't impress us as much as it did.

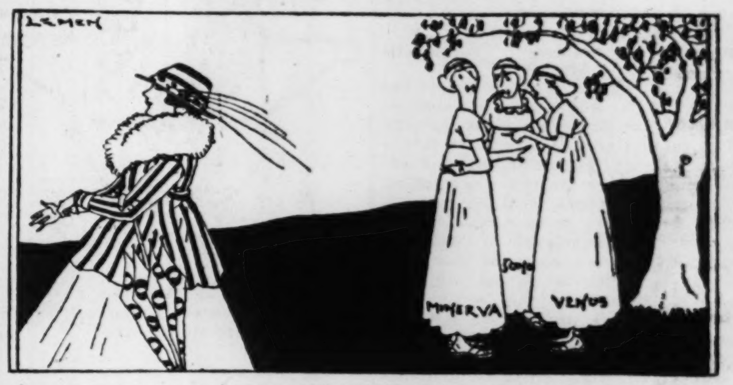
ARABELLA TAKES THE APPLE.



MINERVA
VENUS

MISS ARABELLA SIMPKINS BROWN, when Easter bells are loudest
Steps forth to dazzle all the town in raiment of the proudest,
There never was on land or sea, or in the solar system
A maiden half so fair as she, or if there were we missed 'em.
Though Venus took the beauty prize and loved to brag upon it
We know that she would give her eyes for Arabella's bonnet,
And Paris, could he but return, would feel it was his duty
All other goddesses to spurn in presence of such beauty.
For as her brother Will would say, she's in the first division,
And makes the others fade away, without a close decision.
Minerva, Juno and the rest are headed for the minors.
Compared with her, when at their best, we fear they all were shiners.
For never could they show a gown like this one she is wearing;
Such togs in old Olympus town would set the gods to staring.
They had no putty-colored shoes, with buttons four-and-twenty,
They had no skirts of dazzling hues, with tucks and gores a-plenty,
Old Mother Hubbard made their styles in rigid one-piece fashion,
And so with all their tricks and wiles they weren't very dashin'.
Now that is why we do not fear to say what no doubt YOU know,
That our Miss Brown in Easter gear is fairer far than Juno.

NO MIDDLE CLASS THEN.

(Louis Enricht of Farmingdale, L. I., asserts that he has discovered a substitute for gasoline and that by adding a few drops of a mysterious green liquid to water he can produce this substitute at a retail cost of only 1 cent a gallon.)

WHEN Louis Enricht comes to town
With his one-cent gasoline
There'll be the biggest turn-out here
The world has ever seen.
Each office boy will own a car
To do his errands in.
And Gabriel horns both near and far
Will make an awful din.
The baby will a-riding go
In his motor go-cart cute,
And the trolley car so big and slow
Will have to shoot the chute.
We'll have to make room in the shed
For the cook's new limousine;
The upstairs girl who makes the bed
Will have her own machine.
We'll keep a horse out in the zoo
If one is still alive,
But we'll ride on "gas" a month or two
For a dollar-thirty-five.
When Louis Enricht comes to town
With his one-cent gasoline
We'll all be rich, both high and low,
With no one in between.

A HAPPY SOLUTION.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 21.—The Commission of Temporary Safety, composed of high-salaried State officials, met here today to consider grave charges against one of its members.

It was alleged in the complaint that although he has three maiden aunts he had put only two of them on his office payroll, entirely ignoring the other, contrary to established practice and procedure in administering a State office.

In his defense the official asserted that his reason for excluding the aunt in question was that she was unable to read and write.

"That is a very flimsy excuse," said the chairman of the commission in handing down his decision. "A disability of that sort is not in itself a bar to participation in those emoluments to which the families of all State officials are justly entitled. I understand you have a cousin who has just come of age. Is that true?"

"It is," replied the accused official.

"Well, then, the solution is obvious. Appoint your aunt to a clerical position and then appoint your cousin to do her reading and writing for her. Thus you will place two members of your family on the payroll, where but one might have served but for the fortunate circumstance of your aunt's illiteracy. The meeting is adjourned. Members will collect their expense money as they pass out."

TO SHAKSPEARE.

FULL many a time hath Phoebus' gilded car
Outstripped the laggard watches of the night,
Since you, bold Will, set forth to range afar
Where darkness flees before Eternal Light.
What hast thou seen, thou seer of many things?
What hast thou heard at Heaven's portal there?
Hast learned the final judgment doom of Kings,
Or what the answer to an humble prayer?
Think not we grieve in this far distant day
For that your journey called you hence; 'tis well;
Not ever shoulds't thou walk with feet of clay
Or grieve thy spirit in its mortal cell.
Content are we if in that Land you find
One half the beauties that you left behind.

STRONG FOR PREPAREDNESS.

STRATFORD-ON-AVON, April 22.—Our esteemed fellow townsman, Bill Shakspeare, has dropped into poetry again. He sent this to one of the local papers yesterday:

"In peace there's nothing so becomes a man
As modest stillness and humility;
But when the blast of war blows in our ears
Then imitate the action of the tiger;
Stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood."

Bill is getting warlike in his old days, but his friends had the laugh on him the other night when a Zeppelin flew over the city. Bill lit out as fast as his legs would carry him. He shouted back over his shoulder:

"I would give all my fame for a pot of ale and safety."

IGNITION POINTS, VALVE TIMING ARE EXPERTS' WORK

Post-Dispatch Motor Engineer Explains Various Plans and Their Relation to Multi-Cylinder Motors.

By WILLIAM H. STEWART JR., President Stewart Automobile School.

In the four cycle type motor the crank shaft makes two revolutions to complete the cycle of operations. The suction and compressions stroke is one revolution; the firing and exhaust stroke is the other revolution. The charge of gas is taken into the cylinder by the down stroke of the piston and compressed by the up stroke. Likewise when the charge is fired the piston is forced outward and on the second up stroke the burned gases exhausted. In order to admit the new gases to the cylinder the intake valve, timed to open and close at the right instant, is necessary. Likewise an exhaust valve.

Ordinarily one would think that these valves would open and close at the end of the strokes, but such is not the case. A fixed "lag" and "lead" are given the valves according to the design of the motor. Ordinarily the intake valve is timed to open at a point about 12 degrees past top center and to close at a point about 30 degrees past bottom center. The exhaust valve opens about 40 degrees before bottom center and closes about 10 degrees past top center. Top center is determined when the piston is up; bottom center when it is down. Since there are 360 degrees to a circle, the flywheel is usually marked in a manner to fix these points of opening and closing.

Difference of Motors.

Motors differ considerably as to valve timing. The size and lift of the valves, cylinder bore and the revolution per minute of the motor, together with numerous other factors determine the valve timing. Take, for instance, the intake valve. When piston "D" begins to travel down a vacuum is created. At this time the exhaust valve must be closed and the intake valve opened to permit the gases being drawn into the cylinder as the piston travels outward. As the crank pin passes through the arc at the bottom center the piston for a time is at a standstill. However, the inrushing gases will continue to flow into the cylinder until piston "D" begins to travel upward on compression. The intake valve should close at a point when the piston on compression would tend to force out the gases already in the cylinder. It is desired that the cylinder receive as large a volume of gas as is possible to obtain. The new gases being drawn into the cylinder by the suction of the piston attain a certain velocity and for this reason the intake valve is held open as long as possible to permit all the gases possible to enter the cylinder.

The piston on the upward stroke compresses this charge from atmospheric pressure to that of about 65 pounds. As the piston again reaches top center of compression the spark is timed to ignite the charge which, in burning and expanding forces the piston outward on the firing stroke. As the piston travels outward on the firing stroke the pressure exerted is reduced, the effective pressure being exerted on the piston during the early part of the stroke. The exhaust valve is timed to open before the piston reaches bottom center in order to permit excess pressure to escape before the piston returns on the up stroke. If this lead was not given to the exhaust valve undue pressure would be exerted on the piston during the scavenging stroke.

The Exhaust Valve.

Since three of the four strokes are idle the energy consumed in effecting this would cause loss of power. As the piston travels upward on the exhaust stroke the burned gases are expelled through the exhaust valve, which is also held open as long as possible to take advantage of the velocity of the gases. In short, the exhaust valve may remain open until the piston begins to travel down on the suction stroke and tend to create a vacuum. At this point the exhaust valve must close and the suction concentrated at the intake valve, which should then open.

At "A" is shown the intake timing gear which meshes with "C," the crank shaft gear. At "B" is shown the exhaust cam shaft gear which likewise is driven by the crank shaft gear. Since two revolutions of the crank shaft are necessary to complete the cycle, namely, suction, compression, firing and exhaust, the timing gears "A" and "B" must be driven at half time speed. For this reason the cam shaft timing gears have twice as many teeth as the crank shaft timing gear. At "F" and "G" are shown the cams of the cam shaft. These in rotating, actuate the valve lifter "R" which operates valves "I" and "H."

Heavy valve springs are used to return the valve to its seat quickly when the point of the cam leaves the roller. One may readily note the order of firing of cylinders by observing the action of the intake valves or the exhaust valves. If it is 1, 2, 4, 3, No. 1 valve will actuate first, No. 2 next, No. 4 next and No. 3 last.

In timing the valves of a four-cylinder motor it is necessary only to time the intake and exhaust valve of one cylinder. Cam shafts are constructed so that timing of the other cylinders would be the same as that of the first.

To Determine Center.

When the flywheel is marked indicating the points of opening and closing of the valves, it is an easy matter to determine the top center or bottom center of the piston and then give the necessary lead to the valve. If the flywheel is set in a position where the exhaust valve should open the timing gear "B" may be turned in position, so that cam "F" will be about to raise the valve lifter "R." Likewise the intake valve may be timed by setting of gear "A." The design of the cams should take care of the duration of opening of the valve. At point "R" is shown a slight clearance between the valve stem and the valve lifter. This clearance is necessary to allow for the expansion of the metal when heated, otherwise when the motor is hot the valve would become unseated due to the elongation of the valve stem. Likewise if too much clearance is permitted at these points the lift of the valves would be lessened and the exact opening and closing points of the valves disturbed. This clearance should be in accordance with instructions of the manufacturer.

If the valves are not timed accurately the motor will not develop its maximum efficiency or even may not run at all. Reseating the valves occasionally is also necessary. Especially is this true with the exhaust valve, which is subjected to considerable heat and waste products of combustion. The inrush of fresh gases past the intake valve has a tendency to keep it clean, and for this reason this valve does not foul so readily. A slight particle of carbon on the seat of the valve will cause loss of compression and when the compression is reduced loss of power results.

Ignition Timing.

Correct ignition timing is also very important. The charge of gas must be fully ignited at the instant the crank pin passes dead center. When this is done the full expansive force of the explosion is exerted on the piston and the best results are obtained. When the motor is turning over at the rate of 1000 revolutions a minute the crank pin passes through top center much faster than when the motor is turning over at the rate of 500 revolutions a minute. Since it takes a certain amount of time for the charge of gas to become fully ignited, it is necessary to introduce the spark into the cylinder a little in advance in order to fully ignite the charge by the time the crank pin passes dead center. The faster the motor turns over the more advanced must be the spark. The volume of the spark is not changed by advancing or retarding, but simply the time of the spark in relation to position of the crank pin. When a motor is turning over very fast the spark may be advanced as much as 40 degrees; that is to say, the charge will begin to ignite 40 degrees before the crank pin reaches top center. As the speed of the motor is reduced the advance must be reduced, otherwise the force of the explosion will be exerted on the piston too soon and the tendency would be to reverse the direction of the crank shaft. When the spark is too far advanced a knock is noticeable. This is caused by the piston acting against the explosive force. The momentum of the fly wheel carries the piston through the cycle; otherwise it would reverse.

The Magneto Wire.

In the sketch is shown four cylinders with the magneto wires attached. The magneto is driven by a gear E at the same speed as the crank shaft.

The distributer of the magneto has four segments, one for each cylinder. The secondary finger "L" rotating clockwise touches the segments in the order of 1, 2, 4, 3, which is the firing order as outlined. Pistons No. 1 and No. 4 are shown at top center and pistons No. 2 and No. 3 at bottom center. If piston No. 1 is up on compression and ready for ignition then piston No. 4 has just completed the exhaust and ready for the intake. Likewise piston No. 3 has just completed firing and piston No. 2 the intake.

In brief, two pistons are up while the other two are down. Each requires four strokes to complete the cycle, namely, suction, compression, firing and exhaust. Thus while one cylinder is firing another one will be taking in a charge, still another will be compressing and another exhausting. It will be noted that with a single cylinder motor one power impulse is obtained at every second revolution of the crank shaft; in the two-cylinder motor, at every revolution; in the four-cylinder at every half revolution, or 180 degrees turn of the shaft. In this manner a more continuous torque is given the crank shaft.

MOON SHIPS TRAIN LOAD OF AUTOS TO CHICAGO

The largest individual shipment of Moon cars that has ever been made was sent to Shadburne Bros., Moon agents at Chicago last week by the Moon Motor Car Co. The shipment comprised a trainload of 25 cars and consisted of 40 of the Six-30's and 10 Six-44 cars.

This trainload shipment is the third that has been made by the Moon company this spring. Both the Moon Motor Car Co. of New York City and M. J. Wolfe, Moon agent at Brooklyn, have previously ordered trainload shipments this year.

The order for the 50 cars for Chicago came in a telegram from Shadburne Bros. L. A. Shadburne and W. H. Shadburne came to St. Louis on the heels of the wire to be sure that the shipment would be made. They sent their sales manager, C. H. Plummer, to St. Louis to superintend the loading of the cars.

When the trainload reaches Chicago each automobile will be provided with a driver and the entire lot will be paraded through the streets of Chicago.

Stewart McDonald, vice president, said: "When the demand for Moon cars reaches the point where dealers insist on getting them a trainload at a time it indicates a very decided market for the St. Louis product. The Shadburnes are old-timers in the automobile business and their connection with the Moon company in Chicago means big things for Moon cars there."

HOW WOMEN DRIVE VELIE LIGHT SIX

During the past few years more and more women have become proficient automobile drivers. At first the electric held the field on account of its conservative speed and simple manipulation, but the unlimited travel of the gas car and the exhiliration experienced through the mastery of a powerful, yet docile motor has wooed and won women of all types to its side, until now they are encountered in all parts of the earth where automobiles may go.

Many automobile manufacturers, in their effort to attract by appearance, have lost sight of the features of a motor car control best adapted to the lady motorist. It must be conceded that certain essentials are necessary for their convenience, which at the same time, however, make the car more enjoyable to handle even by the sturdy and strong man.

The Velie $1065 Six has been designed throughout with driving comfort uppermost in the minds of engineers. The motor is started by simply touching a button—no muscular effort whatever is required. The clutch of multiple disc type needs but a 30 pounds spring to hold it positively—the most frail little Velie driver experiences no difficulty, therefore, with this usual bugbear of gas car control.

Two sets of brakes are provided with a compound leverage, thereby exerting many times the power on the wheels applied by either hand or foot. The gear shift lever is placed within close reach, and by its rocking motion, simplifies to a marked degree the process of changing gears, which need is reduced to a minimum by the use of a powerful six-cylinder motor.

During eleven years there has been little change in the fundamental constructional features of the Dorris such, for example, as the valve-in-head motor, platform spring suspension, unit power plant, dry plate multiple disc clutch, etc. That they are correct has been proved not only by time but by their adoption in late years by other cars

Thus, for eleven years, we have been enabled to devote our energies to making such refinements and improvements in the application of these fundamentals as would give maximum efficiency and durability The advantage that these years of experiment for betterment have given us is apparent when one realizes that to adopt our original principles other manufacturers have had to revolutionize their construction

So—throughout—the Dorris is a car of evolution instead of one of revolutionary changes—proving again the axiom that evolution corrects errors and results in betterment, whereas revolution, while perhaps correcting old errors, presents new opportunities for new mistakes

Character

A MAN'S capacities are determined by several factors, chief among which is the fiber of the stuff he is made of. Like all of Nature's most potent forces this is invisible, and being so, it secures its expression in effects and results. Competency, energy and honesty—these qualities constitute greater worth. And their development creates character.

Motor cars, too, have character. It is injected and molded by the hand of man; its presence is conspicuous when put to the test.

Maxwell Motor Cars, for example, gain character and individuality by reason of experience, care and skill with which they are made. Every operation must strengthen the final result and thus the ability to give abundant and satisfying service is correspondingly increased.

As we specialize in the manufacture of light weight, standardized automobiles, we can and do concentrate our entire attention on those details that make for better motor car character.

Touring. Home, 400 miles behind.

"Devil take business," said I, and sniffed the country air.

"A month of this and I'll be a new man."

Bang! Went the carburetor.

"What's the matter?" I demanded, as George stopped the car with a jerk.

"Jump," he yelled. "It's on fire."

We jumped not a second too soon. Quick as a flash the whole car was one roaring flame.

George sprinted for the nearest house. Too late. Before he got half way there the new machine was gone. Scrap-iron.

"Good-bye, Tour," I moaned. "Only last week I saw a whole window full of those Pyrene Fire Extinguishers and didn't stop to buy."

A Pyrene gun would have stopped the fire dead; saved us from the danger of being burned alive; saved the car; saved the tour; saved my disposition.

It took us two weeks to select a new car—two months more to get delivery. We were without a car when we needed one most—right in the middle of the touring season.

Take a tip from me and don't start anywhere in your car without Pyrene.

All merchants are displaying Pyrene this week. Don't let it go by without buying one for your car and one for your home.

Pyrene pays for itself by saving you 15 per cent. each year on your auto insurance.

$7.50 complete with auto bracket.

Inspected, approved and labeled by the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc.

The Pyrene Manufacturing Company will send an experienced fire prevention engineer to inspect any factory, institution or building. This service is rendered free of charge.

Write for new catalog of complete line of fire protection appliances and fire department equipment.

Sis was trapped. Father and mother were away. I grabbed the Pyrene and with a few pumps smothered the fire. I hate to think what might have happened that night without Pyrene.

NEW EMPIRE ROADSTER

A new roadster of four-passenger capacity is the latest addition to the line of the Empire Automobile Co., locally handled by the Johnson Automobile Co. The car, which made its first appearance last week, is one of the most attractive types announced this season. In general the lines conform with those of the touring car models, with the high cowl and sides, but probably the most noticeable feature is the roominess of the car. There are two doors in front and two passengers are accommodated by the individual type front seats. Between these seats is an aisleway 10 inches wide to give easy entrance to the rear seats. The width of this, 36 inches, gives exceptional seating space for the other two passengers. Utmost comfort is assured the occupants of this rear seat by full 18-inch space between this and the front chairs.

An exclusive and striking feature is found in the luggage compartment. This occupies the entire rear deck, and is reached, not at the rear, but by means of an entrance afforded by the dropping of the rear seat upholstery, the cushion being hinged at the bottom for this purpose. With this pad in place the compartment becomes dustproof, giving perfect protection to bagage. The compartment is so large that two suitcases, in addition to many other accessories needed in touring, may be carried there.

Pullman $740 F. O. B. Factory

The size and roomy luxury of the Pullman sets a new standard for cars at anything like its price. Stand the Pullman at the curb beside any car and it retains its own air of snap and distinction.

It is heavy enough to hold the road at any speed—light enough to save tires and gas.

Two, Three and Five Passenger Models

SPECIFICATIONS: 114-inch wheel base, 32 H. P. four-cylinder motor, Batavia non-skid tires all four wheels, cantilever rear springs, independent electric starting and lighting system, separate high tension magneto, honeycomb radiator, one-man top, full floating rear axle.

NATION-WIDE TIRE SHOW THIS WEEK

During the week beginning Arpil 17th everyone interested in automobile tires will have an opportunity to study at first hand the complete line of United States "balanced" tires.

A movement has been set on foot by the dealers who sell these tires to hold simultaneous shows, in order that the motoring public may be given a definite opportunity to find out exactly what is meant by "balanced."

All the coming week the concerns selling United States tires will have special exhibitions and a corps of experts to explain exactly what "balanced" means, and how the perfect balance between fabric, canvas and rubber tread adds to the life of the tire.

This nation-wide movement to hold tire shows is a pretty good proof of how dealers feel toward United States tires.

SUNBEAM TO RACE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 22.—Josef Christiaens has sailed from London with an English-made Sunbeam car to compete in the Sixth International Sweepstakes Race at Indianapolis, May 30. No end of red tape had to be discarded in order to get the British military authorities to permit this driver and car to run the gauntlet of periscopic perils and floating mine dangers and come to the States.

Christiaens has been in the military service of the entente allies ever since the war started. He is a Belgian and drove to sixth place in Indianapolis two years ago.

BABCOX CALLS ADVERTISING BIG LABOR SAVER

Tire Man Says Automobile Trade in St. Louis Is Better Organized Than in Any City Visited.

E. S. Babcox, general advertising manager of the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Akron, O., made some striking statements to a meeting of the Motor Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis, Tuesday night. Here are a few paragraphs from his address:

"You men are wise in getting together in association of this kind and pooling your ideas, because after all business is like life itself, and life is like a bank—you draw out of it exactly what you put into it.

"The great problem in the automobile industry today is not what it was 10 years ago. At that time it was a matter of manufacturing. The technical details of manufacture have been worked out and settled by the pioneers in the industry, so that today the big men are directing their attention to the marketing end of the business—that is, the division of business dealing with distribution and sales.

"It strikes me that the dealer is at the small end of the business funnel. He is at the point where the close personal touch is essential. The personality of one dealer may mean success or failure of a certain product in a given city.

"It is encouraging to manufacturers to know that dealers throughout the country are studying their business and that they are getting together for the purpose of invesigating conditions and profiting by the experiences of each other.

"You will do well to study your cost systems. How much money did you make last week? Did your net profit come from your accessory sales or from your repair department? If you run service cars or motor cycles for service, do they make money for you?

"Advertising is a factor in modern automobile development. It is the great lavor-saving device of distribution. In factories of all kinds labor-saving devices are much used. The same is true in all modern offices.

"It is not as true as it should be in sales organizations in the field. Some companies pay men big salaries to do work which advertising could do better and less expensively.

"It is just as sensible for a manufacturer to send a sales organization into the field without paving the way with a well-balanced advertising campaign as it would be for the Germans to try and take Verdun with their infantry attacks without laying opposition low with their 42-centimeter guns.

"Advertising is the heavy artillery in the war of business. Advertise judiciously. Use your local newspapers right here in St. Louis. There are none better in the world. Most of your papers here maintain automobile departments with skilled men in charge. These men themselves understand markets and St. Louis conditions and can aid you in your constructive sales activity.

"I have been in many cities in all parts of the country during the last few months and in none have I found the automobile industry better organized or more able to cope with its problems than right here in St. Louis, and I congratulate all you men who are at the backbone of this remarkable business."

WANT WAR AUTOMOBILES

Massachusetts has stepped to the front in furthering military preparedness not only within its own borders, but throughout New England.

Under the auspices of the Bay State, a Dodge Brothers motor car is now touring the New England States gathering information relative to the number orf motor cars available for military duty, the condition of the roads, distance by roads between points, general topography of the region and such other material as would be of advantage in the event of war and the attempted invasion of this section of the nation by a foreign Government.

Maps will be made and other data gathered together and turned over to the Fifth Division of the Organized Militia (the National Guard of the New England States).

The trip, which will cover several weeks, has the sanction and commendation of Gov. McCall of Massachusetts and Brigadier-General C. H. Cole, head of the military department of the State.

AUTO CLUB NOMINATIONS

Announcement is made that all retiring officials of the Automobile Club of St. Louis have been renominated. The election will be at the headquarters of the club in the Planters Hotel, May 1, from noon to 3 p. m. Voting must be in person. The nominees for re-election are Edward M. Flesh for president, George J. Tansey for vice president, Matthew F. Morse for secretary, Samuel Plant for treasurer. For directors, John A. Bruner, Claude S. Kennerly, S. S. Pingree, E. J. Krause, F. H. Semple and J. Boyle Price.

DEMAND FOR ALLEN LARGE

"In spite of the fact that the Allen factory worked full capacity all winter and thousands of Allen cars were stored throughout the country, the Allen buyer who comes late in the season may have to wait a while for delivery."

This is the way Joseph A. Schlecht, president of the Mound City Buggy & Auto Company, the local Allen distributor, feels about the coming spring business.

"There was a time not many years ago when it was almost impossible to sell a car in the winter, and the owner who did not store his car during the winter months was either a hero or a maniac. Now it is not only common, but actually customary to run a car all year around.

"The Allen factory writes us that they are running night and day and will make every possible effort to meet the demand for cars which unquestionably will be far greater than ever before.

"The Allen organization showed remarkable foresight in arranging for a big supply of materials, and the success of their efforts is evidenced by the fact that at the present time they have stock in their storerooms that figures over a million dollars."

TOURING TO NEW YORK

Phillip King and S. Gould of Denver, Colo., arrived at the Marquette Hotel Thursday, having completed 1128 miles in 41 hours running time. They are on their way to New York in a Franklin 6-30. Their average gasoline mileage is 23 7-10 miles per gallon. Mr. King reports the roads to be in splendid condition most of the way.

The Car that sold Itself

Jeffery Six

LESS than two months after the first appearance of the Jeffery Six, the Thomas B. Jeffery Company had to double its planned output of this car. So immediate was the success of its wonderful roll-edge body, its riding-comfort and driving-comfort, its spectacular performance—that almost without a line of advertising the car sold in unprecedented quantities.

It's a car of character, a wonderful car, the car for the family which wants not only all the power and speed which can be used, but a real, honest, comfortable, and beautiful automobile.

The generous tonneau, the divided front seats, the disappearing auxiliary seats—these and a dozen minor details are all the last word in comfort, convenience, beauty, and power.

The great ideal of the Jeffery engineers—who introduced the high-speed, long-stroke, high-efficiency motor to America—has always been to give maximum power at the speeds which are used most. And that is just what the Jeffery Six gives you in the highest degree.

In every way it's the finest handling car you can imagine. The price is $1450 and every dollar of it represents more value—good, common-sense, usable value—than you ever saw before.

Come in and look it over now. Go over it from head-lights to tail-light—compare it with every car in its class point by point—ask us to demonstrate by actual test every claim we make. And do it now. The demand is tremendous. Our allotment is limited, and the factory cannot increase its present production.

Studebaker

Because Buying a Studebaker SAVES from $250 to $400—

Our Detroit plants are running about 150 cars a day BEHIND ORDERS!

Of course, what's going on in our Detroit plants—our difficulties in keeping up with orders—our being 150 or so cars a day BEHIND orders even with one of the largest factories in the whole industry—all that makes little difference to you, as we know. But we do know that the REASON we can't keep up with orders DOES make lots of difference to YOU. For that reason is simply this:

The SERIES 17 Studebakers cost from $250 to $400 LESS than any other cars that give as much. Said in another way, YOU SAVE FROM $250 to $400 by buying a Studebaker.

Now, we don't expect you to say: "That's so" and rush down to buy a car. We only want you to turn that thought over in your mind a couple of times: "$250 to $400 saved by buying a Studebaker"—and then come down and make us PROVE it.

We CAN prove it—either here in the Showrooms or off on the road. We can prove it side by side with any other car you can name—or on the toughest hill in the neighborhood—anywhere and any time you say.

And when you've seen these SERIES 17 Studebakers and know what they offer, THEN go see those other cars and make the salesman tell you WHY they want $250 to $400 more? and WHAT you get for the extra price? and whether it's worth paying that much higher price for nothing more.

See a Studebaker—and save yourself $250 or more.

BURMAN'S BLITZEN MAY RACE AT SHEEPSHEAD

With the opening of the automobile racing season only a few weeks off, racegoers are wondering who will pilot the famous Blitzen Benz car, in which the late "Wild Bob" Burman established the world's record in 1911 at Daytona, Fla., when he drove the old "war horse" a mile in 0:25:40. This performance has never been equaled. It is doubtful if there is a car in the country which might be considered a dangerous contender to the Burman mount of five years ago.

Barney Oldfield was the first driver to bring the car into prominence, capturing a world's record with it by negotiating a mile in 0:27:28, in 1909, over the Daytona course.

In Burman's entire career as a race driver, he never feared for his Benz record except during the season of 1912, when a 300-horsepower Mercedes and a Fiat of the same power were built to lower the Burman mark. The Mercedes failed to accomplish its purpose when it started at Semmering Hill, Germany, and the big Fiat fell short in a trial at the mile record at Saltburn-by-the-Sea, England.

The Blitzen Benz is now included in the stable of Harry S. Harkness, a wealthy race driver, who has moved his string of Peugeots, Delages and Sunbeams to the Sheepshead Bay Speedway, where they are entered for the Metropolitan trophy contest, scheduled for May 13. Carl Limberg will manage the team of Delages, and Franchi will lead the Peugeots; but who will attempt to lower the Burman record in the Blitzen Benz is not known. Rumors, however, are current in racing circles that Harkness himself will attempt to lower the mile mark with the famous Benz.

DEALERS TO FIND NEW HOME FOR ASSOCIATION

The by-laws of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association will be examined and changes therein recommended to a meeting of the association by H. F. Fahrenkrog, W. S. Roberts, E. W. Arbogast, W. L. Johnson and W. J. Parrish, a committee appointed for that purpose. The first of a series of monthly meetings will be held the evening of May 11.

Another committee appointed will seek new quarters for the association, probably on Locust street. The present quarters with the Automobile Club in the Planters Hotel are not considered convenient for the trade. The committee to find quarters is James E. Newell, I. G. McNeice and President F. W. A. Vesper.

At the monthly meeting at the Missouri Athletic Association, President Vesper will announce standing committees, on which the membership will be selected from the entire association, instead of from the board, as heretofore. No action has been taken as to the secretaryship, and none will probably be taken before June 1.

AUTO BALL LEAGUE PLAYS FIRST GAME

The Automobile Baseball League, which will play under the auspices of the Motor Accessory Trade Association of St. Louis, played its first games in Forest Park Saturday afternoon. Mayor Kiel pitched the first ball and Albert von Hoffman, business manager of the Auto Review, took a moving picture of the players as they started for the grounds.

The teams in the league are "Moonbears," Moon Motor Car Co.; "Flivers," Ford Motor Co.; "Kant Slips," Kelley-Springfield Tire Co.; "Campbell Kids," Fred Campbell Auto Supply Co.; "Leak Proofs," McQuay-Norris Manufacturing Co., and "Pennants," Pierce Oil Corporation. The Accessory Association has offered a silver trophy cup for the winner of the series. Officers of the league are: C. W. Herger, president; R. C. Buckley, vice president; Edward Caya, treasurer; Frank Barton, secretary. Games will be played every Saturday afternoon.

WILL INSPECT BATTERIES

The Electric Storage Battery Co. of Philadelphia, through H. B. Marshall, local soliciting agent, announces that free inspection service for Exide batteries will be given at the branch, Twenty-first and Walnut streets. This inspection will also be extended free to other makes of batteries. Inspection will be made while the car is waiting. The Exide is the original "unit seal" battery, each cell a separate unit, with non-flooding filling plugs, semi-flexible rubber jars and large plates, insuring maximum power. The efficiency of the self-starter depends upon the condition of the storage battery. St. Louis battery users will undoubtedly appreciate this closer touch with a factory branch and its expert men.

FOR FIRE PREVENTION

Accessory aud supply houses this week all over the country will display Pyrene fire extinguishers. Few motorists now start on tours without this extinguisher on the running board and it is a careless man who has not at least one in his garage. They have been approved by the Underwriters Laboratories, incorporated, on the basis that they will extinguish any fire less than a conflagration.

Factory Service for Automobile Battery Users in St. Louis and Vicinity

The Sign of Mechanical Excellence the World Over

MANY PREFER HIGH CLASS USED CAR

"Due to the fact that an old car must be considered in many sales agreements, the buyer is often prevailed upon to buy a certain car simply because a dealer will allow him a seemingly excessive sum for his old car," said North Moore, of the Trenton Motor Car Co., St. Louis, distributors for National cars. "There are lots of cars today listed for trading at prices that neither the maker or dealer ever expected to receive. The buyer learns their real value only when they fail to give the service expected, or when he tries to dispose of the so-called bargain car for cash in the open market.

"Secondhand Nationals are scarce—when they are offered for sale they bring good prices and are invariably taken quickly. This is because Nationals, even those old in service, have a recognized value. Many prefer a used National to a mediocre new car. There are many old Nationals in use today. Try to buy one and you'll learn that the original price represented intrinsic value, and that used Nationals command high prices. When the market price of a used car is comparatively high it is a positive indication that the price of a new car was based on actual value and was not an arbitrary figure made for trading.'

"The very fact that a man is considering the National is evidence that he desired something better than the ordinary. There are many cars sold for less. That this superiority is a tangible thing is proved by the fact that National sales have grown constantly for 15 years. This year National sales increased more than 300 per cent."

NEW TIRE CONSTRUCTION

"No motorist who closely examines an Empire tire can fail to be impressed with its wonderful finish and the scientific accuracy of its construction," says Arthur Gorman, local distributor.

"Merely to run one's hand over the surface is to be struck with the velvety smoothness of the tire. The rubber has a different feel. There is something distinctive and unusual about it. It is entirely different from any gray or from any other red.

"Time was required to develop this superb specimen of the tire-maker's craft. The result that comes to the user from the pioneer in the making of red tires is the product of four years of careful experimenting.

"It will be noted that the non-skid projections are as sharp and clean-cut as if made with a knife. There is nothing rough, ragged or unfinished about them. Yet, at their outer edge they merge into the tire so that virtually no edge remains.

"These tires are full moulded on a steel mould, and the greatest care was exercised in getting the kind of projection design that would insure most effective operation. These projections are not as high or as deep as on some tires, for it has been found that big lumps of rubber have a tendency to press in the fabric and make bruises and bulges, which eventually may throw the whole tire out of shape.

"The greatest gain in the shape of the Empire Red is the elimination of the tendency to side-sway. This is achieved because the tire is a perfect circle and steers as readily and perfectly as a smooth tire."

BETTER THAN INSURANCE

With the number of automobiles in actual use—it is estimated more than 3,000,000 will be in service in the United Stats alone by next fall—and with automobile traffic conditions becoming more and more conjested in the larger cities and also in the country, the warning signal promises to play a still greater part in the safety first campaign than ever before. The Chicago factory of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation alone has been turning out hundreds of thousands of its signals, but its capacity has not been sufficient to satisfy the demand, and now it is doubling the size of the plant.

"The automobile warning signal is not only the best kind of protection against accidents to 'the other fellow,' but it is absolutely the most efficient insurance against accidents to yourself and your car," said a prominent automobile driver recently. "We drivers, who take pride in motoring carefully, are too prone to think that if we avoid running down some pedestrian we have accomplished all that could be desired in the driving end of the game. We forget that, at the same time, we must be on the alert to see that someone doesn't run us down."

TOUR TO YELLOWSTONE

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 21.—President H. H. Orme of the Minnesota State Automobile Association today held a meeting of the board of directors at which plans for a sociability automobile tour to Yellowstone National Park were completed. This run, which is scheduled to leave the Twin Cities on July 20, will eclipse all previous events of a similar nature.

Dates have been arranged so that the tourists will reach Medora, N. D., July 24, in time to participate in the ceremonies incident to opening a new $18,000 bridge across the Little Missouri River. Medora, as Col. Roosevelt's old home, is already making preparations for the event and the famous Oyster Bay resident has indicated that he will attend.

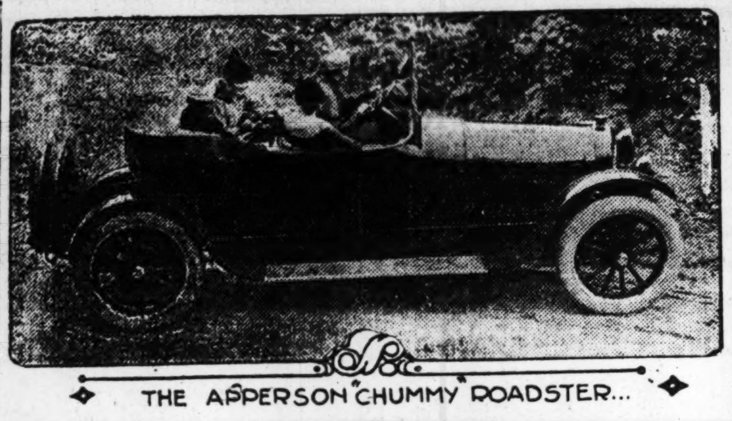
The tour will be over the National Parks Transcontinental Highway, which practically follows the Northern Pacific right-of-way to the Pacific Coast. That railway has consented to run a hotel train composed of Pullman sleeping cars, diners and a compartment observation car. It will stop at noon and night controls for the accommodation of tourists.

STEVENS NAME CHANGED.

Frank E. Stevens, head of Stevens-Waverley Auto Co., announces a change in name. The company will hereafter be known as "Stevens Motor Car Co. of St. Louis."

"This change is made necessary," said Mr. Stevens, by the fact that we have become local distributers for the Lexington Minute Man Six and for the Milburn Light Electric, and no longer handle the Waverley line.

"There will be no change in our electric garage service, but on the other hand we are better equipped than ever for handling our electric business."



THE APPERSON "CHUMMY" ROADSTER...

ACCESSORY MEN WILL VOTE ON TWO TICKETS

Two sets of candidates were nominated for offices in the Motor Accessory Trade Association at the meeting at the Lippe Cafe Tuesday night.

On the regular ticket are L. E. Allmon of the Missouri Auto Specialty Co. for president; E. L. Marvin, Imperial Oil Co., for vice president; A. R. Baxter, Phoenix Auto Supply Co., for treasurer; Robert E. Lee, Auto Review, for secretary. For directors: R. C. Buckley, Bittel-Leftwich Tire Service Co.; F. M. Moore, Firestone Tire and Rubber Co.; L. N. Coates, Commercial Auto Body Co.; E. L. Epperson, Neustadt Auto and Supply Co.; Allan H. Clark, Vehicle Top and Supply Co. (retiring president).

The opposition ticket is: W. E. Finney, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., for president; W. F. A. Uhlenhaut, Uhlenhaut Bros. Wagon Co., for vice president; A. C. Bauer, Bauer Oil Co., for treasurer; Robert E. Lee, Auto Review, for secretary. For directors: W. L. Ferrier Jr., Fred Campbell Auto Supply Co.; H. H. Swenson, Fisk Rubber Co.; Louis Moller Jr., Rapp & Moller Carriage Co.; Norman B. Champ, Champ Spring Co.; Allan H. Clark, Vehicle Top and Supply Co.

For sergeant-at-arms, George Schattgen, Fisk Tire and Rubber Co., and P. H. McGauley, American Carbon and Battery Co., were nominated. The new officers will be elected at the May meeting and installed at the June meeting. The Geller, Ward & Hassner Hardware Co. was elected to membership.

TOURING PERIOD SET FOR WEEK OF JULY 4

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 21.—While the road touring season reaches its greatest heights in the summer months, an effort will be made again this year to have the week in July which includes the "Glorious Fourth" figure as the maximum period, as was the case a year ago, when the American Automobile Association and the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce co-operated in accelerating motor mileage by calling upon the clubs of the owners' organization and the dealers of the makers to encourage every motorist to take to the highway.

At the April meeting of its executive board the A. A. A. accepted a suggestion of the Ohio State Association that the plan be repeated, in the belief that the two and one-half million motor car owners will demonstrate in added degree the wonderful ability of the self-propelled vehicle in covering distance and in making the people of the counties and states better acquainted with one another and thus solidifying a national sentiment which is essential to the adoption of an effective and comprehensive scheme of war preparedness.

FOR MILITARY ROADS

In the preparedness conference which took place in Washington, D. C., April 17, at the War College, the American Automobile Association and the Society of Automobile Engineers participated along with the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers in the deliberations which had in view the ultimate adoption of a concrete form of inter-related effort.

It was inevitable that the A. A. A. spokesmen, who were headed by President John A. Wilson, should call particular attention to the necessity of highways as a part of any effective defense proposition. It was set forth that the Bankhead bill, which is now pending in the United States Senate and provides for a combined Federal and State construction of whatever main roads may be agreed upon, would be an excellent start in the creation of a system which would lend itself to military purposes and still in times of peace serve postoffice and interstate needs.

HARDER TO BUY THAN SELL

"This is the year when buyers had better take some warnings at par," said Frank E. Stevens of the Stevens Motor Car Co., local Lexington distributer. "In past years the warning of shortage of production in the automobile line has come with absolute regularity, but has usually failed to materialize.

"This year the warning is a little different. In addition to the belief interpreted by every maker of large quantities of cars that the year's supply will be too small for the demand, there is the present fact that during the months of January, February and March there has been a tremendous shortage of automobile freight cars. That this condition will grow worse for the next four months rather than better, goes without saying.

"Take the experience of the Lexington-Howard Co. at Connersville, Ind., as an example. Ever since the announcement of their Minute Man Six, a light-weight six-cylinder automobile of full size, at $1075, they have been flooded with orders, and ever since the roads have been passable have found it necessary to wire their distributers who were anyways near, asking them to come in and drive away cars.

KING FIRST IN DETROIT

It is not generally known, but the King Motor Car Co. holds the distinction for having the first automobile to run on the streets of the world's greatest automobile manufacturing center—Detroit. The first King appeared in 1894.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

SAXON ENROLLED IN CAUSE OF SUFFRAGE

When the Saxons dominated England they were lords and masters of their women. Suffrage for the gentle sex was not dreamed of by them. But the ages have made changes and the Saxons have kept pace with the times.

For that reason alone the selection of a Saxon "Four" roadster as the car to bear Mrs. Alice Snitzer Burke from New York to San Francisco in the interest of the votes for women movement was in line with the progress of Saxon ideals. Officials of the Saxon Motor Car Co., however, consider it a distinct tribute to the sturdiness and reliability of the motor cars. Mrs Burke, accompanied by Miss Nell Richardson, expects to cover 10,000 miles of ground between New York and the Western coast, and every foot will be traveled in the little roadster. The departure of the "Golden Flyer," as the roadster has been christened, was made last Thursday from New York.

WIRE WHEEL ADVANTAGE

One advantage to be noted in the use of wire wheels is the fact that a spare wire wheel can always be carried and in case of damage to a wheel the car will not be laid up. For instance a Marmon 34 owner writes:

"I had a trolley car collide into the rear of my car last week, smashing the fender and breaking a few spokes in the rear wheel. I immediately drove up to the shop to get my car fixed up, so we straightened the fender the best we could until we got a new one from the factory and replaced the damaged wheel with the spare I carried on the back. It required only a short time to do this and off I went with my car. The spare wheel saved me from laying my car up until the arrival of a new wheel or had the old one repaired, if the car had been equipped with wood wheels."

VELIE TREBLES OUTPUT

The end of March completed a nine months' period in which the delivery of Velie Sixes was three times greater than that of a year ago. April will show the largest monthly business by over 400 per cent ever enjoyed by this Western company.

The popularity of the Velie Six is in evidence everywhere and Velie dealers are experiencing difficulty in obtaining enough cars to supply the rapidly increasing demand.

ARMY AVIATOR BUYS HUDSON SUPER SIX

"Lieut. Oscar Brindley of the United States aviation school at North Island, near San Diego, has placed a rush order for a Super-Six," says John H. Phillips, Hudson distributer for St. Louis territory.

"The noted army aviator is said to have owned every make of motor car. Naturally, he is a 'speed demon.' It is gossip around the Government aviation school that the Lieutenant resorted to the upper air for sensation because he had exhausted all possibility of a thrill riding in motor cars.

"Not long ago Lieut. Brindley sauntered into the Hudson salesroom at San Diego to take a peek at the Super-Six. He had heard of the wonderful stock car records it had made on the Sheepshead Bay Speedway. M. L. Sarsfield invited the Lieutenant for a spin in his demonstrator. The invitation was promptly accepted, and Lieut Brindley took the wheel. That ride convinced him that the Super-Six was the car he had long searched for. He gave the Super-Six a good trial, and it is needless to say that he knows the feel of a car. The best evidence of what he thought of it was the placing of a rush order for one."

CARE IN DRIVING SAVES TIRE EXPENSE

The largest part of the upkeep expense of an automobile can be held down by saving tires through proper driving and adjustments, according to George F. Heising, chief engineer of the Moon Motor Car Co.

With careful driving the average cost of tires in a year is 36 per cent of the total upkeep, according to Heising. He figures that means one set of tires in a year and a mileage of 6000 miles.

Careless triving will double the tire expense or increase the total annual expense from $425 to $580 per year, an increase of 36 per cent or a total tire expense of 54 per cent.

Here are points to remember in keeping down tire expense, according to Heising: avoid quick starts and stops, don't take corners on two wheels, avoid rocks, keep holes in casings plugged up, keep your brakes so adjusted that they will not lock the wheels completely.

S. A. E. WILL CRUISE.

One hundred eighty-five reservations for the 1916 summer cruise of Automobile Engineers have been made on the Steamship Noronic, which carries the party from Detroit June 12 on its four-day trip. At the present rate at which reservations are being made the capacity of the boat will be well taxed by May 1, the date on which the first allotment of staterooms will be made.

The Papers Committee has already secured acceptances from members of the society to present papers, and the indication is that the professional program will be of unusual excellence.

C. F. Kettering, vice president and general manager of the Dayton Engineering Laboratories Co., has agreed to present a paper on "Future Developments of the Automobile."

H. L. Horning, general manager and engineer of the Waukesha Motor Co., which is supplying a great many motors to manufacturers of agricultural tractors, will read a paper entitled, "Motors for Trucks and Tractors."

F. O. B. Detroit

If you are even remotely familiar with current automobile history, you know that the Fairfield "Six-46" is, by all odds, the most popular seven-passenger car in its price class.

But do you know the reason? Do you know why the "Fairfield" is so universally regarded as first choice among the light sixes?

We, of course, have some very definite ideas upon this point ourselves. But we much prefer that you shall gather the information from an absolutely unprejudiced source.

So, act upon this little suggestion. Talk to a man who owns a Fairfield. Ask him to tell you in plain terms just why he selected this car in preference to all others.

Then, it is our conviction that you will hear something like this: "I bought my Paige 'Six-46' because I was convinced that it offered more actual dollar-for-dollar value than any other motor car on the market."

Your friend who owns a Paige may not use these precise words and it is an absolute certainty that he will say a great deal more.

But—no matter how he may express it—that idea of value and quality will be foremost. And remember, Paige owners Know.

Trained Nurse Used Duffy's And Yeast For Diabetes

ELLEN REID, Trained Nurse

Some months ago, Van Norden, the celebrated specialist, startled his colleagues with the statement that he had successfully treated Diabetes cases with whiskey. As an absolutely pure medicinal whiskey, Duffy's Pure Malt could have made use of such an authoritative statement, but declined for lack of proof. Here, though, is real proof recently received from a nurse who in years of actual practice has found the use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey of immediate benefit in the dread disease, diabetes, and we quote it for what it is worth to the afflicted.

"I have been a nurse, but now retired. I have always taken your Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey when run down by overwork, and in Diabetes have recommended it to everyone, and with the aid of it and yeast from the brewery Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has cured Diabetes. Of course, all sugar and sweet things are out of the diet."—Ellen Reid, 189 100th St., New York City.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is an absolutely pure tonic-stimulant, made for medicinal purposes only. No claims are ever put forth for it which have not been proven in actual practice, and unprejudiced physicians never hesitate to recommend this valuable remedy to those whose systems need building up, for Duffy's is a most excellent and invigorating tonic. A tablespoon of Duffy's in equal amounts of water or milk before meals and on retiring benefits the digestion and assists assimilation.

"Get Duffy's and Keep Well."

Sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY. Beware of imitations.

NOTE Get Duffy's from your local druggist, grocer or dealer. $1.00 per bottle. If he cannot supply you, write us. Send for useful household booklet free.

PROFITABLE INVESTMENTS

Profit 300% Per Month

$100 Grew Into $3000 in Nine Months

For Investors in My First Company

HOW THIS WAS DONE:

The great Humble oil field is now producing millions for investors. I organized the Hoffman Oil Company and sold the shares at $10—par value. I used careful judgment in selecting a location to drill. We brought in the wells. In less than nine months these $10 shares were selling at $300—thirty times the original price. My company is only one of several that have made fortunes for investors in this rich field. I have now organized the HOFFMAN DEEP WELL COMPANY to drill for the GUSHER wells. These big gusher wells in the Humble field come in making 1000 to more than 20,000 barrels daily. One gusher may pay a MILLION DOLLARS. Oil is worth $1.00 a barrel. One company started in the gusher territory less than two years ago with $30,000 capital and now has assets of $3,000,000—a hundred times the original capital.

Fortunes in Gusher Wells

Read the newspaper clipping opposite, which is reprinted from the Houston Chronicle. Note the big profits I made for investors in my first company—and my first company operated only in the "shallow well" district at Humble, while the HOFFMAN DEEP WELL COMPANY is going after the big GUSHER wells that pay thousands of dollars daily. One gusher making 10,000 barrels a day would pay about 300 per cent MONTHLY on our CAPITAL.

Wonderful Opportunity

We offer small investors the most wonderful opportunity to join us in the HOFFMAN DEEP WELL COMPANY ever known in the history of oil. The evidence of success IS success. We have made others money—here is a chance that may make YOU $100 for every $1.00 you invest. Shares $10.

Invest now with successful oil men. The shares are offered at $10—par, for a short time. Prominent business men and bankers invest in my companies—because they know Hoffman has "made good."

THE HOFFMAN DEEP WELL COMPANY, Inc.

H. H. HOFFMAN, President.
507 Fannin St., Houston, Tex.

From the Houston Chronicle. February 17, 1916.

$360,000 PRICE OFFERED FOR HOFFMAN WELLS

The Hoffman Oil Company is entertaining a proposition for the sale of its entire holdings in the Humble field at a price which is said to be $360,000. A 30-day option has been taken and it is expected that the deal will be closed before the expiration of that period.

H. H. Hoffman organized the company with a capital stock of $12,000 about the 1st of last July. All he had was a lease on eight and a half acres in the old part of the Humble field. Shortly after he organized his company he purchased 11 a[illegible] on which were five old wells pro[illegible]ing an average of not more than 40 barrels per day. Then he drilled 12 new wells, and the total production of the company today is estimated at 2000 barrels daily.

Mr. Hoffman admitted Thursday that he had given an option for the sale of the company's holdings, but preferred not to disclose the names of the prospective purchasers for the present. If the deal goes through it will mean a return of 3[illegible] for 1 on the original investment of the promoters.

Write and let me send you maps of the oil fields—my large prospectus showing pictures of the big gusher wells that have made millions—the kind we are going after. Write today.

Big Profits to Investors

Others have invested $100 with me and it has turned into $3000. I believe the HOFFMAN DEEP WELL COMPANY will prove to be the greatest profit maker of any company I ever organized. We have a ten-acre lease—enough for 20 wells—in the Humble district which we will drill for GUSHERS. We have other holdings that I think will prove very rich in oil. Every one who joins me in this enterprise I expect to make enormous profits.

CHILDREN DEFY SHELLS TO SELL WARES AT FRONT

Waifs Dodge From One Ruined House to Another Offering Sweets to Soldiers.

Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, April 8.—Percival Phillips, special correspondent of the Daily Express, assigned to the British headquarters in France, send this story of the way children along the war front defy shells, large and small, both in play and the conduct of small commercial enterprises with soldiers going to and from the trenches as customers:

The Distinguished Neutral was very silent as he drove back to headquarters after some hair-raising adventures at the front. There was plenty to think about. He had dodged rifle grenades, taken cover from German howitzer shells, watched four spirited fights in the air, seen the Tower Bridge at close range, and bought gallons of coffee for a battalion of muddy giants on their way to rest billets. Altogether a busy and eventful morning.

I asked him what impressed him most. "Children selling chocolates under fire," was his unexpected reply. "Two ragged, white-faced children, a boy and a girl, with baskets, dodging furtively from one ruined house to another, and offering their sweets to the soldiers just out of the trenches, with German shells whistling overhead and exploding all around them. I wonder if they'll believe me at home?" he added reflectively.

Used to the Zone of Fire.

One gets used to seeing children playing and working within the zone of fire, just as the children themselves are used to seeing field guns firing in their father's garden, but visitors invariably are astounded at their presence and at the ordinary village life, of which they are a part, maintained with such incredible tenacity and courage.

Why are they allowed to remain, do you ask? They have nowhere else to go. Even when their miserable cottages are pounded to pieces by the German batteries, or military necessity requires their sudden removal to a point further behind the lines, they depart unwillingly. They would rather remain in the district they have always known, though daily in danger of death, than join the army of refugees and live on charity. So they cling stubbornly to a one-room mud and plaster hovel when their neighbors' huts have vanished under the rain of shells, and the children still play beside the muddy road where wounded men are moving painfully towards a dressing station

Mystery in How They Live.

The women and old men who haunt this region of death always have a pleasant smile and a courteous word for the stranger who addresses them, and the children shout English phrases with great glee. It is a mystery how many of them live. A few keep little cafes, where thin French beer and coffee are sold to thirsty Tommies, and in many cottage windows the shattered glass has been replaced by a wooden board, converted into a shop sign—a labored effort in ink or charcoal, usually reading: "Tea and woodbines," or "Postcards, omlets ritin papper for sale."

The children—like those encountered by the Distinguished Neutral—are sent out with stocks of chocolate and cigarettes and post cards of ruined towns, with which to waylay the tired soldiers who have finished their turn in the trenches.

Some of these juvenile merchants have erected open-air stalls along the highway to the firing line, by the simple process of setting a plank across two boxes or piles of stones. Their wares are arrayed in neat rows, and they sit behind them solemnly, making change and conducting negotiations in quaint fragments of English. They like to be chaffed, but they know how many sous make a franc.

Know the Language of Shells.

They understand the language of shells as well as the soldiers. They know when the warning whistle overhead has the note of real danger, and you will see them flatten their poor little bodies under the shelter of a wall, wait for the explosion—perhaps in the next field—then, when the splinters are spent, return calmly to their post. Between bombardments they laugh and quarrel among themselves like any other children, and great is the competition among them when a fresh battalion halts momentarily on its way to or from the trenches.

They have grown so accustomed to war that one wonders whether they will ever again grow accustomed to peace. Aeroplanes circle above them, the shrill chatter of the rival machine guns punctuated by the thud-thud of anti-aircraft shrapnel against the blue sky, yet even when the resting soldiers are sufficiently interested to rouse themselves from the roadside to watch a thrilling duel in the air, these children will not stop an angry argument or miss the chance of selling a packet of post cards by staring at what is to them a commonplace spectacle.

Cellar Refuge From Shells.

When the Germans begin bombarding a town occupied by civilians the children run to help their mothers put up the shutters in front of the tiny shops before sheltering in the cellars. The women call them from their play, as at the beginning of a storm, and they go reluctantly. The hail exhausted, they reappear instantly and scramble in the filth for hot fragments of shell.

Lately I motored through a village that had been bombarded by the Germans. Shells had just fallen near the street through which I passed; one had torn a hole in the paving, and the footway was strewn with bits of brick.

Some 20 or 30 boys and girls in their Sunday clothes (they still wear Sunday clothes, even in front of the British guns) were crowded around a large wooden shed a few feet distant. I thought some of them must have been killed or injured by the shelling a quarter of an hour before.

Not at all. They were waiting for a cinema to open.

Like a Boy at 50 Bubbling Over With Vitality—Taking Iron Did It

Doctor says Nuxated Iron is greatest of all strength builders—Often increases the strength and endurance of delicate, nervous folks 200 per cent in two weeks' time.

Not long ago a man came to me who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of 20 and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man; in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking iron—nuxated iron had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 46 careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 a miracle of vitality and his face beaming with the buoyancy of youth. As I have said a hundred times over, iron is the greaest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take simple nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved, who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver and heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their diseases was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes through you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while, double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from 10 to 14 days' time simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate or tincture of iron simply to save a few cents. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated like nuxated iron if you want it to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete or prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the affray, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for the lack of iron.—E. Sauer, M. D.

NOTE.—Nuxated Iron, recommended above by Dr. Sauer, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach; on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion, as well as for nervous, rundown conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in Nuxated Iron that they offer to forfeit $100 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in 10 days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley Drug Co. and all other druggists.—ADV.

MORE PAY FOR SCOTCH PASTORS

Their Salaries Depend on Price Paid for Grain.

GLASGOW, Scotland, April 22.—One result of the phenomenal grain prices ruling in Scotland is that the salaries of the parish ministers of the Established Church will be increased this year by anything from £50 to £200 ($250 to $1000). This is due to the fact that the amount of these salaries is governed by the prices of wheat and barley, and big prices for the former mean big wages for the parson.

On the other hand, the professors of divinity in the Scottish universities will suffer a loss in salary of $500 or so. Like the parish ministers, their stipend fluctuates with the price of grain, but when grain goes up their rewards go down.

Cat Carried in Man's Funeral.

ISLINGTON, England, April 22.—At the funeral of Henry J. Custance of this place, who fell and received fatal injuries in trying to rescue a cat from a tree, the cat figured in the proceedings, being carried in a hamper.

PRIZES TO INDUCE ARTISTS TO PAINT ST. LOUIS SCENES

League Has Plan to Encourage Exposition of City from Sketcher's Viewpoint.

By F. E. A. CURLEY,
Former Curator of the St. Louis Art Museum.

The honors awarded at the St. Louis Salon by the jury of three New York artists, who came here for that purpose a week ago, are still the topic of the art world.

It is a larger world than many people suppose, as is shown, for instance, by the fact that 1500 men and women have enrolled in the Art League as regular members, contributing $10 each annually for the promotion of St. Louis art. These Art League members with their families form the nucleus for a large attendance at the St. Louis Salon. The league members contribute the grand prize that carries with it a cash award of $500 for the best work of art, and many of them have friends among the 62 exhibitors who succeeded in getting their work past the jury of selection and hanging committee.

With so many recognized artists contributing, and six other prizes also in the field, there are many currents of personal interest in the St. Louis Salon, and now that a far stronger appeal is made to the general public than formerly was the case, there is a good deal larger attendance of people who have no direct concern in the exhibition and simply are interested in seeing good pictures and sculpture and in noting the progress of St. Louis toward the coveted status of an "art center."

Views of Many Limited.

It is, of course, a mistake when people whose views are limited to the four walls of a business office underrate St. Louis' interest in a matter of such varied and broad appeal as art.

This St. Louis exhibition really is so good that friends of many artists are to be forgiven if they feel disappointed at the allotment of prizes.

In several instances works that might have been chosen were deemed ineligible, as far as certain prizes were concerned, because their creators won the prizes last year. In other instances the jury must have found it hard to choose. We are fortunate enough to find there are some highly meritorius works of art without prize tablets upon themm.

Seldom has so beautiful a work of sculpture been seen in the Guild Galleries, as the alluring little baby's head "Phillip's Sister," by Caroline Risque. There is a tendency in juries to feel that the major prizes for sculpture should go to a large or monumental production, and yet the delight and charm of such a work as this can belong only to art of a high type and assuredly commands recognition.

The award of the Art League grand prize of $500 to a woman, and for so beautiful a work of sculpture as Clara Pfeiffer Garrett's "Mother and Daughter" of course was popular. And hen the ward of first sculpture prize to Victor Holm for his ideal figure "His Father's Sword," was inevitable. Holm's is the most serious and "sculptural" work of plastic art in the exhibition.

In Fred G. Carpenter we have a painter who is likely to attract a large measure of national attention. It is merely a matter of Carpenter's "keeping on" to get recognition as a big American artist. If we don't soon appreciate him better than we do, he no doubt will leave St. Louis, like other notable artists before him, to go where they can appreciate him better, to New York, that is to say. He has not made plans to leave, but his best work now is well up to the quality of "first line" pictures in our national exhibitions, and a welcome in the art world is assured him.

Of Carpenter's pictures in the present show, I prefer the decorative and romantic "Landscape with Figures," but there is rare color in the canvas with the larger nude and other figures, called "A Midsummer Day," and many artists thought the honor would go to that work. The other two examples hold up to a strong general standard, and show that Carpenter's art is no "flash in the pan."

St. Louis Landscape Scene.

The first landscape prize is one of the most interestingly awarded honors of the exhibition, for more than one reason. It brings to attention one of the newer contributors to the exhibition galleries of the city, and it brings forward the possibilities of St. Louis itself for the discerning artist. This exhibition honor was bestowed upon Frank B. Nuderscher, for a picture called "The Throb of Industry," and shows a train on the levee, with the Eads Bridge and the river. It has the quality of life in it.

Nuderscher's picture is one of several in the exhibition which because of their subject matter distinctively belong to St. Louis. Of course most of the landscapes in the show were painted in or about this city, but many of them might as well have been painted anywhere, as far as local feeling is concerned, while Nuderscher's work portrays something that is a vital part of the city.

Each year some new note has been struck in the St. Louis Salon. Now a movement is on foot in the Art League to lay stress upon St. Louis as a theme or topic for artists. It is proposed to join forces with all interests that want to bring St. Louis to the front, and encourage artists to portray St. Louis scenes. Suitable special prizes are to be offered for the best art interpretations of the city, and the next competitive exhibition of St. Louis art is likely to blossom out with an exposition of the city from the artists' point of view. Plans for this development are being laid by the League's Committee on Local Art and Artists. All the artists are to be invited to include distinctive and characterful St. Louis subjects among their contributions to next year's Salon.

The series of brilliant interpretations of St. Louis by the talented young St. Louisan, Hugh Ferris, recently published in the rotogravure section of the Post-Dispatch, provide a splendid illustration of what would result from such a movement in the local art world.

Albert Spalding

America's greatest violinist, proving by actual comparison that all of his brilliant technique, all of the poetry of his interpretations and all of the rich tone of his priceless violin are faithfully re-created by Edison's new art.

Spalding is one of the many artists who have made similar tests of Edison's new art with identical results. Hear Edison's re-creation of Spalding's masterly bowing, then hear Spalding himself.

Yes, "More distinctive than a Strad"

The NEW EDISON

We want to prove to you that Edison's new invention is incomparably superior to anything you have ever heard before.

You see Spalding's picture on this page. Come to us and hear Edison's Re-Creation of Spalding's superb art. Spalding's picture is but an outline of himself. Edison's Re-Creation of his work is what the word signifies—the absolute re-creation of every tone and expression in this violin virtuoso's masterly bowing.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of Amelia Bachmann, who died April 20, 1913.

We miss thee from our home, dear mother,
We miss thee from thy place;
A shadow o'er our life is cast,
We miss the sunshine of thy face.
We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest care;
Our home is dark without thee,
We miss thee everywhere.

Sadly missed by her CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of my dear husband and father, John Hartman, who passed away April 24, 1914.

Two years it will be since we laid
you to rest,
And placed your cold hands upon your dear breast,
In silence you suffered, with patience
you bore,
Till God called you home to suffer no more.

Sadly missed by
WIFE, DAUGHTERS AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear daughter, Genevieve Mostert, who passed away one year ago, April 24, 1915.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled.
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled,
And while she lies in peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.

Sadly missed by
PARENTS, SISTERS, BROTHERS, AND ALL THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

In Memoriam.

In sad but loving remembrance of our dearly beloved mother, Mary Mangan, who died April 24, 1915.

The Lord said you have finished,
Come up higher, mother, so dear;
You have won a crown in heaven,
But the pain you suffered here.
Those who saw you in your casket,
Pure and white, and oh, so fair,
Thought you were the light of heaven
As you lay so sweetly there.
Rest in peace, our dear mother.

MANGAN FAMILY.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of my dear wife and mother, Minnie Michalek, who passed away April 20, 1915. Just one year ago since our dear mother passed away.

A loving mother, true and kind,
No friend like her on earth we'll find;
God called her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.

Sadly missed by her
HUSBAND, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In affectionate memory of our dear beloved mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Schleer, who died April 26, 1915.

Peaceful be your sleep, dear mother,
'Tis sweet to breathe your name,
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
All the world is gray with shadows,
Clouds have dimmed the sunset
glow,
Just a year ago, dear, since you left us,
Yet it has been so long ago.
We often sit and think of you,
When all alone,
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.

Sadly missed by her loving
DAUGHTERS, SONS-IN-LAW AND GRANDCHILDREN.

GIVE YOUR WANT AD A RESULT CIRCULATION

Tenants for furnished or unfurnished Houses, Flats and Apartments are obtained by means of the WANT ADS printed in the POST-DISPATCH. The Post-Dispatch prints more For Rent ads than the four other St. Louis newspapers combined. A RESULT circulation is behind this remarkable record.

"EUREKA"
I HAVE FOUND
The best built and most comfortable six-room bungalow in the State of Missouri, situated on the highest point in St. Louis County, three-quarters of a mile northwest of the Frisco station at Eureka. This bungalow is built of the very best material that is used in building business, and was built by the owner for a home, and not for sale; but on account of business the owner had to leave the county. The house is surrounded by 10 acres of nice ground, on which there is quite a little orchard and nice vineyard. This is without question one of the most beautiful sites in St. Louis County, and anyone looking for a home should not pass this by. For price and admission card, see

GROWING FAT
GLEN ECHO

"How all things grow in the sweet Spring Weather,
All things grow beautiful together,
The clouds grow soft, the sky grows blue,
The grass grows green, the earth grows new,
The children dear grow hale and strong,
And the days, the very days, grow long."

It is the birthright and the need of every child to have that close communion with nature which is impossible in the crowded city.

Have you noticed the delight it gives your children to be taken to the park? How they enjoy the trees, the grass, the flowers, the sunshine? How their eyes brighten and their cheeks glow after a day in the open?

Don't you owe it to these dear ones to see that they get their birthright—a chance to grow vigorous and strong in the open country and fresh, pure air?

Bring the wife and children and come today to

GLEN ECHO PARK SECOND SUBDIVISION

On the Lucas and Hunt Road, opposite Glen Echo Golf Club. In the direct line of the city's westward growth. Telford streets, granitoid walks, water and electric lights.

Prices and Terms Easy.

To go to Glen Echo take the Kirkwood-Ferguson line going north at Wellston, get off at the Lucas and Hunt Road, walk three blocks south or take the St. Peter's car on the St. Charles line at Wellston direct to the property. Fare five cents beyond the city limits.

BEAUTIFUL

SOUTHMOOR
—BRENTMOOR DISTRICT

Southmoor is the most attractive proposition in the Brentmoor district. Owners of this exceptional property either live in Southmoor or Brentmoor, or expect to build homes there. They are interested in securing the very best conditions and, not being forced to sell, purchasers are assured of protection and that lots will be disposed of only to desirable home builders.

UNDER NO CONDITION WILL SOUTHMOOR LOTS BE AUCTIONED

Southmoor is on Pennsylvania avenue—300 yards south of Wydown avenue—immediately south of Brentmoor and Forest Ridge. It overlooks Forest Park, Washington University and Hillcrest on the east and the broad valleys of Webster Groves and Kirkwood on the west. It is from 60 to 80 feet higher than Lindell boulevard at Skinker road.

Southmoor's restrictions and improvements are practically the same as Brentmoor's. Streets, sidewalks, gutters, sewers and gas are all in and paid for, and are of the best.

Lots are of a generous width, with an average depth of about 200 feet, but not large enough to be burdensome. Combining lots 19 and 21, which can be developed with an interesting landscape treatment, would give a lot the same size as each of the two lots in West Brentmoor, in the center block now occupied by houses, at a price of 35 per cent below the purchase prices of those lots.

Southmoor is convenient to schools and churches.

Go out today to Southmoor and make your selection.

Take the Clayton car to Pennsylvania avenue and walk 300 yards south to the entrance, or drive out Lindell boulevard and Wydown avenue.

As a special inducement to early buyers, we are authorized to make very low prices.

See us for prices, plats and further information.

Auction Land Sale!

To close the estate of Lavina Blackwell, deceased, I, the undersigned, Executor of said estate, will sell at PUBLIC AUCTION, to the highest bidders, for cash, on Thursday, May 4, 1916

BEGINNING AT NOON AT THE Courthouse at Farmington, Mo.

800 acres of farm, timber and mineral land, said land being located at Blackwell, Mo., 50 miles south of St. Louis, on the Iron Mountain R. R. The timber is the virgin growth of a century, grand oak, suitable for sawing for lumber for buildings. Thousands of R. R. ties, millions of cords of wood.

Barytes and lead ore underlie the entire tract, which can be mined by hand enough to pay the cost of the land. The Barytes mines were in operation up to the time of the death of the owner. Shipping point right on the land.

Tie and Timber Men, Miners, Speculators, Organizers of Syndicates, Take Notice!

The Finest Brick Cottages in South St. Louis

On Germania st., one-half block east of the southern terminus of the Cherokee car line.

We have just completed 15 brick cottages, with 4 rooms and bath, hot and cold water, wired for electric lights, piped for gas, cemented cellar throughout, fine cement walks around each house and back to alley.

If one of these houses were built today at the present prevailing prices of building material it would cost every cent of $2700; however, we have built them at the prices prevailing last fall, and can sell you one of them at the extremely low price of $2300.

Take a trip to the end of Cherokee car line and inspect them. They are extra well built and well arranged. You will be surprised what a big bargain is being offered you here. We will take several hundred dollars cash down and the balance on easy monthly payments.

Don't miss to look at these bargains today and make your selection.

GOING FAST!

Little River Drainage District lands in Southeast Missouri are going fast; we have sold 60 tracts in 14 months; $40 up for cut-over land, $75 up for improved; have absolutely nothing to offer in trade and therefore decline to answer trade propositions. Box D-30, Post-Dispatch.

YOUR LAST CHANCE!

1916 will see all Little River Drainage District lands in firm hands and most of it permanently held; I believe unimproved land now selling from $30 to $65 will not be obtainable below $100 before the close of 1917; I and my correspondents have listed over 50,000 acres of cut-over unimproved land, which we will sell at $35 to $55; some of this land is as fine as there is in the entire district and is today well worth double what we are selling it for; terms, one-fourth to one-half cash, balance to suit. Box D-224, Post-Dispatch.

IT IS FORESIGHT!

Not hindsight that lays the foundation of great fortunes; the undeveloped lands in the Little River Drainage District, Southeast Missouri, present a rare opportunitw for investment at present prices, which are ridiculously low. I can sell you as good unimproved land as can be found in the district at $40 to $65. The drainage tax will average under $15. It can be cleared for $20 and much of it is $300 land; I have inspected every tract listed with me and none of the soil looks under the $200 class. I have 28 tracts aggregating nearly 12,000 acres to offer and am satisfied I will sell them all before snow flies. Are you to be one of the lucky purchasers? Box D-272, Post-Dispatch.

SOUTHEAST MISSOURI

The Garden Spot of the United States

On account of the rush to the West, little attention has been paid to the Drainage District of Missouri, and for this reason the many bargains and opportunities offered in Missouri have been passed to await the return of the prodigal. But since the mad rush is over, man in his common way of thinking has come to know the "Booms are nothing" but "Mother Earth is All." Missouri, with its acres of rich (free from rocks) level land, good water, good health is the place to make good. See

DAIRY FARM

The finest of its kind in the State; 190 acres, two miles west of Hancock, 144 miles west of St. Louis on the Frisco Railroad; 150 acres of high second bottom land, which positively does not overflow. The balance is in timber and pasture. The land lies level and smooth, not rough or broken; has no stone or stumps on it; a fairly good farmhouse, with all the necessary barns and outbuildings. The entire place is fenced and cross-fenced, and the finest water supply from well and spring in Pulaski County. Anyone figuring on getting a place of this kind ought not to pass this by, for at the price, $25 per acre, it is the cheapest piece of ground on the Frisco Railroad.

MISSOURI

SUCCESSFUL
HIGHLY PRODUCTIVE
1000-ACRE ORCHARD AND FARM
WILL SELL
20-ACRE FARMS FOR ONLY
$300,
ON TERMS OF
$10.00 CASH AND $5.00 MONTHLY,
WITHOUT INTEREST OR TAXES.

I am having splendid success with my 1000-acre orchard and farm in Southeast Missouri. Have 100 more acres in peaches, 133 in apples, 6 in grapes, 8 in strawberries, 4 in blackberries and raspberries, and 150 in vegetables, grains and grasses. The balance will be planted to grapes and fruit trees next spring. The peaches have been running over $100 per acre, berries and grapes $300, tomatoes $100 ($10 per ton at the canning factory), etc. Apples just coming into bearing.

I have a large amount of land surrounding my 100-acre orchard and farm, much more than I will ever be able to get under cultivation myself, and will sell 10 or 20 acre tracts at $300, on terms of $10.00 cash and $5.00 monthly, without interest or taxes.

FARMS FREE TO LIMITED NUMBER.

For a limited number of persons I have an arrangements whereby they can obtain a farm tract free.

My location is in Southeast Missouri, midway between the Ozarks and the lowlands, elevation above the sea level about 850 feet.

Before offering any of the land for sale I went to the authorities of the seven nearby states having the so-called "Blue Sky" laws and asked them to pass on the printed matter I had prepared and to send their expert land men to inspect my orchard, farm and land offered. After doing this, and also investigating my financial responsibility and past business record, they quickly granted permission to sell my land in their states.

A few acres here, properly looked after, will bring you a splendid income, besides providing the best of everything for your own use. $100 to $800 clear profit per acre can be made. Fruits, berries, vegetables, grains and grasses will produce these results. A single cow can be made to pay $12 clear profit every month. $100 will build you a cozy, comfortable home in our mild climate that will seem like a little palace compared with the ordinary, crowded brick-bound city flat.

With a few chickens, pigs and a cow, fruits, berries, vegetables and a little meadow to start with, your health, wealth and happiness come into your own hands. You are boss of all, with room to grow, and no one is big enough to come in and give you orders. We have good schools, churches, rural free delivery and mutual rural telephone lines and good towns.

FREE RAILWAY FARE

to purchasers; 90 days' time to visit land and make your selection; money back after one year if dissatisfied; payments stop in case of death, money loaned for improvements; perfect title; immediate possession.

I have made about 50 kodak views in and around the big orchard and farm and on the land I am offering and have had them reproduced in a 16-page pamphlet, in which also I have placed all the information to be obtained regarding the topography, productivity, products and about everything you want to know; also 50 letters from men in St. Louis and nearby towns who have gone down to look and who have bought. I'll gladly send you a copy if you will write.

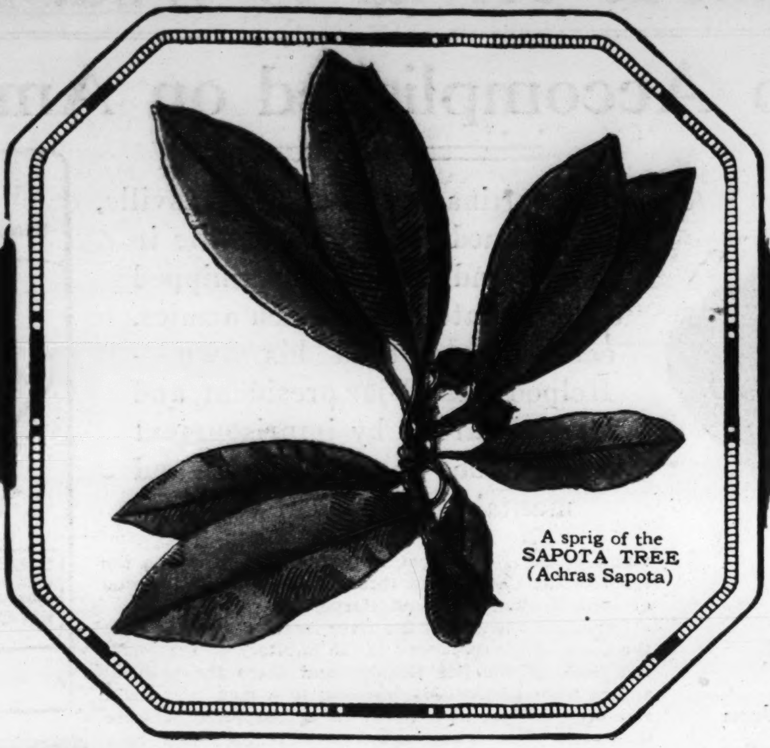
HIAWATHA'S WEDDING JOURNEY

THIS is a reproduction of one of 50 paintings by J. L. G. Ferris, each of which depicts some incident in American history or legend. The whole 50 have been exhibited recently in Congress Hall, Philadelphia. This is an idealization of one of the happiest phases of Longfellow's poem, when Hiawatha has won Laughing Water for his bride and is taking her away to his own country.



A sprig of the SAPOTA TREE (Achras Sapota)

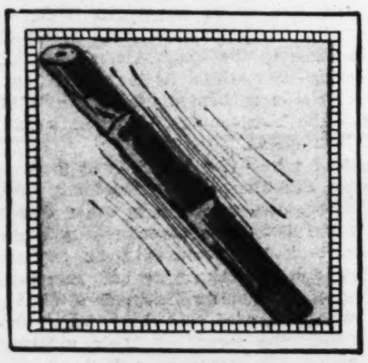
PEPPERMINT (Mentha Piperita)

The gum from Nature's Gardens

To most people chewing gum is a mystery. They may know that different chewing gums are made of different ingredients. But that is about all.

There's no mystery about your Sterling Gum. As makers we're glad to tell you its ingredients. Their photographs we show above. The natural sap of the Sapota Tree gives Sterling Gum its velvety body. The other ingredients are the flavors and sweetening. Each is a natural product of some tree or plant.

Combined they make your Sterling Gum "the gum from Nature's Gardens." Pure, delicious—made in the sunny Sterling Kitchens where clean white gloves cover the hands of every worker.



SUGAR CANE (Saccharum Officinarum)

CINNAMON (Cinnamomum Cassia)

CORN (Zea Mays)

These 7 points of excellence make Sterling a better chewing gum:

Point 1—Crowded with flavor
Point 2—Velvety body—NO GRIT
Point 3—Crumble-proof
Point 4—Sterling purity
Point 5—From a daylight factory
Point 6—Untouched by hands

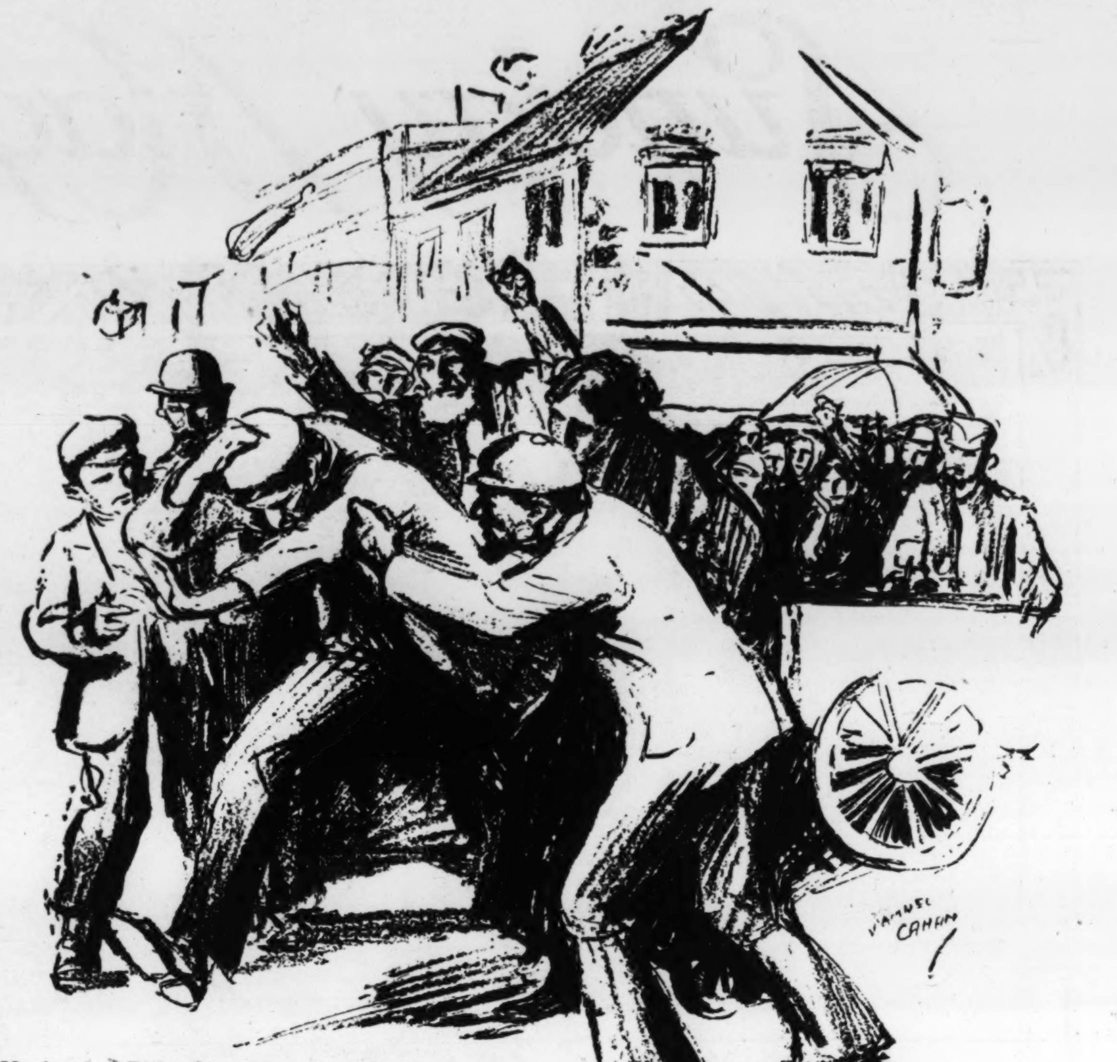
London, Why Don't You Burn?

NO. 11 OF "OFF FOR AMERICA," THE STORY OF A YIDDISH FAMILY EXODUS

By SHOLOM ALEICHEM,
the "Yiddish Mark Twain."
Authorized Translation by Marion Weinstein.
Illustrated by Samuel Cahan.

Copyright, 1916, by the Press Publishing Co. (The New York World.)

YOUNG Muttel, the irrepressible boy optimist, is telling here the humorous and pathetic adventures of his family—Russian Jews who have left their native village and set out on the roundabout migration to the land of promise, America.



"My brother Elihu flung himself on Pini and dragged him out, wrinkled and faded like an old hat."

NEVER in all my life have I seen such a county fair as this one here in London. I mean, there is no fair in London, but London itself is a fair.

What a thumping and a ringing and a whistling and a banging! And people! People like poppy seed, like ants! Where can so many people be coming from and where in the world are they running? I suppose they are hungry, or they are leaving the city. Otherwise, why must they push so and shove with their elbows and throw a person down and trample all over him?

I am speaking of Pini. Our chum Pini, if you remember, is near-sighted. Besides, he has a habit of walking with his head in the air and tangling up his feet. An absent-minded angel. His head flies.

His first how-do-you-do he got at the station. We had just crawled out of the train when an accident happened. Pini flew out first, one trouser up, one sock down, his tie under his ear, as usual. I have never seen Pini so excited. He began to shower queer words, as is his habit: "London! England! Disraeli! Buckle! History of Civilization!" * * * It was impossible to quiet him. But in less than two minutes our chum Pini was sprawling on the ground and people were striding over him as you stride over a log.

So my brother Elihu flung himself on Pini and dragged him out, wrinkled and faded like an old hat. That was number one.

His second dose was handed him that very day, and, as luck would have it, in the Jewish street that they call by that funny name "Viteshepel" (Whitechapel). There where they sell fish and meat, prayer books, prayer fringes, apples, cider, sponge cake, cookies, pieces of herring, prayer shawls, lemons, camel's hair, eggs, glasses, pots, rubbers, noodles, brooms, whistles, pepper, rope—just as they do back home. Not a hair's difference! Even to the dirt!

We were delighted when we laid eyes on "Viteshepel." Pini was too delighted. "Berditshev!" he burst out, "Help! Children of Israel! We are not in London, we are back in Berditshev!"

I look at Viteshepel" and I think to myself:

"If London is like this, what can it be like in America?"

But if you talk to Brocha, she says London might just as well have burned down before we came here. The first minute we set foot in London my sister-in-law Brocha took a dislike to the city.

"You call this a city?" she says. "It's not a city, it's a Gehenna! A fire should have swallowed it even a year ago!"

My brother Elihu tries to apologize for the city, to show up its good points. But it's no use. Brocha keeps on pouring pitch and brimstone on the city and wishing it should burn to a cinder. Pini's wife Taibel backs her up.

My mamma says: "Perhaps God will take pity, and this here London will be our last affliction."

But we three: I and Elihu and Pini think the world of London. The tumult just suits us, and the way it seethes.

What does it matter to us that it seethes? Let it seethe. The only thing that doesn't suit us is that we go around without work. We are looking for a committee, and we can't find one. The people we ask either don't know or don't want to tell us. They have no time. They are busy. They run!

But we must have a committee. We cannot get along without a committee, if for no reason but because we haven't the cash to drag ourselves to America. My brother Elihu's pocket is empty now. The money that we took in for our half of the house went away like smoke.

Pini laughs at Elihu. He says: "What will you do with that pocket of yours now?" * * * Elihu gets wild. He hates to have anybody crack jokes. He is a killjoy. Pini calls him a "wet blanket."

I love Pini because he is always jolly. Since we struck London he is jollier than ever. He says there in Cracow, Lemburg, Antwerp, Vienna, a man must speak German. But here in London it's a pleasure; a man can talk Yiddish as at home—that half-Yiddish, half-Russian.

That language of theirs is even worse than German. Brocha says that three Englishmen may die for one German. She says, where in the world has a person heard that a street should have a name "Viteshepel" and money should be called "ipenny," "tupenny," "tripenny"? There is another word, too, that has to do with money: "fife." With this here "fife" we had some time.

You know already that we are looking for a committee in London. Finding a committee in London is just like finding a needle in a haystack. But there is a God in the world!

We were walking along "Viteshepel" one day, in the dark. In London there is no daytime and no morning. In London it is always dark. A Jew came toward us with a short coat and a funny hat and searching eyes.

"I could swear that you are Jews."

So says the Jew with the short coat to us and Pini answers him:

"Hm! And WHAT Jews. From Jews' land"——

"Would you perhaps like to do a mitzvah (good deed)?"

So the Jew says, and Pini answers him:

"For instance? For example?"

"I have Jahr Zeit (anniversary for the dead) and cannot leave my house. I need a few more people for a minyun (quorum of 10). * * * Is the little fellow bar mitzvah (13) already, or not yet?"

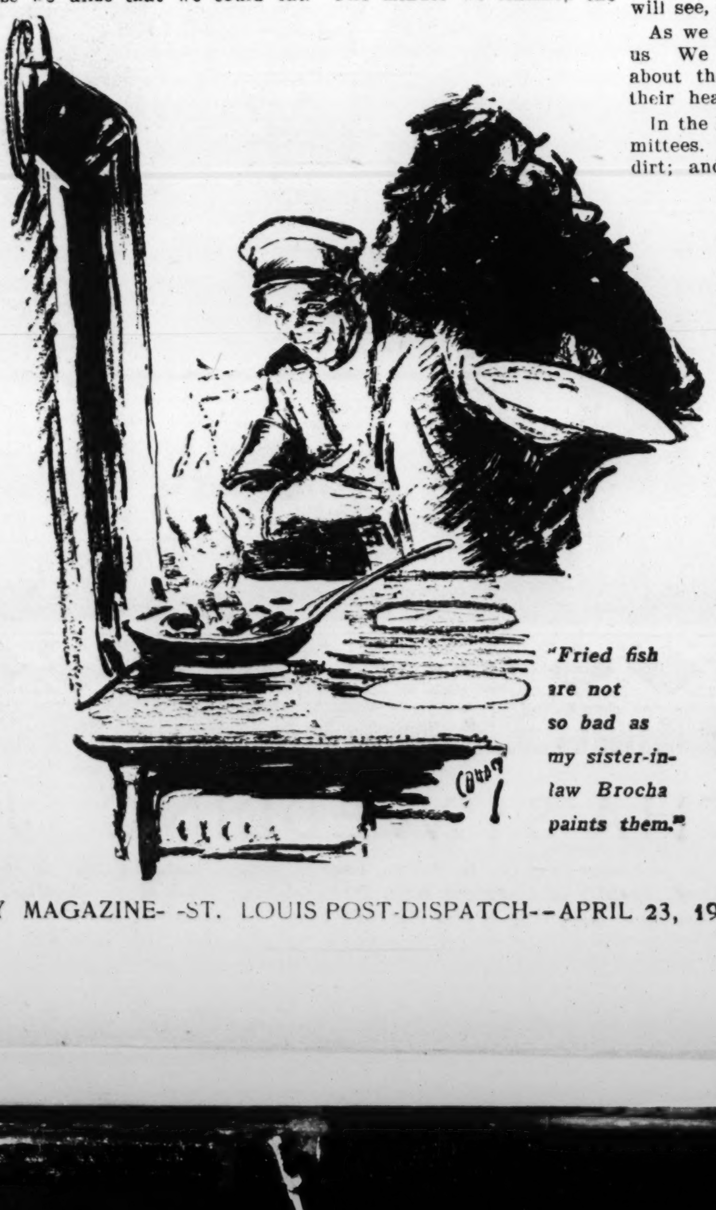
He means me. Now that just suits me that he calls me "fellow," and thinks that I am already bar mitzvah.

Up the stairs in the dark we scrambled after him and came into a dingy room packed with little smudgy children and filled with the thick smell of fried fish. There was no minyun yet. There were still seven men short. The Jew asked us to take a seat and he himself jumped down to the street to see if he could catch a few more Jews. He jumped around until he scraped up a minyun.

Meanwhile I got acquainted with the smudgy little children and stole a look in the oven. Fish were frying there. Fried fish are not so bad as my sister-in-law Brocha paints them. If somebody would give me a little piece of fried fish right now, yum!

I think that Brocha herself would not refuse it either. We all fasted nearly a whole day. We have been living now for several days on a piece of herring and radish. In "Viteshepel" you can get good black radish.

The Jew would do a smart thing if he asked us to stay and take a bite. But it seems he does not begin to realize that we could eat. The minute we finished the afternoon prayers and he swallowed the kadish (prayers for the dead) he thanked us right away for our trouble and told us we could go. But my brother Elihu wanted a little favor from him, so he struck up a conversation with him about the committee, and, in the meantime, threw a look at the fried fish and swallowed hard.



"Fried fish are not so bad as my sister-in-law Brocha paints them."

The Jew held the doorknob with one hand with the other told us something about the committee, not very cheerful news.

In the first place, the Jew said, there does not begin to be a committee at all. That is, there is a committee, there are several committees, but the London committees do not hand out money so quickly. If you wish help from a London committee you must first run your feet off and bring papers and witnesses to prove that you are an emigrant and are going to America. Because there are a lot of emigrants that only say they are going to America. Then when you have brought everything, the committee can only give you part of your return fare, that is, for you to go back home. Because the London committees do not think much of America.

Hearing such talk, my brother Elihu grew furious. And Pini is, of course, a hot-headed person, so he began to fire his language:

"How is that possible? How have they the right to tell us to go back? How is it they have no shame in a land of civilization?"

The Jew of the minyun interrupts him, holds the door open and says to him:

"Talk here, talk there! Here is the address of a committee. Take a ride to the committee yourself, so you will see, it is all right."

As we left the Jew's the smell of fried fish ran after us We all thought of them, but nobody said a word about them except Brocha. She heaped blessings on their heads. She wished them everything.

In the London committee it is lively as in all the committees. In the yard emigrants are rolling around like dirt; and inside, in the house, people sit and smoke cigars and say to one another: "Alright." The only difference is that the German committee wear their mustaches turned up and speak German and the London committee have shaved their beards and mustaches all off and say: "Alright."

It's a circus with them. The men are smooth-shaven and the women all wear wigs. And not only the women. Even the girls wear hair and curls pasted on. They all have big teeth and are homely. Still they have the nerve to laugh at us to our faces, and to point at us.

This is really a fine country, says Brocha, but it doesn't want to burn!

"What good will it do you if it burns?"

So my brother Elihu says to her, and she lets loose a flood of words!

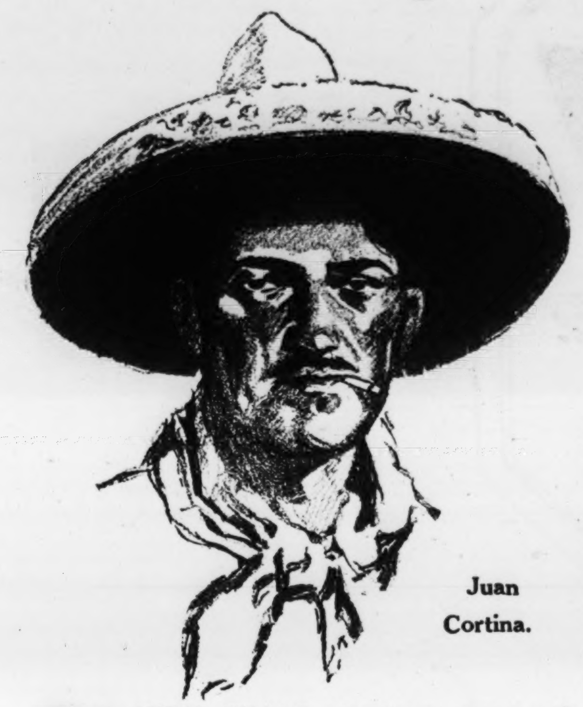
"Why do you stick up for this blessed London with the black sky, with the shaven chins, with the beautiful 'Viteshepel,' with the fried fish, with the old maids with the false curls and the spattered dresses, with the beggars that drink gingerbeer, with the conductors that tell you to 'fife,' with the Jews that have Jahr Zeit and are too stingy to give a person a drink of water? Such a city must burn!"

So Brocha says in one breath and ends with folded hands:

"London, why don't you burn?" * * *

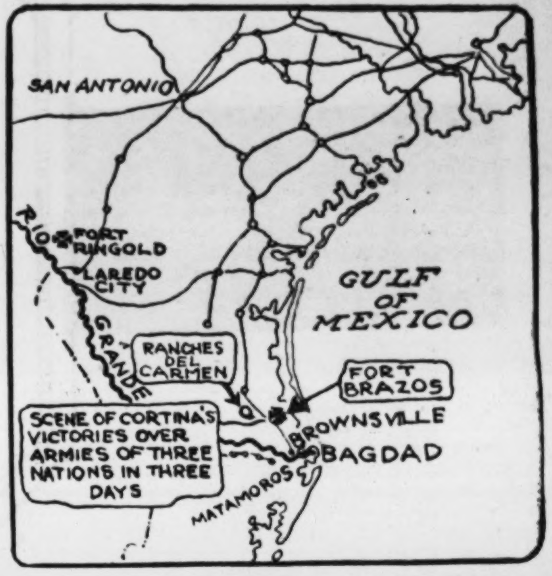
Will we EVER get to America?

Raid on Columbus Trivial to What This "Villa" of 50 Years Ago Accomplished on American Border



Juan Cortina.

Juan Cortina captured Brownsville, proclaimed Mexican republic in Texas, and in one day whipped Confederate and French armies, each bigger than his own—Helped make Diaz president, and was rewarded by imprisonment until he became blind and mental and physical wreck



PANCHO VILLA'S adventurous career, culminating in his raid upon the New Mexican town of Columbus, has been for our generation a spectacular illustration of the opportunities open to the Mexican soldier of fortune; but his fame in this field was eclipsed by a greater Villa of half a century ago—Juan N. Cortina, who set up a republic of his own in Texas, and in one brilliant campaign of half a dozen battles within 48 hours defeated in succession the numerically superior armies of two nations—France and the Confederacy.

Also, after a life fraught with military exploits from his boyhood Cortina met a miserable fate. He battled valiantly in behalf of Porfirio Diaz; but the great dictator, on feeling his power firmly established, repaid his follower's devotion by seizing him on the pretext that he had disobeyed a military order. Cortina was flung into a dungeon and held there until he became blind and sank into a mental and physical wreck. He spent his last years as an object of pity and charity in the province where he had once been the all-powerful Governor.

Cortina was a Spanish-Mexican and was born on June 15, 1830, either near the city of Matamoras, Mexico, or near the present city of Brownsville, Tex. Whenever he was in trouble in Mexico he proclaimed his American nativity and whenever he fell into the hands of the Texans he demanded protection from the Mexican authorities. On one side of the border his name was John N. Cortina; on the other it was Juan Nepomucene Cortina.

When Cortina reached his sixteenth year he proclaimed himself an enemy of the new Texas republic, and took part in several skirmishes between the supporters of the old regime and the forces of the new. In March, 1845, the United States annexed Texas, and when, nine months later, Gen. Zachary Taylor and an army were sent to the Rio Grande to guard the border, the Rancho del Carmen, Cortina's plantation, became the headquarters of every Mexican sympathizer in the "lost province."

The conclusion of the Mexican War saw Cortina at the age of 17 with the rank of Captain and a reputation for brilliant fighting that spread throughout the republic.

The Mexicans who had remained in Texas and had been transformed into American citizens in spite of their wishes in the matter lost no opportunity to express their opinions on the subject of the conquest. Cortina became the leader of the Mexican-Texans, scores of whom he impressed into his ranks.

Cortina and his "Eagles" dashed into Brownsville.

Fort Brown, of Gen. Taylor's days, had become the city of Brownsville, notable in those days as the largest settlement of Americans in that part of the State. To wipe out this rendezvous of his enemies Cortina and his band of horsemen rode into the little city one hot afternoon in July, 1859, while all the populace was at siesta and made such a commotion with voice and gun that the inhabitants mistook the descent for an attack of Indians.

Later it developed that this attack had been made solely for reconnoitering purposes, for on Sept. 28 Cortina and 80 men re-entered the village and captured it after a battle in which a constable and a merchant were killed and 10 other residents wounded.

In the morning Cortina raised the flag of a new republic which he had created during the night and he was about to install with much ceremony the officials whom he had chosen, when the Mexican Consul and a delegation of citizens from Matamoras prevailed on him to abandon the village.

These and other succeeding successes intoxicated Cortina with exultation over his own military capacity, and, with the view of becoming a dictator or president of a new nation, he declared war on the United States. In a proclamation, dated Nov. 23 and filled with references to great patriots and to the manner in which the Americans had obtained possession of Texas, he appealed to all Mexicans to aid him in his task.

Alarmed by the reports of the character of the revolt, the War Department at Washington, under orders of Feb. 9, 1860, assigned Col. Robert E. Lee to the command of the Department of Texas. Lee had won the favor of the Government through his quick suppression of John Brown's revolt at Harper's Ferry.

Defeat on one side of the river forced Cortina to shift the scene of his endeavors to the territory on the southern bank of the Rio Grande, and there the political affairs were particularly pleasing to a man who could reinforce his partisans with an armed force of more than 1000 free lance warriors. Flirting with both factions, he gained the protection that he desired, and in a short time became the most powerful individual in the northern provinces of Mexico.

In August, 1864, Cortina made an alliance with Juarez, who then was fighting rebels as well as the French, and to bind it the President gave him the rank of a General in the regular army and made him military commander of Matamoras.

By the fate of two wars, when September, 1864, opened, there happened to be within the radius of 20 miles from Matamoras detachments of the French, Mexican, United States and Confederate armies, while over the hills toward the City of Mexico the insurgent armies of Porfirio Diaz and Negrete were fighting French and Mexicans with all the fury of the ancient Mistecs from whom they were descended.

On Sept. 6, Cortina was forced into a series of battles that permitted him to repay Juarez for having given him the title of General. Five thousand French soldiers, who were among the best that Louis Napoleon had sent across the ocean and were reinforced by what were regarded as the best artillerymen in the world, marched out upon Matamoras to subdue the whole Rio Grande valley. As soon as Cortina heard news of the advance he fortified Matamoras with cotton bales, and proceeded out of the city with his 3000 "Aigles," or "Eagles," as his soldiers were called, to meet the French.

Eight miles east of Matamoras Cortina fell upon the advancing foreigners with such ferocity that he almost put the enemy to rout at the first attack. He was preparing to press his advantage, when a messenger from Matamoras brought him the intelligence that the Confederates in Brownsville had crossed the Rio Grande, and, probably by arrangement with the French, were moving on the city to hem him in between the two forces. Before Cortina could divide his army the Confederates had captured unguarded Matamoras and were marching eastward to attack Cortina's army in the rear.

Lieutenant-Colonel Giddings, the Confederate commander, had not gone far when a messenger from his headquarters across the river brought him the startling information that the Federal forces had left Brazos Santiago and were speeding toward Brownsville to capture the city. Giddings retained on the Mexican side a third of his force, to fulfill his contract with the French commander, and hastily threw the remainder of his army across the river to Brownsville, which they reached just in time to give battle to Col. Day's regiment of Federals.

One part of Cortina's army swept down the Matamoras-Bagdad road with the ferocity of savages, and in four hours' battle, in which the "Aigles" used the butts of their rifles with more frequency and effect than the muzzles, not only routed the imperialists but followed the fugitives into Bagdad at the mouth of the Rio Grande, and drove them back on board the four men-of-war and one transport that lay in the harbor.

While the French were being defeated the second detachment of Cortina's force engaged the Confederates, who had retreated into Matamoras after Giddings had been obliged to diminish his force of invaders. For several hours the struggle had for its objective the possession of the breastworks of cotton bales at the principal entrances of the city.

Before the afternoon was spent the Confederates had been defeated, and in the confusion and excitement of their fording of the Rio Grande many of them were shot and drowned.

Cortina pursued the Confederates across the river and in another desperate battle with the twice-defeated but still unconquered Southerners drove them out of Brownsville, capturing one of the Confederacy's strongholds in Texas and munitions and supplies worth more than a million dollars.

But such sweeping victories did not satisfy Cortina. At dawn Cortina surprised even his "Aigles" by hoisting the United States flag over Brownsville. At the same time he dispatched to Col. Day a messenger with a brief communication in which he offered to surrender to him the city and fort of Brownsville and transfer every one of the "Aigles" in Texas into the service of the United States. Col. Day, prevented by regulations from accepting the services of an armed force, asked Cortina to lay down his arms, and, this being done, added the whole force to the Federal command.

On the following day the "Aigles" rode out of Brownsville side by side with men who under Winfield Scott had fought the Mexicans at La Jacinto and on scores of other battlefields.

After a pursuit of a half day the Federal force overtook Col. Giddings, and there was a brief but spirited conflict. The Confederates scattered in every direction and Cortina saw his desire for revenge fully realized. Leading his men back to Brownsville, he exchanged his United States' rifles for those he had surrendered earlier in the day, and, snapping his finger at Col. Day, who demanded that the "Aigles" should fulfill the terms of their enlistment, ended his career as a Federal soldier without as much as saying a farewell before riding away to Matamoras.

Presently Cortina was called to assist Diaz, who immediately after the sudden death of Juarez took the field against the constitutionalist successor, Don Lerdo de Lejeda. Lerdo developed unexpected resources, and in spite of all the money and soldiers that Cortina could bring to the assistance of Diaz the latter was defeated and driven into exile. For his part in the rebellion Cortina was deprived of the Governorship of the province, but he retained military control of Tamaulipas because his "Aigles" in a dozen battles proved their superiority over the troops that Lerdo sent against them. Later he was seized while alone on his ranch and taken to jail in Mexico City on a charge of refusing to obey a military order. Thus, through the ingratitude of Diaz, came to an end the career of the most sensational border fighter Mexico ever produced.

St. Louisan's $25,000 Stamp Collection

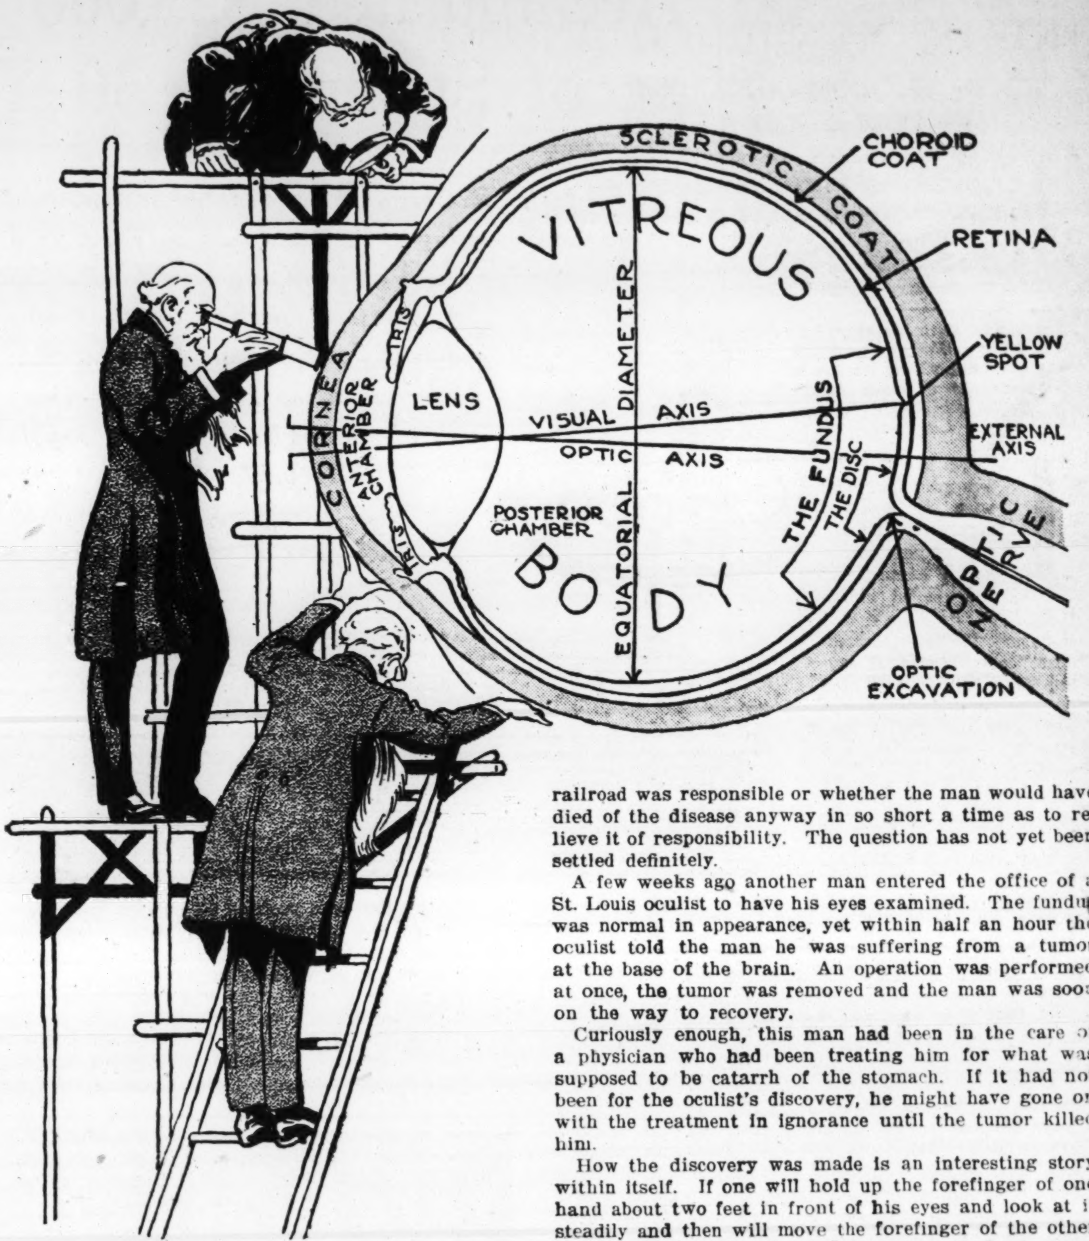
Mr. Cornwall's experiences as a collector have been like those of many another—his interest was aroused in his youth and then waned as he grew older, but circumstances arose which again set him on the trail of the rare and odd specimens.

"I started collecting in 1886," he said recently, "my interest being aroused by seeing a 2-cent stamp from Southern Australia, which was wholly unfamiliar to me. I learned that a cheap package of stamps could be bought, and possessing myself of a cheap album, I began the formation of what might be called a 'schoolboy' collection. My interest continued for a few years and when I came to St. Louis, in 1892, I put my stamp album in the bottom of my trunk, not because I cared particularly for it, but because it was simply one of my possessions.

"Shortly after I was married, in 1893, my wife, having discovered my stamp album in going through my trunk and having occasion to mail some letters, helped herself to my stamps. How long this had continued, or how many she took or what they were worth, I never knew, but my interest was revived by the knowledge of my loss and then I became obsessed with the idea that I would like to possess the largest stamp collection in the world, which is, of course, entirely out of the question. However, my collection soon outgrew primitive proportions and expanded until it grew too cumbersome, with the result that eventually I specialized in those of only a few countries."

What Your Eyes Can Tell About Your Health

Often on the curtain of the fundus the expert reads a story of tragedy and despair, of sickness and death—How hidden diseases betray their existence through the organs of sight—Locating brain tumors.



A VAST amount of stuff, much of it poetic fiction, has been written about the human eyes, as any ready reference work on popular quotations will bear witness. There was the old chap who first called it the mirror of the soul. If he had called it the mirror of the kidneys, of the brain, of the intestines, he probably wouldn't have achieved immortal fame for the remark, but he would have been much nearer the truth.

Then there is that old superstition that the eye of a murdered man bears the photograph of the slayer. That isn't the truth, either, but the eye of a man about to be murdered by diabetes or Bright's disease or brain tumor or tuberculosis sometimes bears what will pass for a photograph of the slayer before the deed is consummated.

Next there is that biblical parable about the mote and the beam. About it, alas, there is often more truth than poetry. Many a man's eye can detect imperfections all about it, not seeing within itself the sign manual of death and disease. The sign is there where all who will may read, yet the eye which can see so much that is relatively unimportant elsewhere cannot or does not see the little that is all-important right at home.

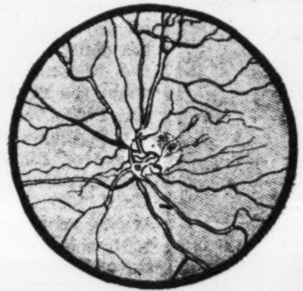
For the human eye is itself far more interesting than many a book which it peruses. Not infrequently it contains a truer story than most books do, being biography, pathology and prophecy all in one. Sometimes it is the receptacle of secrets intrusted to it by the rest of the body, intimate confidences of indiscretions, whisperings of physical conspiracies that are quietly undermining the health and destin[illegible] if undetected, to bring disintegration and decay.

Yet the eye is not a good keeper of secrets. Almost invariably it tries in some way to let the mind know it has them. It commits all sorts of peculiar actions. It twitches, it aches, it burns, it gets unaccountably weary, it sees spots where no spots are, it disturbs the peace of the whole nervous system. When given the proper "third degree," it tells all it knows. Yet so accustomed are we to treat it as a sort of Cassandra, whose warnings are to be ignored, that we throw a lotion to it as a sop or disregard it altogether.

Then, perhaps when it is too late, we pay the penalty—maybe the loss of this faithful servant and maybe the loss of life itself.

Roughly speaking, the eye proper is divided into three parts, the outer, or sclerotic; the middle, or choroid, and the inner, or retina. Between the principal segments are two substances, one a watery liquid called the aqueous humor and one a jelly-like matter called the vitreous humor. Toward the nasal side of the center of the retina is a pink disc, which marks the place where the optic nerve enters.

When one looks into the organ with an opthalmoscope, the farthest point he is able to see is the back wall of the retina, including the disc. This wall, scientifically, is known as the fundus. It contains not only the disc, but also the tiny arteries and blood vessels. It is at the fundus that light vibrations touch the optic nerve, which translates them to the brain in terms of vision.



It is a phenomenon of the fundus that it is exactly alike in no two eyes. There is an individual tracery of veins for each eye. Often there is a peculiarity in the appearance of the disc itself which will never be duplicated.

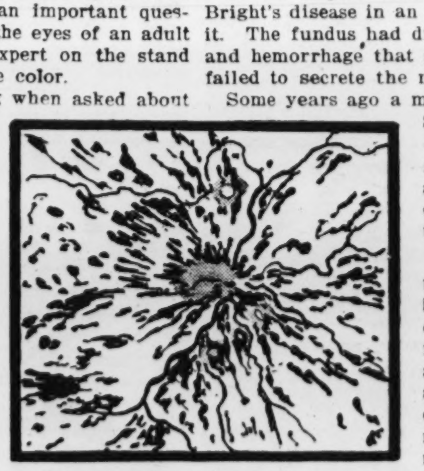
As a means of identification the fundus is far more reliable than the finger print method. A man may scar his finger tips in such a way as to make it impossible to identify them by any previous record. He cannot change the appearance of the fundus. Disease may alter it somewhat, but never enough to confound it with the appearance of any other fundus.

Photographs of the fundus, however, are not likely to supersede the finger-print system as a practical method of identification. For one thing, they cannot be made without the consent of the subject. The pupil must be dilated and the subject must keep his eye immovable long enough for the photograph. Even if he does this the pictures are likely to turn out blurred and indistinct.

The coloring of the eye is another but less reliable means of identification. St. Louisans will remember that this figured in the Kimmel case when a man who declared he was a man supposed to be dead appeared on behalf of a life insurance company to resist the payment of a policy. The dead man had brown eyes, while the claimant's eyes were blue and an important question at the trial was as to whether the eyes of an adult person could change color. An expert on the stand testified that the eyes could change color.

An oculist of the highest standing when asked about this recently said that the expert had answered correctly. An adult's eyes could change color, he said, but the testimony did not go far enough. The expert should have been asked if the eye could change from brown to blue.

"If he had been asked this," said the oculist, "he probably would have answered in a decided negative. All infants are born with blue eyes. They frequently change to brown or gray or black. The inner wall of the iris in all eyes is blue. If there should be any pigmentation in the outer walls, this will modify the color. Once this modification has taken place it can never be undone. Through disease the pigmentation in brown eyes, for instance, may be so altered as to make a new change in color, but it will be towards a slaty gray and never to a clear blue."



How the fundus of an eye looks indicating a diseased condition.

Study of the fundus is valuable principally for the diagnosis of eye diseases as well as for diseases of the rest of the body. Here it is that the trained observer reads the first signs of any decay that may effect the eve proper. Here, also, and not at all seldom, are first found traces of unsuspected diseases that are assailing even remote parts of the body.

Not long ago a young man walked into the office of an oculist. He said he had been "seeing spots," and having other trouble with his eyes. He had thought perhaps the spots were the characteristic symptoms of a common form of biliousness and had doctored himself accordingly. It had done no good.

How the tracery of veins in the fundi of normal eyes looks through the ophthalmoscope—all are healthy yet none is like another.

The oculist examined his eyes with an opthalmoscope. At the conclusion of his survey he turned to the youth and said gravely:

"You are a very sick man. You must go to a hospital at once. Tell me who your physician is so I can get in touch with him at once."

The young man readily complied. As he left the office the oculist murmured pityingly:

"Poor chap! He has not a year to live. I'm afraid eight months is too long an expectation."

It developed that the patient had Bright's disease in an advanced stage and did not know it. The fundus had disclosed indications of infiltration and hemorrhage that showed his kidneys had too long failed to secrete the necessary albumen from his food.

Some years ago a man from a country town came to St. Louis to consult another noted oculist. His eyes revealed the same condition and the oculist advised him to put his affairs in order, as he had not much longer to live.

On his way home that night the train carried him four miles beyond his destination. He started to walk home and made the four miles in rapid time. Within a few hours he fell into a coma and before another day he was dead of Bright's disease. His relatives brought suit against the railroad company. The case brought up an interesting medico-legal question as to whether the railroad was responsible or whether the man would have died of the disease anyway in so short a time as to relieve it of responsibility. The question has not yet been settled definitely.

A few weeks ago another man entered the office of a St. Louis oculist to have his eyes examined. The fundus was normal in appearance, yet within half an hour the oculist told the man he was suffering from a tumor at the base of the brain. An operation was performed at once, the tumor was removed and the man was soon on the way to recovery.

Curiously enough, this man had been in the care of a physician who had been treating him for what was supposed to be catarrh of the stomach. If it had not been for the oculist's discovery, he might have gone on with the treatment in ignorance until the tumor killed him.

How the discovery was made is an interesting story within itself. If one will hold up the forefinger of one hand about two feet in front of his eyes and look at it steadily and then will move the forefinger of the other hand about, he will notice that he can see it also in many positions, while in other position he loses sight of it. If the movement of the second finger along the fringes of vision be charted, it will be found to form an irregular curve. A similar curve can be obtained for the other eye.

There is a normal formation of these curves for all eyes. If the curve for any individual differs greatly from the normal, it is because there is something, somewhere interfering with the proper functioning of the optic nerve. This may come from a tumor, pressing somewhere on the nerve or affecting some part of the brain which it serves. Through simple mechanical devices the oculist is able not only to tell what is the trouble, but, in most cases, accurately to locate it.

It is a curious thing that one brain tumor, no larger than a pea, may cause terrific inflammation and other disorders of the eye, while another as big as an egg may not noticeably affect it. Not all brain tumors can be discovered through an examination of the eye, but many of them can be and often are there first disclosed. In the same way tuberculosis, syphillis and toxic poisoning from the intestinal tract may be thus discovered.

"Whenever I see anything suspicious," said one oculist, "I give all the tests until I find the disorder. I try the Wasserman blood test, the tuberculin test and any other test that may be indicated. More mistakes in diagnosis are made through carelessness than through ignorance, and the careful oculist exhausts all his resources before he quits."

The ignorance of sufferers and the wickedness of quacks are often responsible for cases of blindness that might have been prevented. About 65 per cent of the cases of total blindness in public institutions are directly traceable to infection in the eyes of babies at birth. Practically every case might have been prevented if someone had taken the simple precaution to put a drop of a well-known nitrate of silver solution into the eyes as soon as the infant was born.

Some months ago a woman in Kentucky fancied a cataract was growing over her eyes and answered the advertisement of a Chicago quack. He sent her some medicine, telling her it would make the growth easily removable when it had sufficiently developed. When sight had been practically destroyed, she consulted an oculist, who informed her she did not have cataract. She was suffering from glaucoma and had neglected it until the damage was irreparable.

Glaucoma is caused from stoppage off the canal which drains off the surplus aqueous humor. Ordinarily the surplus of this fluid is drawn off into the lymphatic circulation through a channel provided by nature. If the channel becomes stopped and there is no draining, the liquid presses on the eye and hardens it just as water will do when forced into a hollow rubber ball. The optic nerve atrophies until it can no longer perform its primary function. An operation opening a means of drainage will, if done in time, avoid most of the difficulty.

All of these things warn against the foolishness of failing to consult a reliable oculist whenever there is reason to believe there may be something wrong with the eye. Happily, the eye itself invariably gives warning. The safest rule to follow is to let your eyes alone when they let you alone and to have them properly examined whenever they give you trouble.

The Fiery Hand

himself roughly against me to alter my course.

"Not that way! not that way!" came pantingly. "Not on to the Heath * * * we must keep to the roads * * *

It was Nayland Smith. That healing realization came to me, bringing such a gladness as no words of mine can express nor convey. Still we ran on.

"There's a policeman's lantern," panted my companion. "They'll attempt nothing now!"

I gulped down the stiff brandy and soda, then glanced across to where Nayland Smith lay extended in the long cane chair.

"Perhaps you will explain," I said, "for what purpose you submitted me to that ordeal. If you proposed to correct my skepticism concerning supernatural manifestations, you have succeeded."

"Yes," said my companion musingly, "they are devilishly clever, but we know that already."

I stared at him fatuously.

"Have you ever known me to waste my time when there was important work to do?" he continued. "Do you seriously believe that my ghost hunting was undertaken for amusement? Really, Petrie, although you are very fond of assuring me that I need a holiday, I think the shoe is on the other foot!"

From the pocket of his dressing gown he took out a piece of silk fringe which had apparently been torn from a scarf, and, rolling it in a ball, tossed it across to me.

"Smell!" he snapped.

I did as he directed—and gave a great start. The silk exhaled a faint perfume, but its effect upon me was as though someone had cried aloud: "Karamaneh!"

Beyond doubt the silken fragment had belonged to the beautiful servant of Dr. Fu-Manchu, to the dark-eyed, seductive Karamaneh. Nayland Smith was watching me keenly.

"You recognize it—yes?"

I placed the piece of silk upon the table, slightly shrugging my shoulders.

"It was sufficient evidence in itself," continued my friend, "but I thought it better to seek confirmation and the obvious way was to pose as a new lessee of the Gables."

"But, Smith," I began.

"Let me explain, Petrie. The history of the Gables seemed to be susceptible of only one explanation; in short, it was fairly evident to me that the object of the manifestations was to insure the place being kept empty. This idea suggested another, and with them both in mind I set out to make my inquiries, first taking the precaution to disguise my identity. I posed as a stranger who had heard that the house was to let furnished. I had theories, as I have said, and when, having paid to deposit and secured possession of the keys, was enabled to visit the place alone, I was fortunate enough to obtain evidence to show that my imagination had not misled me.

"You were very curious the other morning, I recall, respecting my object in borrowing a large brace and bit. My object, Petrie, was to bore a series of holes in the wainscoting of various rooms at the Gables."

"But, my dear Smith!" I cried, "you are merely adding to my mystification."

He stood up and began to pace the room in his restless fashion.

"I had cross-examined Weymouth closely regarding the phenomenon of the bell ringing, and an exhaustive search of the premises led to the discovery that the house was in such excellent condition that from ground floor to attic there was not a solitary crevice large enough for a mouse."

I suppose I must have been staring very foolishly indeed, for Nayland Smith burst into a laugh.

"A mouse, I said, Petrie!" he cried. "With the brace and bit I rectified that matter. I made the holes I have mentioned, and before each I set a trap baited with a piece of succulent toasted cheese. Just open that grip!"

The light at last was dawning upon my mental darkness, and I pounced upon the grip. From the grip I began to take mousetraps! Two or three of them were still set, but in the case of the greater number the catches had slipped. Nine I took out and placed upon the table and all were empty. In the tenth there crouched, panting, its soft furry body dank with perspiration, a little white mouse!

"Only one capture!" cried my companion, "showing how well fed the creatures were. Examine his tail!"

But already I had perceived that to which Smith would draw my attention, and the mystery of the "astral bells" was a mystery no longer. Bound to the little creature's tail, close to the root, with fine soft wire such as is used for making up buttonholes, were three tiny silver bells. I looked across at my companion in speechless surprise.

"Almost childish, is it not?" he said. "Yet by means of this simple device the Gables has been emptied of occupant after occupant. There was small chance of the trick being detected, for, as I have said, there was absolutely no aperture from roof to basement by means of which one of them could have escaped into the building."

"Then"——

"They were admitted into the wall cavities and the rafters from some cellar underneath, Petrie, to which, after a brief scamper under the floor and over the ceilings, they instinctively returned for the food they were accustomed to receive, and for which, even had it been possible (which it was not), they had not occasion to forage."

I, too, stood up, for excitement was growing within me. I took up the piece of silk from the table.

"Where did you find this?" I asked, my eyes upon Smith's keen face.

"In a sort of wine cellar, Petrie," he replied, "under the stair. There is no cellar proper to the Gables—at least no such cellar appears in the plans."

"But"——

"But yes! It must be part of some older building which occupied the site before the Gables was built. The entrance to the subterranean portion of the building is in the wine cellar. Of this we have at least two evidences; the finding of the fragment of silk there and the fact that in one case at least—as I learned—the light was extinguished in the library unaccountably. This could only have been done in one way; by manipulating the main switch, which is also in the wine cellar."

"But, Smith!" I cried, "do you mean that Fu-Manchu"——

Nayland Smith turned in his promenade of the floor and stared into my eyes.

"I mean that Dr. Fu-Manchu has had a hiding place under the Gables for an indefinite period!" he replied. "I always suspected that a man of his genius would have a second retreat prepared for him, anticipating the event of the first being discovered. Oh, I don't doubt it! The place probably is extensive, and I am almost certain—though the point has to be confirmed—that there is another entrance from the studio further along the road. We know now why our searchings in the East End have proved futile; he had been lying low in this burrow at Hampstead!"

"But the hand, Smith; the luminous hand"——

Nayland Smith laughed shortly.

"Your superstitious fears overcame you to such an extent, Petrie—and I don't wonder at it; the sight was a ghastly one—that probably you don't remember what occurred when you struck out at that ghostly hand?"

"I seemed to hit something."

"That was why we ran. But I think our retreat had all the appearance of a rout, as I intended that it should. Pardon my playing upon your very natural fears, old man, but you could not have simulated panic half so naturally! And if they had suspected that the device was discovered we might never have quitted the Gables alive. It was touch and go for a moment."

"But"——

"Turn out the light!" snapped my companion.

Wondering greatly, I did as he desired. I turned out the light—and in the darkness of my own study I saw a fiery fist being shaken at me threateningly! The bones were distinctly visible, and the luminosity of the flesh was truly ghastly. "Turn on the light again!" cried Smith.

Deeply mystified, I did so—and my friend tossed a little electric pocket lamp on to the writing table.

"They used merely a small electric lamp, fitted into the handle of a glass dagger," he said with a sort of contempt. "It was very effective, but the luminous hand is a phenomenon producible by anyone who possesses an electric torch."

"The Gables will be watched?"

"At last, Petrie, I think we have Fu-Manchu—in his own trap!"

A Real Battle Above the Clouds and Its Hero

Capt. Salomone shook him, but recognized death in his look. A bullet in the temple had finished him.

The wounded pilot, alone at the helm of the machine, concentrated his attention anew on the maneuvers, suffering keenly, but still undaunted.

An instant later Capt. Bailso, who had gone back to the motor bridge, appeared beside him. He had a bullet in his shoulder. He was pale, staggering; he held up the hand on the wounded side with the other hand, and in this gesture there was an inexpressible appeal. He looked hard at his friend, fraternally, as if he wanted to say something. But he did not speak, except with that gentle, profound, solemn, intense look.

The enemy aeroplane was making the third assault. The third volley arrived.

Capt. Bailso fell. Another bullet had passed through his heart.

Thus within a few minutes Capt. Salomone, with his skull split open, found himself the only survivor of the crew upon the gigantic winged machine, from which drops of blood were dripping to the distant earth. Never had death soared so near to heaven!

The enemy, their ammunition exhausted, flew very close now, signaling to the survivor to make a landing.

They passed and repassed, making signs, offering to accept surrender, and their hands extended, kept saying: "Down! Down! Descend! Descend! What are you waiting for?"

But the Italian shook his wounded head in obstinate, desperate, sublime refusal.

His feet were in a pool of blood. His companions had fallen so close to him their corpses interfered with the steering. Col. Bargieri's body hung over the wheel. With great effort Salomone pushed it aside, turned it over on the prow, where it remained, resting on its forehead, its arms outstretched, as if in deep sleep. Capt. Bailso's body had fallen over the pressure pump, between the two seats, and to make the pump work the hero had to lift the body of his friend, with one hand.

His wound was painful. The warm blood trickled down over his face through the holes in his headgear, and the wind raised by rapid flight in the upper air froze it. With his gloved hand under the spectacles of the mask he wiped from his eyes what was veiling them with a red mist.

He was no longer a man, but a living will. Not to surrender; not to give up; to take back his flying boat and its dead from the sky to Italy, this was his one great feverish thought. All his existence was in the flight; his heart was in the machine. His soul, full of immeasurable energy, exulted and throbbed at the sight of our land, misty and far away, which sent up to him a great material appeal, the intense voice of a prodigious, ardent, passionate, endless call.

Rushing toward Goritzia, he tossed over the invitation of valleys wherein landing would be easy; he saw spread out gentle, coaxing plains, well adapted to a descent, and he felt his strength ebbing away. He felt himself played out. But on, on he flew, and the tragic aeroplane sped away through the luminous depths of space, steered by an agony. All this valor and all this martrydom sailed on triumphantly in the sky line like the apotheosis of sacrifice.

To the wounded hero the journey seemed eternal. It never would end, never, never. He felt himself beyond time, beyond life itself. He was as if in an epic and tragic dream, full of atrocious intoxication.

As he neared the front again, the fire of the anti-aeroplane artillery enveloped him. Leaving the Isonzo behind, he dropped towards the earth. He sought the meadows. He landed.

Soldiers running up from the camps nearby saw no one emerge from the machine. The blood-splashed silent airship seemed deserted. When they climbed upon the fuselage they thought that no one was living, that all were dead.

His hands upon the steering wheel, his face resting upon his hands, the unconscious Capt. Salomone seemed one of the corpses.

When he came to himself his first thought was of his companions. In the confusion of the reawakening he asked after them.

While this tragedy was being enacted in the air the squadron of aeroplanes was speeding toward Laibach. How they dropped their bombs on the trains laden with ammunition in the freight yards and all but one returned in safety, has already been told in the news dispatches. The one that did not return was attacked by six enemy aeroplanes and had to descend in the Austrian lines.

Typesetting in Japanese.

THE publication of newspapers in either the Japanese or the Chinese language has always been difficult on account of the great number of characters employed, but the publisher of a Japanese newspaper in Honolulu is said to have reduced the 5000 characters heretofore used to less than 100, and to have devised a machine by which newspaper composition can be readily set in these characters.

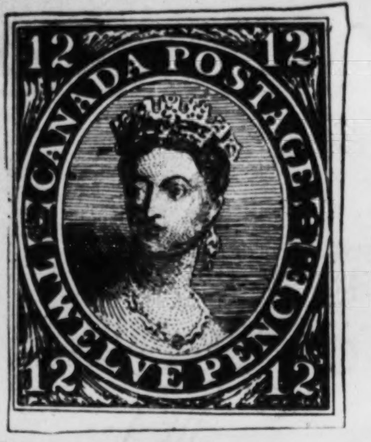
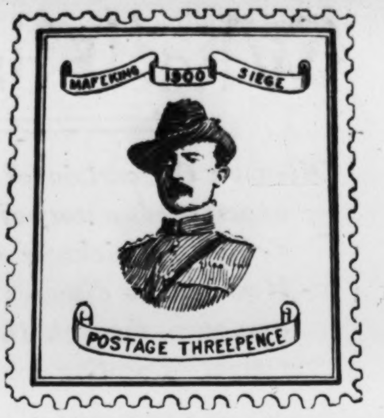
How a St. Louis Collector Accumulated $25,000 Worth of Stamps in 30 Years

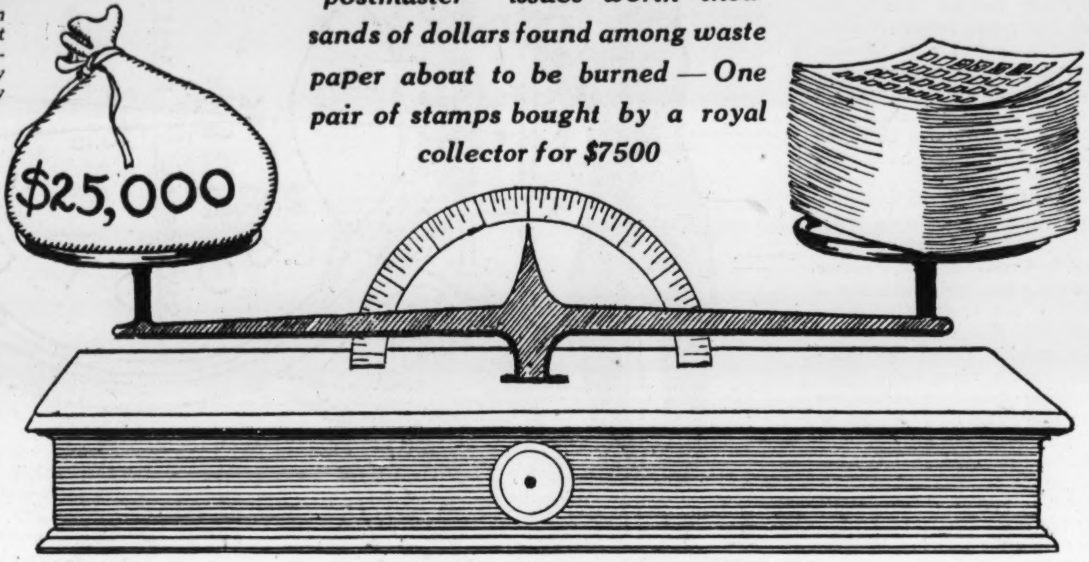


The most valuable stamp in Mr. Cornwall's collection. It is worth $500 and its genuineness was attested to by the Royal Philatelic Society of London.



One of the oddest stamps in Mr. Cornwall's collection. At the siege of Mafeking in the Boer War the British ran out of stamps and printed an issue on blue print paper from tiny photographic plates. The picture is that of Gen. Baden-Powell. The stamp, however, is not rare and is valued at only from $8 to $10.

Frederick R. Cornwall has devoted odd moments since 1886 to the collecting of rare and odd varieties until now he has thousands valued at from one cent to $500 each—Old St. "postmaster" issues worth thousands of dollars found among waste paper about to be burned—One pair of stamps bought by a royal collector for $7500



IF you are just an everyday person, with no particular interest outside of your work, your home and your social affiliations, you doubtless will exclaim "What foolishness!" at the idea of paying $7500 for two canceled postage stamps. "Huh," you will say, "if I had that much money I'd buy a house and lot or an automobile, or an interest in some good business; at any rate something that would give me value for my money."

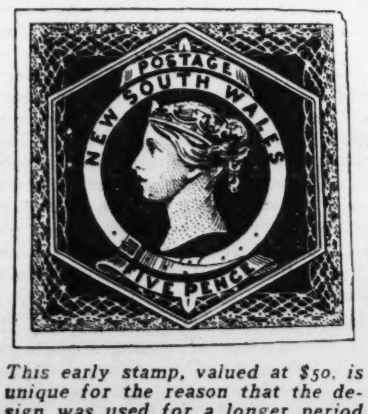
But to a stamp collector, and there are no greater enthusiasts in the following of a hobby, this would not appear strange. His emotions would be those of intense interest and, perhaps envy, at the man so fortunate as to be able to possess such a prize. And it is true that this sum was paid for two small pieces of paper, wholly valueless except as curiosities, having risen to that dignity because of their rarity.

These stamps, with one exception the most valuable in the world, are virtually all that are extant of an issue printed in the British South African colony of Mauritius in 1847. The day they were first placed on sale the postoffice burned to the ground, destroying the plates and all the stamps with the exception of 27, which had been purchased by a lady for the purpose of mailing invitations to a social function. From the moment the postoffice burned, the envelopes which contained these invitations became of immense value from a philatelic standpoint because when plates for another issue were prepared the design of the stamps was different and the first supply became prizes for which collectors have been striving ever since. The man who paid $7500 for a pair of them was King George of England, who is an enthusiastic stamp collector.

The stamp which is even more valuable than one of these is a 4-penny one issued in British Guiana in 1850. It is a crude piece of work, bearing only the words "British Guiana," the letters being arranged in a circle, and the price, but the price of one of these is limited only by the enthusiasm and the means of the collector who sets out to buy it. Only four of them are known to be in existence.

Here is another item for those who mayhap will smile at the thought of anybody paying such fabulous sums for such apparently useless relics. A not inconsiderable portion of the wealth of St. Louis is represented by private stamp collections, the value of one of which is conservatively placed at $25,000. It is owned by Frederick R. Cornwall of 5052 Waterman avenue, a lawyer, who has devoted 30 years to the accumulation of it. Mr. Cornwall is a former director, vice president and president of the American Philatelic Society, a member of the Royal Philatelic Society of London, of which King George is patron and former president; the Southern Philatelic Association, the Chicago, Boston and Washington Philatelic societies and president of St. Louis Stamp Collectors' Association, which at present is holding a series of stamp exhibitions, the winner of which is to receive a medal. Mr. Cornwall himself is the possessor of medals which his stamp collection has won in competition with others at national exhibitions.

Mr. Cornwall has stamps which range in value from 1 cent to $500. One of his albums, which contains as complete a set of all the stamps ever issued in New South Wales as he has been able to obtain, is worth $5000. Several sheets of stamps in his collection could be sold for $1000 each. And by no means is his collection complete in the sense that here may be found stamps from any part of the world, for Mr. Cornwall has specialized in specimens from Great Britain and her colonies and in the various issues of the United States Government. Like many another collector, who starts with the ambition to own complete sets from all parts of the world, he found that this was a goal impossible to attain.



This early stamp, valued at $50, is unique for the reason that the design was used for a longer period —35 years—than that of any other issue of any country.

Mr. Cornwall's most prized possession is a 12-pence Canadian stamp of an early issue, bearing the head of Queen Victoria, and this is the one which is appraised at $500. Its genuineness was attested to by the expert of the Royal Philatelic Society. His specimens from New South Wales derive their chief value from the fact that he has been enabled to arrange them as they appeared on the original plates. Engraving in those early days was done directly upon the plate by hand and in as much as a dozen or more stamps were engraved on each plate, it was impossible to get all of them exactly alike. These imperfections and variations served to guide Mr. Cornwall in arranging them in their proper order. Among the New South Wales collection also is the first stamp ever issued in the colony, a large, square one, containing the portrait of Victoria, which is interesting because this same design was used for more succeeding issues than any other in the world. It was employed from 1853, when the Victoria stamp was first issued, until 1888, and is valued at $50. Unusually complete, also, is Mr. Cornwall's collection of the odd, triangular stamps from the Cape of Good Hope, really a history of stamp making in the colony, for they show the different kinds of paper, ink and gum with which the Government experimented from time to time.

FREDERICK R. CORNWALL.

Stamp collecting is a prolific field for "finds," the fierce joy of which only a collector can know. Mr. Cornwall himself has purchased stamps for a few cents which in a short time have become scarce and worth many dollars. Dealers offer stamps for sale, sometimes mistaking a scarce variety for a cheap one, and frequently valuable stamps are picked up in this way. However, as these fields are worked over and over, the chances of making "finds" of a substantial nature proportionately decrease and today the stamp collector usually goes to the dealer, becomes a member of some society operating an exchange or buys his stamps at auction. The stamp auctions of today are surprising in their magnitude. During the season, which is most active in the winter months, many auctions are held, principally in Chicago, New York and Boston. These will average several each week and of the five or six hundred lots put up at each session the returns will average from $2000 to $5000 a session.

Of all "finds" of stamps, however, among the most remarkable involved old St. Louis "postmaster stamps," issued by the Postmasters of the larger cities in the early days before the printing of stamps was begun by the Government. Several years ago a large number of the stamps was found affixed to waste paper which was about to be burned in Louisville, Ky. Instantly this waste paper leaped into a value of thousands of dollars. One specimen of the 20-cent St. Louis Postmaster stamp—they were issued in denominations of 5, 10 and 20 cents—today commands a price of about $600. Another "find" of this character, also of St. Louis stamps, was made recently in Philadelphia, and, strangely, they also narrowly escaped being burned along with a lot of waste paper which had been reposing in somebody's garret for many years. The most valuable of this class of stamps, however, are those issued by the Postmaster of Alexandria, Va., only four of which are known to exist. These have been sold for several thousand dollars apiece.

It may astonish some persons to know that there are considerably more than 500 collectible varieties of straight United States postage stamps, although the Government did not begin issuing them until 1847. To these should be added the department stamps, used from 1875 to 1879 for Government business before franking came into use, newspaper stamps which formerly were affixed to bundles of newspapers and periodicals, revenue stamps and the multitude of envelope stamps, which last named run up into the hundreds.

It also may be news to some that any unused United States postage stamps issued since 1861 could be used today for carrying a letter or parcel in the mails to the full amount of its face value. When the Civil War was declared a new set of stamps was issued and the postoffice demonetized all of those of previous issues, many of which were held in Southern postoffices, but there has been no demonetization of stamps since that time.

Prior to the issuance of stamps by the Government, the practice was for the Postmaster to stamp or write on the envelope the amount of money prepaid, this being done, of course, at the postoffices which did not issue the "Postmaster stamps" mentioned above. In 1847, when the Government first commenced issuing stamps, the Postoffice Department issued an order prohibiting the further use of these Postmaster stamps. The first issues of the Government were of the 5 and 10 cent variety only, but later other denominations were added. Until 1857, however, all stamps came in imperforate sheets, requiring the users to cut them from the sheets with scissors or some other means of separation. A set of these early stamps is worth more than $1000. Mr. Cornwall acquired a sheet of them for a very small sum from a man who thought he was selling him a specimen sheet. Many of them were struck off for sale at the Philadelphia Centennial Exposition as souvenirs.

A set of stamps issued by the United States in August, 1861, is very rare, one having sold recently for $2500. For a reason which is unknown to this day this issue was supplanted in September of the same year by another which differed only in minor details, some of which are discernable only by the use of a microscope. In 1867 the Government first started to issue stamps with so-called "embossing," which was produced by two rollers having corrugations breaking the surface of the paper so that cancellation ink would be absorbed and consequently the possibility of removing the cancellation, whereby the stamp could be used again, was reduced to a minimum. Some of these stamps were embossed all over and are very valuable. Mr. Cornwall has several of them.

Later experiments made by the Government to minimize the possibility of using stamps twice were to print them in water-color ink, or fugitive ink, so that any effort to clean the stamps would remove the ink; also the stamps were printed on chemical paper and still another effort was to use a backing paper with a very thin facing sheet, which later had holes cut in it so that the impression would be made through the holes on the backing sheet. Specimens of all these experiments are to be seen in Mr. Cornwall's collection.

With one exception the most valuable stamp in the world. Only 27 of them ever were used, as the postoffice burned on the day they were first issued. King George of England paid $7500 for a pair of them.

HEIGH-HO for the outdoor girl and her outdoor sports and her outdoor togs! They will soon be with us—more so this year than ever, the tennis girl, the golf girl, the canoe girl, the swimming girl, the pedestrian girl and the girl who goes in for 'em all. She will wear low-heeled shoes, loose, comfortable frocks, biggish hats and a coat of tan. The frocks will run much to stripes, and the colors will not always be shrinking ones. Jerseys of variegated hues will be much in evidence. Sleeves will be just roomy enough and long enough. Collars will be a modification of the "sport collar" which was so popular last summer. There must be pockets, of course—big, roomy ones. There will also be middy blouses, lots of them and all colorful. The pictures on this page indicate the styles.

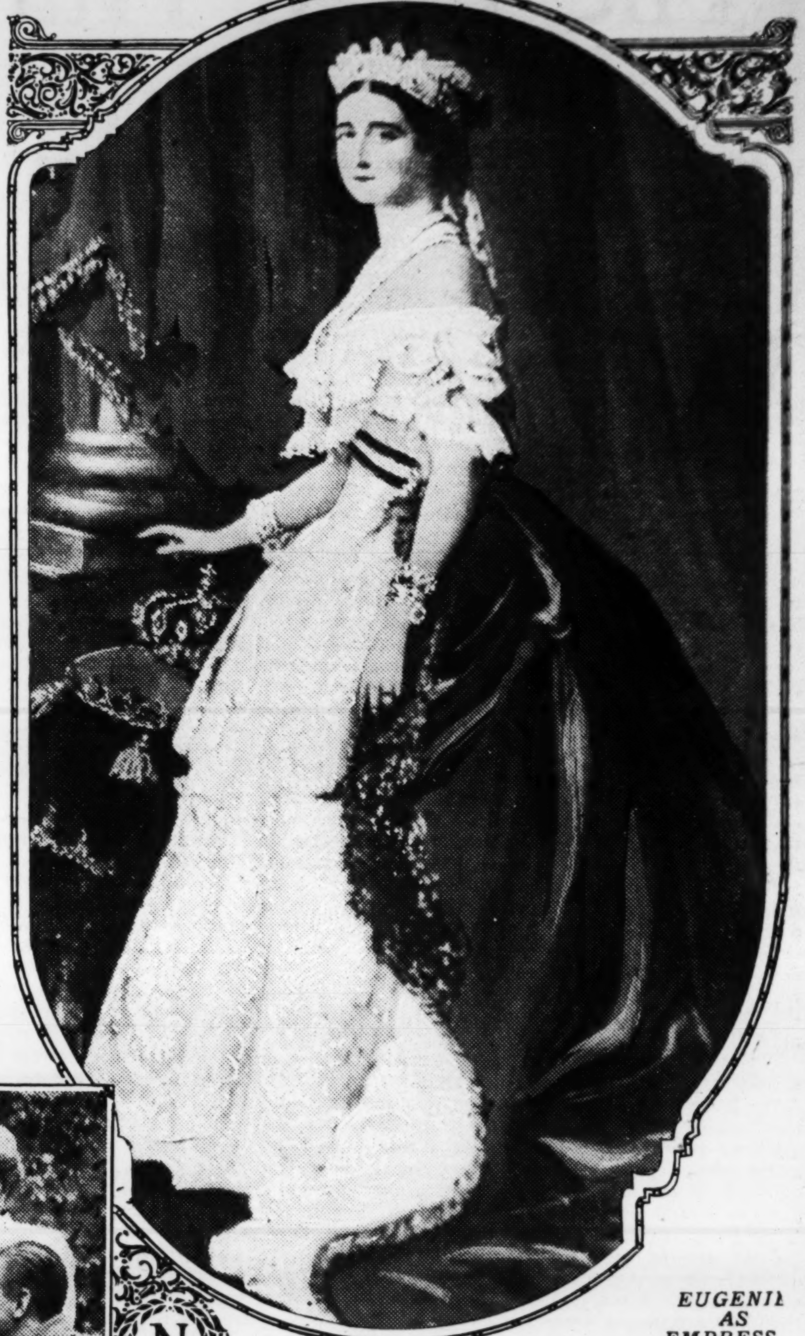
Cabalistic Numbers Assure Ex-Empress Eugenie, 90, She Has Four Years Yet to Live

Spanish gypsy foretold she would live 100 years, "a little more or less," and mystic combination of letters of her name with those of Napoleon III resulted many times in sum of 94—Former Empress, whose grandfather was American, has turned her palace at Chislehurst, England, into a military hospital -:- -:- -:- -:- -:-



EUGENIE AS EMPRESS OF FRANCE

From a painting in the palace at Versailles.

IN the palace of Farnborough, at Chislehurst, England, an aged woman, one of the most romantic personages now alive, is awaiting the fulfilment of the second of two prophecies made concerning her when she was a child, by a Spanish gypsy. The first prophecy was that she would become a Queen. The second was that she would live to be a hundred years old, "poco mas o menos," meaning "a little more or less."

The first prophecy came brilliantly true, for the little girl grew up to become Eugenie, Empress of France. The second bids fair to be realized, for the ex-Empress will be 90 years old on May 5. It is said that she herself is convinced she will live to be 94, because she confirmed the gypsy's prophecy by means of the cabalistic art of numbers.

The story goes that after she became engaged to Napoleon III, Emperor of France, her mother one day found her writing down her name "Eugenie," and her lover's initials, "L. N. B." (Louis Napoleon Bonaparte), and adding up their equivalents in order of the alphabet Her sum ran: E-5, U-21, G-7, E-5, N-14, I-9, E-5,; L-12, N-14 and B-2. The total was 94.

In the same way the girl wrote his name, Louis, and her own initials, "E" for Eugenie and "M" for Montijo. The sum worked out L-12, O-15,U-21, I-9, S-19; E-5, M-13. Again the total was 94.

Then she added up the family names, "Napoleon-Montijo"—N-14, A-1, P-16, O-15, L-12, E-5, O-15, N-14; M-13, O-15, N-14, T-20, I-9, J-10, O-15. The sum was 188—exactly the double of 94!

Almost trembling at these coincidences, the girl wrote "Bonaparte-Montijo"—B-2, O-15, N-14, A-1, P-16, A-1, R-18, T-20, E-5; M-13, O-15, N-14, T-20, I-9, J-10, O-15. Again the addition came 188!

"Twice 94 again!" whispered the awestruck mother, who had at first been inclined to scoff.

"The gypsy said I would live to be 100 years old, a little more or less," said Eugenie solemnly. "It will be a little less—I shall live to be 94 years old."

The subject was never again mentioned between the two women, the story goes, so convinced were they that there was something of supernatural import in the uncanny sums. And it is curious that exactly 94 years after the death of the great founder of the Napoleonic dynasty, in 1821 at St. Helena, France entered upon war to win back Alsace-Lorraine in 1915—lost, as the French often assert, through Eugenie's being Empress in 1870.

At any rate, one of the gypsy's predictions, and the far more improbable one, was completely fulfilled, so that one inclines to regard the second with respect. How they happened to be made is told in the following story:

Engenie, aged 13 years, was much of a tomboy. Sliding down the bannister in her home at Madrid, she banged against the fly screen at the front door and fell senseless. A gypsy woman who was passing took the child's head into her arms and brought her to.

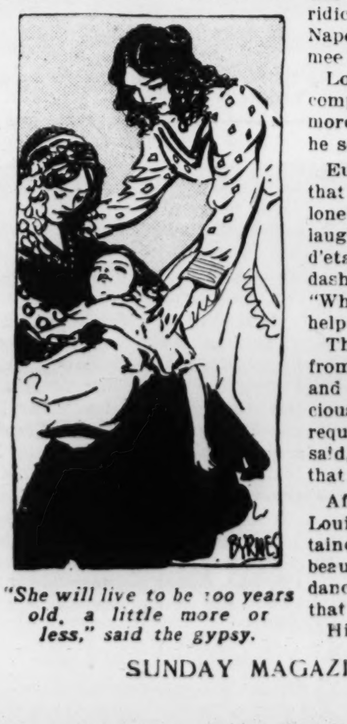
"No danger," she said to the frightened mother, who came running, "the senorita will live to be 100 years old, poco mas o menos."

"And what will be her future?" inquired the mother.

"She will be a Queen," said the sybil. The family seems to have taken the prophecy with some seriousness, for Eugenie grew up in the belief that a wonderful fortune was awaiting her.

Possibly this was due in part to the extraordinary success which three generations of beauties in her family before her had won. Her great-grandmother was a lowly Spanish girl, with [illegible]thing but her beauty. A French wine merchant of Malaga married her. They had two lovely daughters, and both married foreign Consuls stationed at Malaga, one the French De Lesseps and the other the American Kirkpatrick. From the De Lesseps union came the great engineer who built the Suez Canal. Kirkpatrick's wife bore him a daughter of such charms that a Spanish grandee, the Count de Montijo, with a place at court, married her for love. She was Engenie's mother, so that the French Empress was one-fourth American.

All this being in the family, a gypsy's idle words might well have impressed Eugenie. As she grew up she saw her elder sister, Pacca, make an astounding match, even in that family. Pacca caught the rich and mighty Duke of Alva. Higher than the Duke of Alva could only be a King.



"She will live to be 100 years old, a little more or less," said the gypsy.

So when Eugenie's mother took her to Paris, what she saw and heard just thrilled her. In Spain she had refused brilliant offers. Deep in her heart, they say, she loved a dream prince, endowed by her girlish fancy with every charming attribute.

It was absurd. Where could such a Prince be? Well, right here in Paris all were talking about the new Prince-President of the Napoleonic family. France was still under the republic of 1848; but rumors of a change were in the air.

Eugenie and her mother camped in a little flat of the Place Vendome, near where the Hotel Ritz now is. They had good invitations on account of the Alva connection; but Eugenie hurt herself with the old aristocrats by her friendship with a newspaper man.

The aged ex-Empress welcoming a wounded British soldier at her English palace, "Farnborough," converted into a military hospital.

It was Merimee, art critic and author of "Carmen," on the threshold of his grand career; but to Eugenie and her mother he was only what he had been to them years before, in Madrid, before the Count de Montijo died, the witty, amusing friend and vague tutor of the fair Pacca and the tomboy, Eugenie. Laughingly Merimee took up again his place of tutor to the grown-up beauty; and she listened, thrilled, to the newspaper man and friend of editors as he opened her eyes to the plotting second empire.

The handsome, dark-browed, careworn man, still young, who was Prince-President, became her grand, romantic figure. Eugenie wished to attend a presidential reception. Her mother said it would make them ridiculous. "But my father was an officer of the great Napoleon," said Eugenie; and she had her way. Merimee got them the invitations.

Louis Napoleon, Prince-President, weighed down by complicated and dangerous plotting, was nevertheless more than struck by the girl's beauty. That evening he sought her out a second time.

Eugenie felt the same mysterious attraction. "Would that I could help him!" she murmured, thinking of the lonely Prince and his risky ambitions, which were laughed at in the streets of Paris. Just before the coup d'etat she fairly burned with romantic anxiety. She dashed about the little flat like a tigress, being Spanish. "What can I do?" she asked herself. "What can I do to help him?"

That night Louis Napoleon received a letter. It was from a romantic, inexperienced girl, but it was ardent and sincere. It gave him her good wishes and audaciously offered him all she possessed, should his projects require ready money. "I have 3000 francs in bank," it said, "the proceeds of a legacy." She was bitterly sorry that he did not need the money.

After Dec. 2 it was the empire in fact, if not in name. Louis Napoleon gave hunts like a sovereign, at Fontainebleau and Compeigne. At these he met again the beautiful Spanish girl, fearless horsewoman and tireless dancer. He remembered all about her letter, written in that dark hour of his wavering chances.

His love at first sight was soon noticed, showing itself full blown in the most open attentions. Eugenie and her mother had continual invitations to Compeigne and the Tuileries. It was told that Mlle de Montijo, walking with Napoleon, found a four-leafed clover, and that four days later she was wearing a magnificent jewel in the form of it. Once she slipped on the waxed floor at Compeigne, and Napoleon, quitting his partner, ran to lift Eugenie.

The women were against her. One evening, going in to dinner on the arm of Col. de Toulongeon, a slight confusion permitted him to whisk Eugenie ahead of Mme. Fortuol, wife of the Minister of that name.

"How!" Mme. Fortoul exclaimed audibly, "do you permit that creature to push past me?"

The next morning Mlle. de Montijo, with tears in her eyes, stood on the terrace of Compeigne, apart from the others. It was not a ruse to attract Napoleon's sympathy, because, in truth, the girl saw her Prince hero disappearing in a nightmare of evil gossip. To Napoleon, who came asking the cause of her sorrow, she just faltered, "I must go." Little by little Napoleon drew from her an idea of the slights and insults.

The Emperor, listening, meditating, tore a string of green ivy from a park tree as they slowly promenaded. Deftly he twisted it into a crown, and as they neared a group, said loudly, so that all might hear him: "Wear this one—meanwhile."

It is a twice-told anecdote, but as it was Napoleon's proposal of marriage there is no way to omit it. He never really asked for her hand—he took it. Not another murmur arose from the court ladies.

The marriage was celebrated with great pomp at Notre Dame on Jan. 30, 1853. In March, 1856, the Empress gave birth to a son, who received the title of Prince Imperial. The Empress was generally regarded as exercising supreme influence over her husband, and the downfall of his reign, at Sedan, is ascribed by some to the urgency with which she persuaded him that a war was required to secure the dynasty and the succession of her son. Thus Eugenie is considered as one of the authors of the present war, in so far as France's ambition to regain Alsace and Lorraine is an influential motive.

By her beauty, charm of manner and elegance she contributed largely to the brilliance of the imperial regime, and when the end came she was one of the few who showed calmness and courage. She acted three times as Regent of France during the absence of Napoleon, in 1850, 1865 and 1870.

When Napoleon was taken prisoner at Sedan, she obtained his release and fled with him and their son to England. After the Emperor's death, in 1873, she built a mausoleum to his memory at Farnborough. Her son, a volunteer in the British army in the Zulu War, was killed in 1879, and thus perished her hopes for regaining the French throne in his behalf. She has lived in retirement since, in England and on the Riviera, abstaining from all interference in French politics.

Her palace at Chislehurst has been turned into a hospital for wounded British soldiers. It is reported that, when the present conflict broke out, she exclaimed: "This is my war!" meaning that the allies would revenge her for the ruin of her affairs inflicted by the Prussians in 1870.

A REAL BATTLE ABOVE THE CLOUDS AND ITS HERO

Italian writer's thrilling account of how three of his countrymen went up in a battle plane, how it was attacked by Fokkers, how two of the three were slain and how the third, wounded, kept at the wheel until he had brought his machine safely home again

HERE is the story of one of the most glorious episodes of the great war. The soldier who is its hero is Capt. Oreste Salomone, a Sicilian aviator. He was in the Commissary Department of the army when Italy began the conquest of Libya, but at his own request was transferred to the aerial service, in which he won the silver medal for valor. In the great raid of Italian aeroplanes upon Laibach on Feb. 18 he performed the epic feat that is recounted below, and for this his King, motu proprio, conferred upon him the gold medal for valor. The Italian newspapers ring with his praises, but it takes the veteran war correspondent, Luigi Barzini of the "Corriere della Sera," Milan, to tell the story. Following is a slightly condensed translation of the dispatch Barzini sent from the front the day after the raid, amplified by the insertion of the names of the three heroes, which he had not been permitted to telegraph until later.

THE aerial action which struck Laibach in just reprisal for the iniquities of Austrian aviation took place amid bombardments and assaults and was full of marvelous episodes of battle. High above the Julian Alps, in the calm abysses of a dazzling Italian sky, the Italian heart soared to superhuman heights of heroism.

The aeroplanes that came back from the excursion returned safe and sound, as the official report states. They were not touched in the fight. The drama was wholly human. A battery, militarily speaking, is always safe, sound, complete, efficacious, so long as the cannons can fire, even if the artillerymen be dead upon their guns. So an aeroplane that comes back efficient, strong and unscathed, makes a good return even if drenched with blood.

One of our machines descended upon Italian soil, bringing its wounded with it, through the supernatural determination, the splendid heroism of one wounded man. His adventure is among the most terrible and magnificent of aerial warfare, and it has the stupendous, sanguinary beauty of a victory.

The aviation camp was festive in the early morning when the great cruising machines were pluming themselves for flight. The order to start was received with joy, for it had been eagerly desired. At 7:30 the first aeroplane left the earth. It was followed by six others. The morning was serene, calm, cold, a little pallid, and the distant mountains over which the flight must pass showed rosy trimmings of light misty snow, hung as it were upon the deep hazy blue of the veiled slopes.

The squadron wheeled about for some time over the field, rising and taking position. It was formed of Caproni, the big long-flight machines with the vast double wings and the triple rudders. Exaggerated by their gear, the heads of the two pilots side by side projected above the great white rushing bows that cleft the air with their sharp prows, the rapid-fire guns sticking out like a beak. Between the two wheels forward, a sparkle of strange, oblong, shining objects, strung in a row like bells, showed the bombs.

One aeroplane has three men on board. For it fate had in store the most glorious and tragic of adventures. The third passenger was Lieutenant-Colonel Alfred Barbieri, a brave and enthusiastic officer whom no precise duty constrained to flight. His command was on land, but his passion for the aerial arm and his paternal love for the pilots to whose life his duties united him impelled him to join them in their most hazardous undertakings. So he became the volunteer observer of the most daring raids and was always jolly, smiling, calm. Full of the vigor of youth, he had climbed happily upon the fusilage. At the moment of departure an officer came below holding out a pair of electrically-warmed gloves.

"You have forgotten these. You had better take them as it will be 30 below zero!"

"It's going to be cold!"

And he sat down upon the forward seat, behind the gun, where he was going to die a most beautiful death.

The desired altitude reached, near the front, the squadron closed in and dashed forward towards its goal. It flew in a diagonal line according to the tactics for small squadrons. In this formation each aeroplane keeps a little to one side of that ahead. The aeroplanes can thus support without masking each other.

The flight was steady, smooth, majestic, although an icy northeast wind checked its speed.

The Isonzo was crossed north of the Sabotino and Monte Santo, powdered with frost. The narrow, deep valley, full of shadows, seemed a blue furrow. The squadron was still raising to cross the mountains of the Idria. On the Isonzo the fires of the enemy's anti-aerial guns began.

The firing and the explosions could not be heard, because of the loud song of the propellers, but the cloudlets of bursting shells could be seen around the squadron. At times the whole sky seemed dotted with spots of white smoke through which the flight was passing.

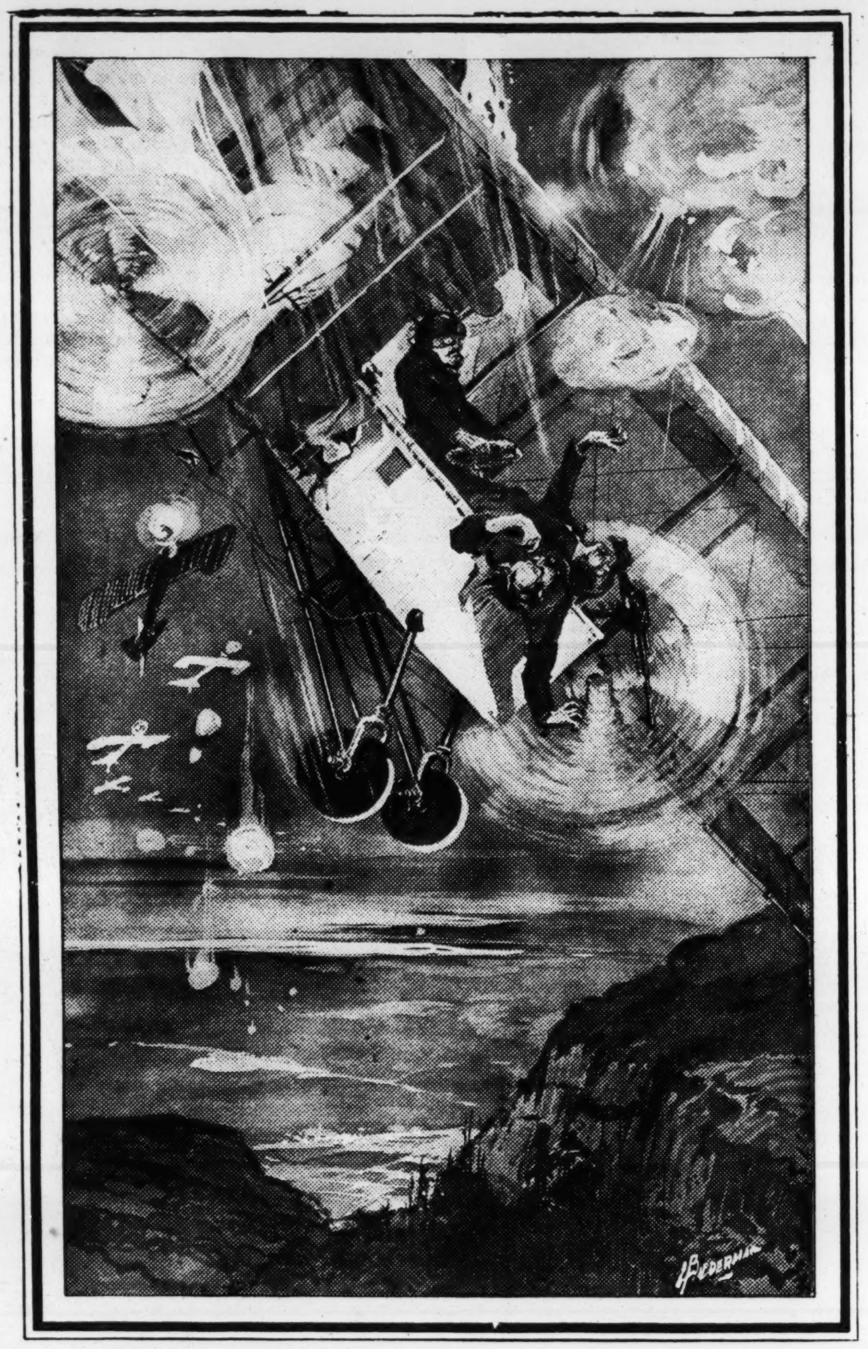
At 50 kilometers from Laibach the enemy's attack came. The Austrian aviators dared not face the whole squadron. They waited until it passed and then made a dash for the last unit with their scouting machines. Every aeroplane cruiser has its vulnerable side, but flying in squadron formation its weakest part is protected by the machine behind. The last is necessarily the weakest.

The Austrian tactics were not glorious, but they were certainly clever. In the air the movements of a fleet cannot be directed as they can on the sea. The transmission of orders is impossible and, if it were possible, necessity raises so suddenly that any maneuver ordered would be late and therefore ineffective. In the face of the unforseeable, action can only be individual, dictated by the necessity of the moment, and co-operation can arise only spontaneously from direct view of what is happening and from intuition of what is needed. One is isolated in the sky.

A pilot of the last aeroplane but one was probably the first to perceive the enemy. He was the starboard pilot. He saw coming up from the valley, almost at the height of Aidussina, a small, very swift aeroplane, which rose without circling, almost following the slope of the mountain. It was emerging from the mists; it was soaring upward impetuously and directly.

The pilot who noticed it pointed it out to his companion. They turned slightly to the right the better to watch and to face the probable danger. At that moment a second Austrian aeroplane appeared almost in the tracks of the first. They were still some hundreds of yards below ours.

With a sudden change of route, the two monoplanes turned to the left, rushing towards the last Caproni, and passed beneath it. The watching pilots thought they recognized two Fokkers, the latest scouting planes which have caused such havoc among British aviators in France.



He was no longer a man, but a living will. Not to surrender; not to give up; to take back his flying boat and its dead from the sky to Italy, this was his one great feverish thought.

Seeing that the last Caproni was to be attacked, the pilots of the last but one began to circle closer. They were about a mile from the unit that was in peril, and this was turning to the south. They had noticed that one of the Austrians was swiftly closing in, circling now above, now below the Caproni, while the other was circling wider and more distant.

Capt. Oreste Salomone.

Then the chase ended, suddenly, and the Caproni was seen speeding away to the west, alone, swiftly, untouched, with sure flight, fleeing from its assailants.

"It has got away by itself!" cried one of the watching pilots.

"On to Laibach!" replied his companion. And their machine resumed its route.

The deafening roar of the motors and the deep sonorous hum of the propellers had not permitted them to hear the rattle of the rapid-fire guns or to sense the awful struggle that had taken place in a few minutes, and they could not have imagined what a precious cargo of heroism and death, of glory and of blood that birdlike machine was now carrying with it as it flew so steadily away into the distance, free in the vastness of the sky, above the world, winging its way homewards.

It was the Caproni with three passengers.

At first these had noticed only one hostile aeroplane. They had seen it pass below them three or four hundred yards distant and go off to the left. Col. Barbieri, who had voluntarily taken upon himself the task of observer, seizing the handle of the miltrailleuse at the extreme prow, was getting ready to fire and only awaiting the favorable moment.

The other Austrian monoplane, as yet unnoticed below, had gone off to the rear. Then it had turned about, coming up from behind and rising. When it reached the Caproni it was almost over it. Gliding in a free volplane until it was only 50 yards distant, it discharged its rapid-fire gun from an oblique angle. It commanded our machine from the rear, a little to the right.

The bullets hailed down upon the rigging. The enemy was aiming at the men. Capt. Salomone, the pilot on the left, the epic hero of the day, was wounded at once. A projectile, piercing his headgear from side to side, plowed a furrow over his skull.

He reassured his companions with a gesture.

Capt. Luigi Bailo, the pilot on the right, left the manuevering post, seized an automatic rifle and went to the poop between the motors to defend that side. Col. Barbieri, who was in command, turned round for an instant to look and made a sign of approbation.

There was a great calm, a solemn calm, in all the actions of those three men, already touched by fate.

The attacking machine with the plunge of its volplane passed transversely below the Caproni, turned around and began again to soar. It repeated the attack with the same maneuver.

The second volley from the enemy's gun arrived.

Another hail of bullets struck the airship.

The Italian automatic gun fired three or four shots, then was silent.

At the second volley Col. Barbieri's hands dropped inert upon the grip of the mitrailleuse. His head fell over; he slipped from his seat and rolled backwards.

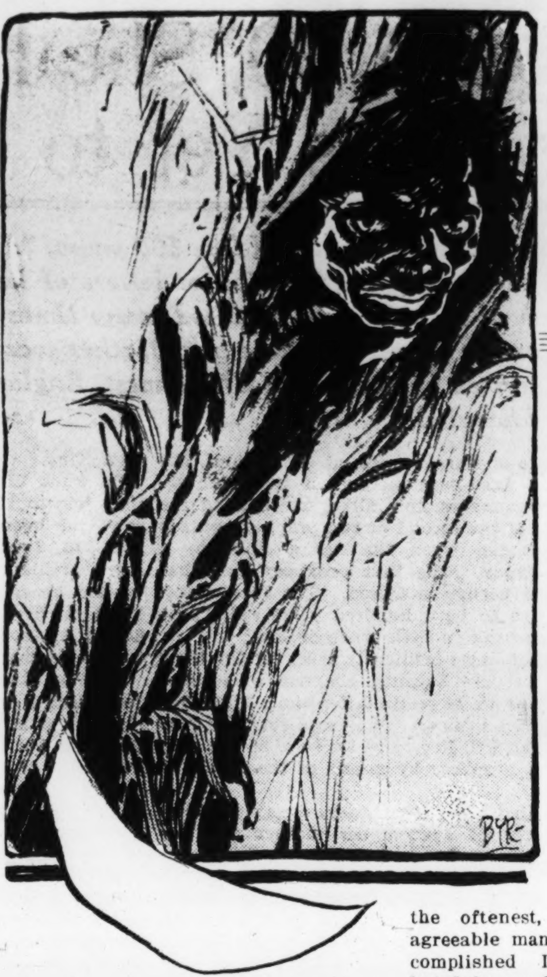
The Head Hunter

By O. HENRY

Sixth of a series of short stories by the m dern master of brief fiction
COMPLETE IN THIS ISSUE



He creeps forth with his snickersnee.

WHEN the war between Spain and George Dewey was over, I went to the Philippine Islands. There I remained as bushwhacker correspondent for my paper until its managing editor notified me that an 800-word cablegram describing the grief of a pet caraboa over the death of an infant Moro was not considered by the office to be war news. So I resigned and came home.

On board the trading vessel that brought me back I pondered much upon the strange things I had sensed in the weird archipelago of the yellow-brown people. The maneuvers and skirmishings of the petty war interested me not: I was spellbound by the outlandish and unreadable countenance of that race that had turned its expressionless gaze upon us out of an unguessable past.

Particularly during my stay in Mindanao had I been fascinated and attracted by that delightfully original tribe of heathen known as the head hunters. Those grim, flinty, relentless little men, never seen, but chilling the warmest noonday by the subtle terror of their concealed presence, paralleling the trail of their prey through unmapped forests, across perilous mountain tops, adown bottomless chasms, into uninhabitable jungles, always near with the invisible hand of death uplifted, betraying their pursuit only by such signs as a beast or a bird or a gliding serpent might make—a twig crackling in the awful, sweat-soaked night, a drench of dew showering from the screening foliage of a giant tree, a whisper at even from the rushes of a water level—a hint of death for every mile and every hour—they amused me greatly, those little fellows of one idea.

When you think of it, their method is beautifully and almost hilariously effective and simple.

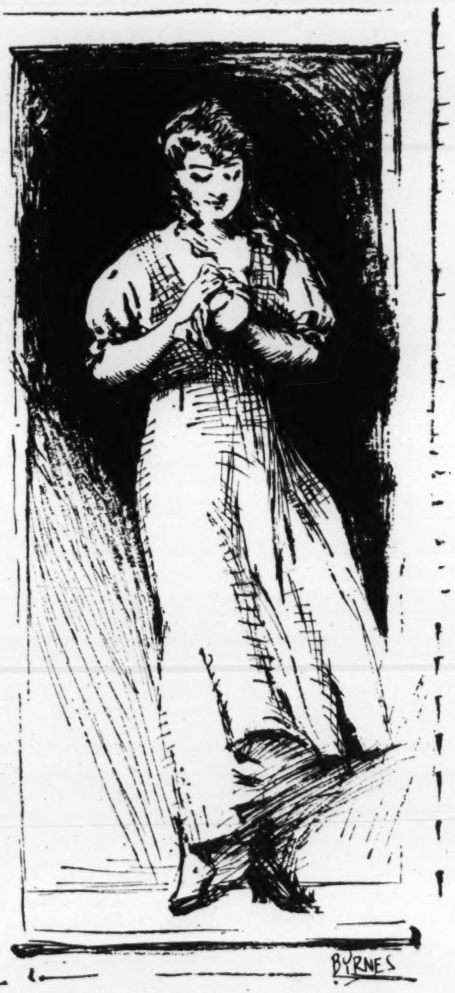
You have your hut in which you live and carry out the destiny that was decreed for you. Spiked to the jamb of your bamboo doorway is a basket made of green withes, plaited. From time to time, as vanity or ennui or love or jealousy or ambition may move you, you creep forth with your snickersnee and take up the silent trail. Back from it you come, triumphant, bearing the severed, gory head of your victim, which you deposit with pardonable pride in the basket at the side of your door. It may be the head of your enemy, your friend or a stranger, according as competition, jealousy or simple sportiveness has been your incentive to labor.

In any case, your reward is certain. The village men, in passing, stop to congratulate you, as your neighbor on weaker planes of life stops to admire and praise the begonias in your front yard. Your particular brown maid lingers, with fluttering bosom, casting soft tiger's eyes at the evidence of your love for her. You chew betel-nut and listen, content, to the intermittent soft drip from the ends of the severed neck arteries. And you show your teeth and grunt like a water buffalo—which is near as you can come to laughing—at the thought that the cold, acephalous body of your door ornament is being spotted by wheeling vultures in the Mindanaoan wilds.

Truly, the life of the merry head hunter captivated me. He has reduced art and philosophy to a simple code. To take your adversary's head, to basket it at the portal of your castle, to see it lying there, a dead thing, with its cunning and strategems and power gone—is there a better way to foil his plots, to refute his arguments, to establish your superiority over his skill and wisdom?

The ship that brought me home was captained by an erratic Swede, who changed his course and deposited me, with genuine compassion, in a small town on the Pacific coast of one of the Central American republics, a few hundred miles south of the port to which he had engaged to convey me. But I was wearied of movement and exotic fancies; so I leaped contentedly upon the firm sands of the village of Mojada, telling myself I should be sure to find the rest that I craved. After all, far better to linger there (I thought), lulled by the seductive splash of the waves and the rustling of palm-fronds, than to sit upon the horsehair sofa of my parental home in the East, and there, cast down by currant wine and cake, and scourged by fatuous relatives, drivel into the ears of gaping neighbors sad stories of the death of colonial Governors.

When I first saw Chloe Greene she was standing, all in white, in the doorway of her father's tile-roofed 'dobe house. She was polishing a silver cup with a cloth, and she looked like a pearl laid against black velvet. She turned on me a flatteringly protracted but a wiltingly disapproving gaze, and then went inside, humming a light song to indicate the value she placed upon my existence.



She looked like a pearl against black velvet.

Small wonder, for Dr. Stamford (the most disreputable professional man between Juneau and Valparaiso) and I were zigzagging along the turfy street, tunelessly singing the words of "Auld Lang Syne" to the air of "Muzzers' Little Coal-Black Coon." We had come from the ice factory, which was Mojada's palace of wickedness, where we had been playing billiards and opening black bottles, white with frost, that we dragged with strings out of old Sandoval's ice-cold vats.

I turned in sudden rage to Dr. Stamford, as sober as the verger of a cathedral. In a moment I had become aware that we were swine cast before a pearl.

"You beast," I said, "this is half your doing. And the other half is the fault of this cursed country. I'd better have gone back to Sleepytown and died in a wild orgy of currant wine and buns than to have had this happen."

Stamford filled the empty street with his roaring laughter.

"You too!" he cried. "And all as quick as the popping of a cork. Well, she does seem to strike agreeable upon the retina. But don't burn your fingers. All Mojadla will tell you that Louis Devoe is the man."

"We will see about that," said I. "And, perhaps, whether he is a man as well as the man."

I lost no time in meeting Louis Devoe. That was easily accomplished, for the foreign colony in Mojada numbered scarce a dozen; and they gathered daily at a half-decent hotel kept by a Turk, where they managed to patch together the fluttering rags of country and civilization that were left them. I sought Devoe before I did my pearl of the doorway, because I had learned a little of the game of war, and knew better than to strike for a prize before testing the strength of the enemy.

A sort of cold dismay—something akin to fear—filled me when I had estimated him. I found a man so perfectly poised, so charming, so deeply learned in the world's rituals, so full of tact, courtesy and hospitality, so endowed with grace and ease and a kind of careless, haughty power that I almost overstepped the bounds in probing him, in turning him on the spit to find the weak point that I so craved for him to have. But I left him whole—I had to make bitter acknowledgment to myself that Louis Devoe was a gentleman worthy of my best blows; and I swore to give him them. He was a great merchant of the country, a wealthy importer and exporter. All day he sat in a fastidiously appointed office, surrounded by works of art and evidences of his high culture, directing through glass doors and windows the affairs of his house.

In person he was slender and hardly tall. His small, well-shaped head was covered with thick, brown hair, trimmed short, and he wore a thick, brown beard, also cut close and to a fine point. His manners were a pattern.

Before long I had become a regular and welcome visitor at the Greene home. I shook my wild habits from me like a worn-out cloak. I trained for the conflict with the care of a prize fighter and the self-denial of a Brahmin.

As for Chloe Greene, I shall weary with no sonnets to her eyebrow. She was a splendidly feminine girl, as wholesome as a November pippin, and no more mysterious than a window pane. She had whimsical little theories that she had deduced from life, and that fitted in the maxims of Epictetus like princess gowns. I wonder, after all, if that old duffer wasn't rather wise!

Chloe had a father, the Rev. Homer Greene, and an intermittent mother, who sometimes palely presided over a twilight teapot. The Rev. Homer was a burr-like man with a life work. He was writing a concordance to the Scriptures, and had arrived as far as Kings. Being, presumably, a suitor for his daughter's hand, I was timber for his literary outpourings. I had the family tree of Israel drilled into my head until I used to cry aloud in my sleep: "And Aminadab begat Jay Eye See," and so forth, until he had tackled another book. I once made a calculation that the Rev. Homer's concordance would be worked up as far as the Seven Vials mentioned in Revelation about the third day after they were opened.

Louis Devoe, as well as I, was a visitor and an intimate friend of the Greenes. It was there I met him the oftenest, and a more agreeable man or a more accomplished I have never hated in my life.

Luckily or unfortunately, I came to be accepted as a boy. My appearance was youthful, and I suppose I had that pleading and homeless air that always draws the motherliness that is in women and the cursed theories and hobbies of pater familiases.

Chloe called me "Tommy," and made sisterly fun of my attempts to woo her. With Devoe she was vastly more reserved. He was the man of romance, one to stir her imagination and deepest feelings had her fancy leaned toward him. I was closer to her, but standing in no glamour; I had the task before me of winning her in what seems to me the American way of friendship that divided us, and to take her, if I could, between sunrise and dark, abetted by neither moonlight nor music nor foreign wiles.

Chloe gave no sign of bestowing her blithe affections upon either of us. But one day she let out to me an inkling of what she preferred in a man. It was tremendously interesting to me, but not illuminating as to its application. I had been tormenting her for the dozenth time with the statement and catalogue of my sentiments toward her.

"Tommy," said she, "I don't want a man to show his love for me by leading an army against another country and blowing people off the earth with cannons."

"If you mean that the opposite way," I answered, "as they say women do, I'll see what I can do. The papers are full of this diplomatic row in Russia. My people know some big people in Washington who are right next to the army people, and I could get an artillery commission and"——

"I'm not that way," interrupted Chloe. "I mean what I say. It isn't the big things that are done in the world, Tommy, that count with a woman. When the knights were riding abroad in their armor to slay dragons, many a stay-at-home page won a lonesome lady's hand by being on the spot to pick up her glove and be quick with her cloak when the wind blew. The man I am to like best, whoever he shall be, must show his love in little ways. He must never forget, after hearing it once, that I do not like to have anyone walk at my left side; that I detest bright-colored neckties; that I prefer to sit with my back to the light; that I like candied violets; that I must not be talked to when I am looking at the moonlight shining on water, and that I very, very often long for dates stuffed with English walnuts."

"Frivolity," I said with a frown. "Any well-trained servant would be equal to such details."

"And he must remember," went on Chloe, "to remind me of what I want when I do not know, myself, what I want."

"You're rising in the scale," I said. "What you seem to need is a first-class clairvoyant."

"And if I say that I am dying to hear a Beethoven sonata, and stamp my foot when I say it, he must know by that that what my soul craves is salted almonds; and he will have them ready in his pocket."

"No," said I, "I am at a loss. I do not know whether your soul's affinity is to be an impresario or a fancy grocer."

Chloe turned her pearly smile upon me.

"Take less than half of what I said as a jest," she went on. "And don't think too lightly of the little things, boy. Be a paladin if you must, but don't let it show on you. Most women are only very big children, and most men are only very little ones. Please us; don't try to overpower us. When we want a hero we can make one out of even a plain grocer the third time he catches our handkerchief before it falls to the ground."

That evening I was taken down with pernicious fever. That is a kind of coast fever with improvements and high-geared attachments. Your temperature goes up among the threes and fours and remains there, laughing scornfully and feverishly at the cinchona trees and the coal-tar derivatives. Pernicious fever is a case for a simple mathematician instead of a doctor. It is merely this formula: Vitality plus the desire to live minus the duration of the fever equals the result.

I took to my bed in the two-room thatched hut where I had been comfortably established and sent for a gallon of rum. That was not for myself. Drunk, Stamford was the best doctor between the Andes and the Pacific. He came, sat at my bedside and drank himself into condition.

The Fiery Hand (Continued)

"There's every reason," he snapped.

"Why should you interest yourself in the Gables?"

"Does no explanation occur to you?"

"None whatever; to me the whole thing smacks of stark lunacy."

"Then you won't come?"

"I've never struck at anything, Smith," I replied, "however undignified, when it has seemed that my presence could be of the slightest use."

As I rose to my feet Smith stepped in front of me, and the steely gray eyes shone out strangely from the altered face. He clapped his hands upon my shoulders.

"If I assure you that your presence is necessary to my safety," he said, "that if you fail me I must seek another companion—will you come?"

Intuitively I knew that he was keeping something back, and I was conscious of some resentment, but, nevertheless, my reply was a foregone conclusion, and, with the borrowed appearance of an extremely untidy old man, I crept guiltily out of my house that evening and into the cab which Smith had waiting.

The Gables was a roomy and rambling place lying back a considerable distance from the road. A semicircular drive gave access to the door, and so densely wooded was the ground that for the most part the drive was practically a tunnel—a verdant tunnel. A high brick wall concealed the building from the point of view of anyone on the roadway, but either horn of the crescent drive terminated at a heavy, wroughtiron gateway.

Smith discharged the cab at the corner of the narrow and winding road upon which the Gables fronted. It was walled in on both sides; on the left the wall being broken by tradesmen's entrances to the houses fronting upon another street, and on the ground of the Gables. As we came to the gate:

"Nothing now," said Smith, pointing into the darkness of the road before us, "except a couple of studios, until one comes to the Heath."

He inserted the key in the lock of the gate and swung it creakingly open. I looked into the black arch of the avenue thought of the haunted residence that lay hidden somewhere beyond, of those who had died in it—especially of the one who had died there under the trees—and found myself out of love with the business of the night.

"Come on!" said Nayland Smith briskly, holding the gate open; 'there should be a fire in the library and refreshments, if the charwoman has followed instructions."

I heard the great gate clang to behind us. Even had there been any moon (and there was none) I doubted if more than a patch or two of light could have penetrated there. The darkness was extraordinary. Nothing broke it, and I think Smith must have found his way by the aid of some sixth sense. At any rate, I saw nothing of the house until I stood some five paces from the steps leading up to the porch. A light was burning in the hallway, but dimly and inhospitably; of the facade of the building I could perceive little.

When we entered the hall and the door was closed behind us, I began wondering anew what object my friend hoped to serve by a vigil in this haunted place. There was a light in the library, the door of which was ajar, and on the large table were decanters, a siphon and some biscuits and sandwiches. A large grip stood upon the floor also. For some reason which was a mystery to me, Smith had decided that we must assume false names while under the roof of the Gables; and: "Now, Pearce," he said, "a whisky and soda before we look around?"

The proposal was welcome enough, for I felt strangely dispirited, and, to tell the truth, in my strange disguise not a little ridiculous.

All my nerves, no doubt, were highly strung, and my sense of hearing unusually acute, for I went in momentary expectation of some uncanny happening. I had not long to wait. As I raised the glass to my lips and glanced across the table at my friend I heard the first faint sound heralding the coming of the bells.

It did not seem to proceed from anywhere within the library, but from some distant room, far away, overhead. A musical sound it was, but, breaking in upon the silence of that ill-omened house, its music was the music of terror. In a faint and very sweet cascade it rippled; a ringing as of tiny silver bells.

I sat down my glass upon the table and, rising slowly from the chair in which I had been seated, stared fixedly at my companion, who was staring with equal fixety at me. I could see that I had not been deluded. Nayland Smith had heard the ringing, too.

"The ghosts waste no time!" he said softly. "This is not new to me; I spent an hour here last night and heard the same sound" * * *

I glanced hastily around the room. It was furnished as a library and contained a considerable collection of works, principally novels. I was unable to judge of the outlook, for the two lofty windows were draped with heavy purple curtains, which were drawn close. A silk-shaded lamp swung from the center of the ceiling, and immediately over the table by which I stood. There was much shadow about the room; and now I glanced apprehensively about me, but especially toward the open door.

In that breathless suspense of listening we stood a while; then:

"There it is again!" whispered Smith tensely.

The ringing of bells was repeated, and seemingly much nearer to us; in fact, it appeared to come from somewhere above, up near the ceiling of the room in which we stood. Simultaneously we looked up, then Smith laughed shortly.

"Instinctive, I suppose," he snapped; "but what do we expect to see in the air?"

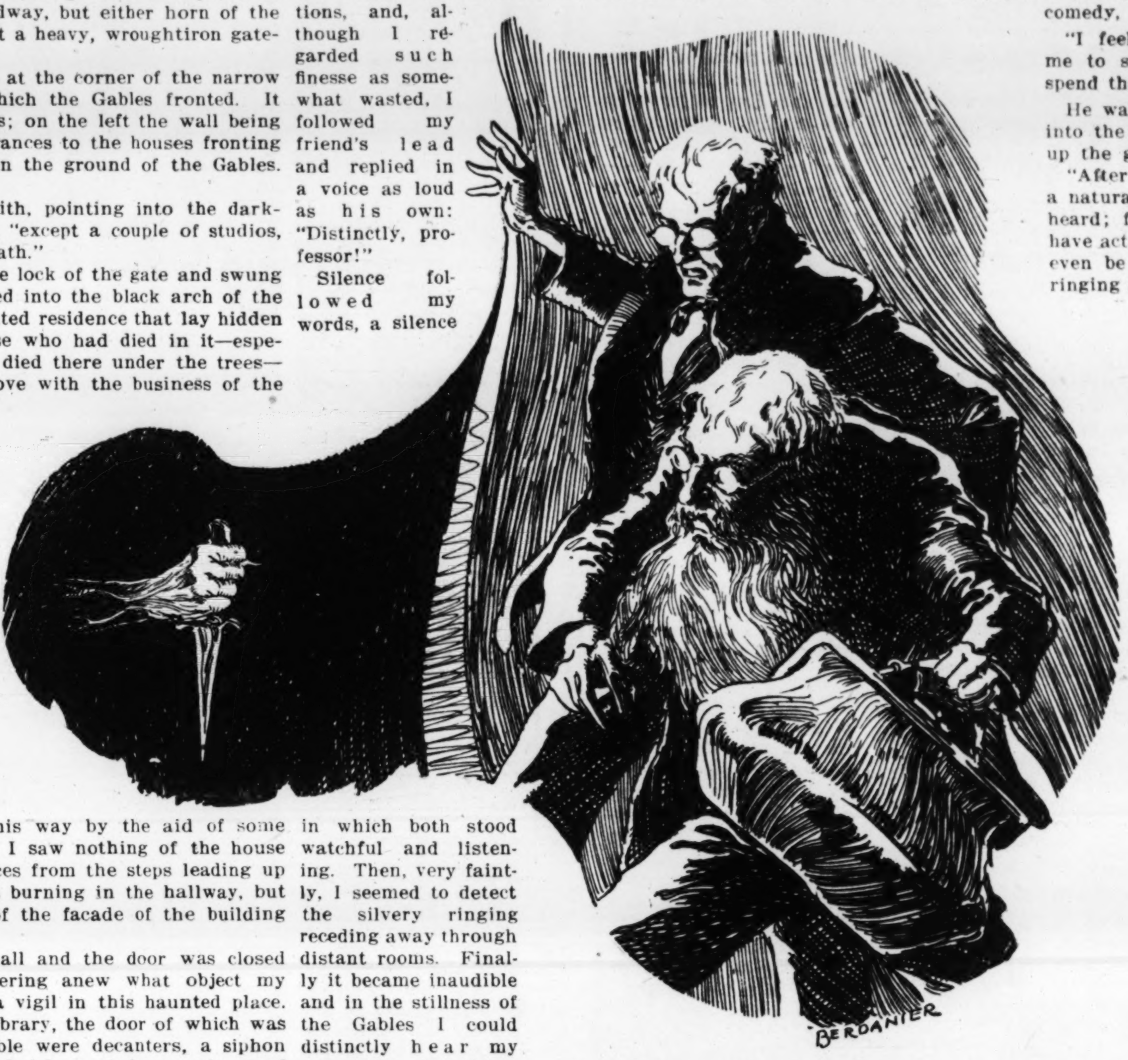
The musical sound now grew in volume; the first tiny peal seemed to be reinforced by others and by others again, until the air round about us was filled with the pealings of these invisible bell ringers.

Although, as I have said, the sound was rather musical than horrible, it was, on the other hand, so utterly unaccountable as to touch the supreme height of the uncanny. I could not doubt that our presence had attracted these unseen ringers to the room in which we stood, and I knew quite well that I was growing pale. This was the room in which at least one unhappy occupant of the Gables had died of fear. I recognized the fact that if this mere overture were going to affect my nerves to such an extent I could not hope to survive the ordeal of the night; a great effort was called for. I emptied my glass at a gulp and stared across the table at Nayland Smith with a sort of defiance. He was standing very upright and motionless, but his eyes were turning right and left, searching every visible corner of the big room.

"Good!" he said in a very low voice. "The terrorizing power of the unknown is boundless, but we must not get in the grip of panic, or we could not hope to remain in this house 10 minutes."

I nodded without speaking. Then Smith, to my amazement, suddenly began to speak in a loud voice, a marked contrast to that, almost a whisper, in which he had spoken formerly.

"My dear Pearce," he cried, "do you hear the ringing of the bells?"



"Don't touch it! Keep away for your life!"

Clearly the latter words were spoken for the benefit of the unseen intelligence controlling these manifestations, and, although I regarded such finesse as somewhat wasted, I followed my friend's lead and replied in a voice as loud as his own: "Distinctly, professor!"

Silence followed my words, a silence in which both stood watchful and listening. Then, very faintly, I seemed to detect the silvery ringing receding away through distant rooms. Finally it became inaudible and in the stillness of the Gables I could distinctly hear my companion breathing. For fully 10 minutes we two remained thus, each momentarily expecting a repetition of the ringing or the coming of some new and more sinister manifestation. But we heard nothing and saw nothing.

"Hand me that grip and don't stir until I come back," hissed Smith in my ear.

He turned and walked out of the libary, his boots creaking very loudly in that awe-inspiring silence.

Standing beside the table, I watched the open door for his return, crushing down a dread that another form than his might suddenly appear there.

I could hear him moving from room to room, and presently, as I waited in the hushed, tense watchfulness, he came in, depositing the grip upon the table. His eyes were gleaming feverishly.

"The house is haunted, Pearce!" he cried. "But no ghost ever frightened me! Come, I will show you your room.

Smith walked ahead of me upstairs; he had snapped up the light in the hallway, and now he turned and cried back loudly: "I fear we should never get servants to stay here."

Again I detected the appeal to a hidden audience; and there was something very uncanny in the idea. The house now was deathly still; the ringing had entirely subsided. In the upper corridor my companion, who seemed to be well acquainted with the position of the switches, again turned up all the lights, and, in pursuit of the strange comedy which he saw fit to enact, addressed me continuously in the loud and unnatural voice which he had adopted as part of his disguise.

We looked into a number of rooms, all well and comfortably furnished, but, although my imagination may have been responsible for the idea, they all seemed to possess a chilly and repellant atmosphere. I felt that to essay sleep in any one of them would be the merest farce, that the place to all intents and purposes was uninhabitable, that something incalculably evil presided over the house.

And through it all so obtuse was I that no glimmer of the truth entered my mind. Outside again in the long, brightly lighted corridor we stood for a moment as if a mutual anticipation of some new event pending had come to us. It was curious—that sudden pulling up and silent questioning of one another, because, although we acted thus, no sound had reached us. A few seconds later our anticipation was realized. From the direction of the stairs it came—a low wailing in a woman's voice and the sweetness of the tones added to the terror of the sound. I clutched at Smith's arms convulsively while that uncanny cry rose and fell—rose and fell—and died away.

Neither of us moved immediately. My mind was working with feverish rapidity and seeking to run down a memory which the sound had stirred into faint quickness. My heart was still leaping wildly when the wailing began again, rising and falling in regular cadence. At that instant I identified it.

During the time Smith and I had spent together in Egypt two years before, searching for the slave girl Karamaneh, I had found myself on one occasion in the neighborhood of a native cemetery near to Bedrasheen. Now the scene which I had witnessed there rose again vividly before me, and I seemed to see a little group of black-robed women clustered together about a native grave; for the wailing which was now dying again in the Gables was the same, or almost the same, as the wailing of those Egyptian mourners.

The house was very silent again now. My forehead was damp with perspiration, and I became more and more convinced that the uncanny ordeal must prove too much for my nerves. Hitherto I had accorded little credence to tales of the supernatural, but face to face with such manifestations as these I realized that I would have faced rather a group of armed dacoits—nay, Dr. Fu-Manchu himself—than have remained another hour in that ill-omened house.

My companion must have read as much in my face. But he kept up the strange, and, to me, purposeless, comedy, when presently he spoke.

"I feel it to be incumbent upon me to suggest," he said, "that we spend the night at a hotel after all."

He walked rapidly downstairs and into the library, and began to strap up the grip.

"After all," he said, "there may be a natural explanation of what we've heard; for it is noteworthy that we have actually seen nothing. It might even be possible to get used to the ringing and the wailing after a time. Frankly, I am loath to go back on my bargain!"

While I stared at him in amazement he stood there indeterminate, as it seemed. Then:

"Come, Pearce!" he cried loudly, "I can see that you do not share my views; but for my own part, I shall return tomorrow and devote further attention to the phenomena."

Extinguishing the light, he walked out into the hallway, carrying the grip in his hand. I was not far behind him. We walked toward the door together, and:

"Turn the light out, Pearce," directed Smith; "the switch is at your elbow. We can see our way to the door well enough now."

In order to carry out these instructions it became necessary for me to remain a few paces in the rear of my companion, and I think I have never experienced such a pang of nameless terror as pierced me at the moment of extinguishing the light, for Smith had not yet opened the door, and the utter darkness of the Gables was horrible beyond expression. Surely darkness is the most potent weapon of the unknown. I know that at the moment my hand left the switch I made for the door, as though the hosts of hell pursued me. I collided violently with Smith. He was evidently facing toward me in the darkness, for at the moment of our collision he grasped my shoulder as in a vise,

"My God, Petrie, look behind you!" he whispered.

I was enabled to judge of the extent and reality of his fear by the fact that the strange subterfuge of addressing me always as Pearce was forgotten. I turned, in a flash * * *

Never can I forget what I saw. Many strange and terrible memories are mine, memories stranger and more terrible than those of the average man; but this thing, which now moved slowly down upon us through the impenetrable gloom of that haunted place, was (if the term be understood) almost absurdly horrible. It was a medieval legend come to life in modern London; it was as though some horrible chimera of the black and ignorant past was become crete and potent in the present.

A luminous hand—a hand in the veins of which fire seemed to run so that the texture of the skin and the shape of the bones within were perceptible—in short, a hand of glowing, fiery flesh, clutching a short knife or dagger, which also glowed with the same hellish, internal luminance, was advancing upon us where we stood—was not three paces removed!

What I did or how I came to do it I can never recall. In all my years I have experienced nothing to equal the stark panic which seized upon me then. I know that I uttered a loud and frenzied cry; I know that I tore myself like a madman from Smith's restraining grip.

"Don't touch it! Keep away, for your life!" I heard.

But dimly I recollect that, finding the thing approaching yet nearer, I lashed out with my fists, madly, blindly—and struck something palpable.

What was the result I cannot say. At that point my recollections merge into confusion. Something or someone (Smith, I afterward discovered) was hauling me by main force through the darkness; I fell a considerable distance on to gravel, which lacerated my hands and gashed my knees. Then, with the cool night air fanning my brow, I was running—running—my breath coming in hysterical sobs. Beside me fled another figure. And my definite recollections commence again at that point. For this companion of my flight from the Gables threw

"My boy," said he, "my lily-white and reformed Romeo, medicine will do you no good. But I will give you quinine, which, being bitter, will arouse in you hatred and anger—two stimulants that will add 10 per cent to your chances. You are as strong as a caribou calf, and you will get well if the fever doesn't get in a knockout blow when you're off your guard."

For two weeks I lay on my back, feeling like a Hindoo widow on a burning ghat. Old Atasca, an untrained Indian nurse, sat near the door like a petrified statue of What's-the-Use, attending to her duties, which were, mainly, to see that time went by without slipping a cog. Sometimes I would fancy myself back in the Philippines, or, at worse times, sliding off the horsehair sofa in Sleepytown.

One afternoon I ordered Atasca to vamoose, and got up and dressed carefully. I took my temperature, which I was pleased to find 104. I paid almost dainty attention to my dress, choosing solicitously a necktie of a dull and subdued hue. The mirror showed that I was looking little the worse for my illness. The fever gave brightness to my eyes and color to my face. And while I looked at my reflection my color went and came again as I thought of Chloe Greene and the millions of eons that had passed since I'd seen her, and of Louis Devoe and the time he had gained on me.

I went straight to her house. I seemed to float rather than walk; I hardly felt the ground under my feet; I thought pernicious fever must be a great boon to make one feel so strong.

I found Chloe and Louis Devoe sitting under the awning in front of the house. She jumped up and met me with a double handshake.

"I'm glad, glad, glad to see you out again!" she cried, every word a pearl strung on the string of her sentence. "You are well, Tommy—or better, of course. I wanted to come and see you, but they wouldn't let me."

"Oh, yes," said I, carelessly, "it was nothing. Merely a little fever. I am out again, as you see."

We three sat there and talked for half an hour or so. Then Chloe looked out yearningly and almost piteously across the ocean. I could see in her sea-blue eyes some deep and intense desire. Devoe, curse him! saw it too.

"What is it?" we asked, in unison.

"Cocoanut pudding," said Chloe, pathetically. "I've wanted some—oh, so badly, for two days. It's got beyond a wish; it's an obsession."

"The cocoanut season is over," said Devoe, in that voice of his that gave thrilling interest to his most commonplace words. "I hardly think one could be found in Mojada. The natives never use them except when they are green and the milk is fresh. They sell the ripe ones to the fruiterers."

"Wouldn't a broiled lobster or a Welsh rabbit do as well?" I remarked, with the engaging idiocy of a pernicious fever convalescent.

Chloe came as near to pouting as a sweet disposition and a perfect profile would allow her to come.

The Rev. Homer poked his ermine-lined face through the doorway and added a concordance to the conversation.

"Sometimes," said he, "old Campos keeps the dried nuts in his little store on the hill. But it would be far better, my daughter, to restrain unusual desires and partake thankfully of the daily dishes that the Lord has set before us."

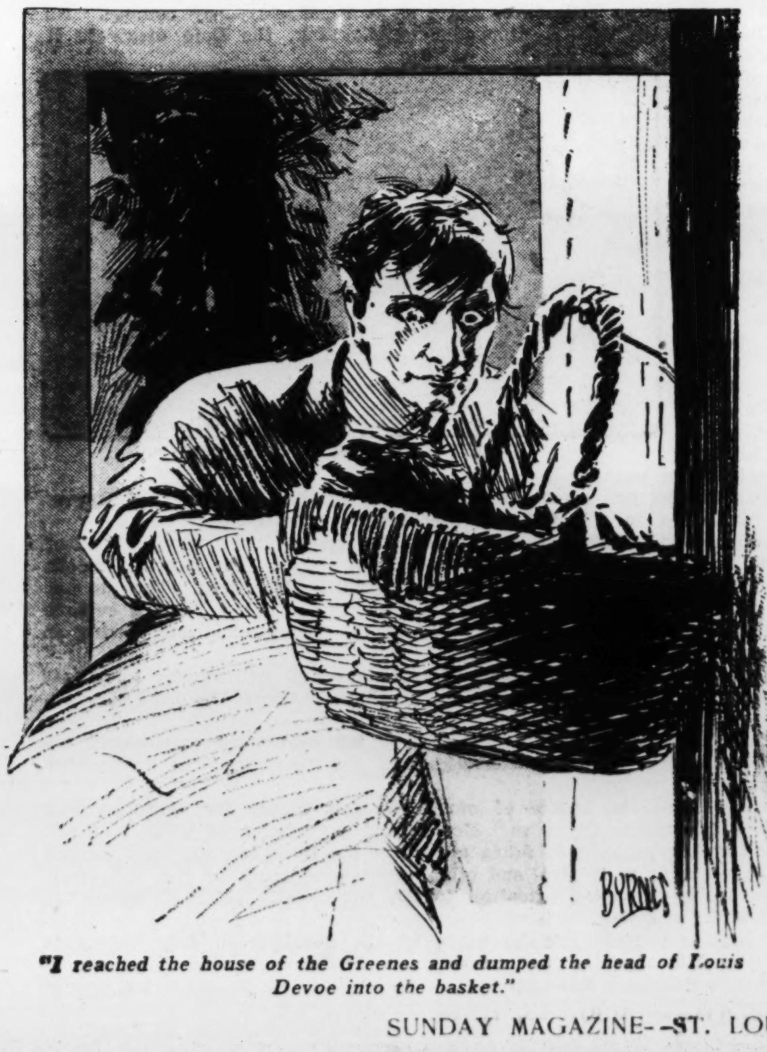
"Stuff!" said I.

"How was that?" asked the Rev. Homer, sharply.

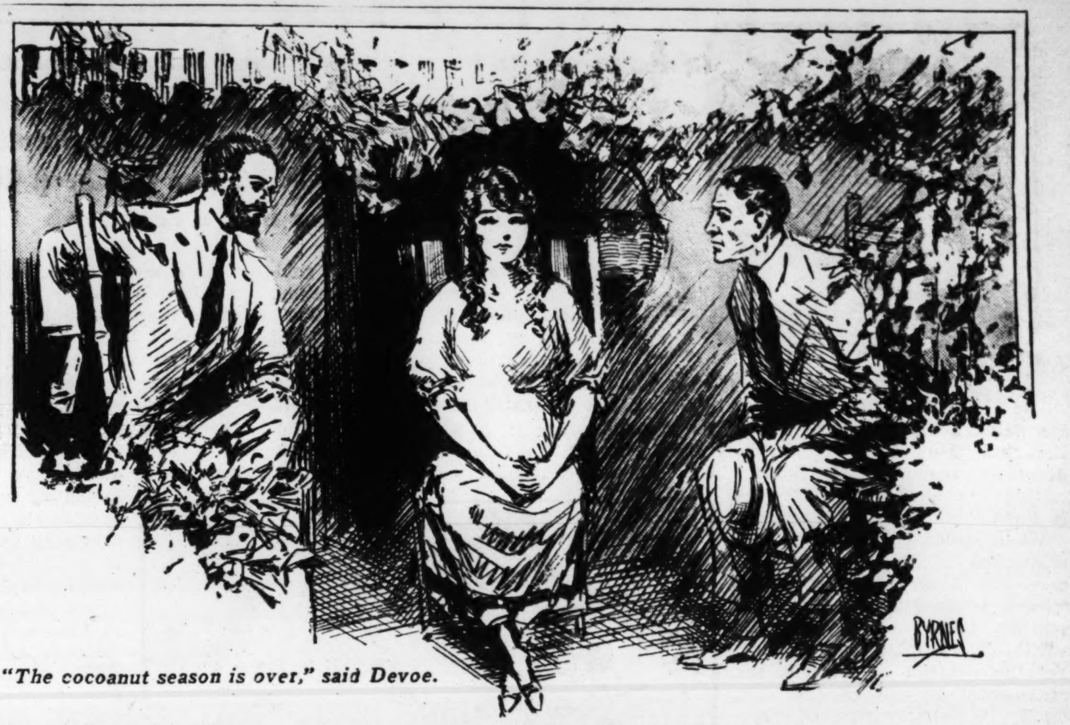
"I say it's tough," said I, "to drop into the vernacular, that Miss Greene should be deprived of the food she desires—a simple thing, like kalsomine pudding. Perhaps," I continued, solicitously, "some pickled walnuts or a fricassee of Hungarian butternuts would do as well."

Everyone looked at me with a slight exhibition of curiosity.

Louis Devoe arose and made his adieus. I watched him until he had sauntered slowly and grandiosely to the corner, around which he turned to reach his great warehouse and store. Chloe made her excuses, and went inside for a few minutes to attend to some detail affecting the 7 o'clock dinner. She was a passed mistress in housekeeping. I had tasted her puddings and bread with beatitude



"I reached the house of the Greenes and dumped the head of Louis Devoe into the basket."



"The cocoanut season is over," said Devoe.

When all had gone, I turned casually and saw a basket made of plaited green withes hanging by a nail outside the door jamb. With a rush that made my hot temples throb there came vividly to my mind recollections of the head hunters—those grim, flinty, relentless little men, never seen, but chilling the warmest noonday by the subtle terror of their concealed presence. * * * From time to time, as vanity or ennui or love or jealousy or ambition may move him, one creeps forth with his snickersnee and takes up the silent trail. * * * Back he comes, triumphant, bearing the severed, gory head of his victim. * * * His particular brown or white maid lingers, with fluttering bosom, casting soft tiger's eyes at the evidence of his love for her.

I stole softly from the house and returned to my hut. From its supporting nails in the wall I took a machete as heavy as a butcher's cleaver and sharper than a safety razor. And then I chuckled softly to myself and set out to the fastidiously appointed private office of Monsieur Louis Devoe, usurper to the hand of the Pearl of the Pacific.

He was never slow at thinking; he gave one look at my face and another at the weapon in my hand as I entered his door, and then he seemed to fade from my sight. I ran to the back door, kicked it open and saw him running like a deer up the road toward the wood that began 200 yards away. I was after him, with a shout. I remember hearing children and women screaming and seeing them flying from the road.

He was fleet, but I was stronger. A mile, and I had almost come up with him. He doubled cunningly and dashed into a brake that extended into a small canyon. I crashed through this after him, and in five minutes had him cornered in an angle of insurmountable cliffs. There his instinct of self-preservation steadied him, as it will steady even animals at bay. He turned to me, quite calm, with a ghastly smile.

"Oh, Rayburn!" he said, with such an awful effort at ease that I was impolite enough to laugh rudely in his face. "Oh, Rayburn!" said he, "come, let's have done with this nonsense. Of course, I know it's the fever and you're not yourself; but collect yourself, man—give me that ridiculous weapon, now, and let's go back and talk it over."

"I will go back," said I, "carrying your head with me. We will see how charmingly it can discourse when it lies in the basket at her door."

"Come," said he, persuasively, "I think better of you than to suppose that you try this sort of thing as a joke. But even the vagaries of a fever-crazed lunatic come some time to a limit. What is this talk about heads and baskets? Get yourself together and throw away that absurd can chopper. What would Miss Greene think of you?" he ended, with the silky cajolery that one would use toward a fretful child.

"Listen," said I. "At last you have struck upon the right note. What would she think of me? Listen," I repeated.

"There are women," I said, "who look upon horsehair sofas and currant wine as dross. To them even the calculated modulation of your well-trimmed talk sounds like the dropping of rotten plums from a tree in the night. They are the maidens who walk back and forth in the villages, scorning the emptiness of the baskets at the doors of the young men who would win them. One such as they," I said, "is waiting. Only a fool would try to win a woman by drooling like a braggart in her doorway or by waiting upon her whims like a footman. They are all daughters of Herodias, and to gain their hearts one must lay the heads of his enemies before them with his own hands. Now, bend your neck, Louis Devoe. Do not be a coward as well as a chatterer at a lady's tea table."

"There, there!" said Devoe, falteringly. "You know me, don't you, Rayburn?"

"Oh, yes," I said, "I know you. I know you. I know you. But the basket is empty. The old men of the village and the young men, and both the dark maidens and the ones who are as fair as pearls walk back and forth and see its emptiness. Will you kneel now, or must we have a scuffle? It is not like you to make things go roughly and with bad form. But the basket is waiting for your head."

With that he went to pieces. I had to catch him as he tried to scamper past me like a scared rabbit. I stretched him out and got a foot on his chest, but he squirmed like a worm, although I appealed repeatedly to his sense of propriety and the duty he owed to himself as a gentleman not to make a row.

But at last he gave me the chance, and I swung the machete.

It was not hard work. He flopped like a chicken during the six or seven blows that it took to sever his head; but finally he lay still, and I tied his head in my handkerchief. The eyes opened and shut thrice while I walked a hundred yards. I was red to my feet with the drip, but what did that matter? With delight I felt under my hands the crisp touch of his short, thick, brown hair and close-trimmed beard.

I reached the house of the Greenes and dumped the head of Louis Devoe into the basket that still hung by the nail in the door jamb. I sat in a chair under the awning and waited. The sun was within two hours of setting. Chloe came out and looked surprised.

"Where have you been, Tommy?" she asked. "You were gone when I came out."

"Look in the basket," I said rising to my feet. She looked, and gave a little scream—of delight, I was pleased to note.

"Oh, Tommy!" she said. "It was just what I wanted you to do. It's leaking a little, but that doesn't matter. Wasn't I telling you? It's the little things that count. And you remembered."

Little things! She held the ensanguined head of Louis Devoe in her white apron. Tiny streams of red widened on her apron and dripped upon the floor. Her face was bright and tender.

"Little things, indeed!" I thought again. "The head hunters are right. These are the things that women like you to do for them."

Chloe came close to me. There was no one in sight. She looked up at me with sea-blue eyes that said things they had never said before.

"You think of me," she said. "You are the man I was describing. You think of the little things, and they are what make the world worth living in. The man for me must consider my little wishes and make me happy in small ways. He must bring me little red peaches in December if I wish them, and then I will love him till June. I will have no knight in armor slaying his rival or killing dragons for me. You please me very well, Tommy."

I stooped and kissed her. Then a moisture broke out on my forehead, and I began to feel weak. I saw the red stains vanish from Chloe's apron, and the head of Louis Devoe turn to a brown, dried cocoanut.

"There will be cocoanut pudding for dinner, Tommy, boy," said Chloe gayly, "and you must come. I must go in for a little while."

She vanished in a delightful flutter.

Dr. Stamford tramped up hurriedly. He seized my pulse as though it were his own property that I had escaped with.

"You are the biggest fool outside of any asylum!" he said angrily. "Why did you leave your bed? And the idiotic things you've been doing!—and no wonder, with your pulse going like a sledge hammer."

"Name some of them," said I.

"Devoe sent for me," said Stamford. "He saw you from his window go to old Campos' store, chase him up the hill with his own yardstick, and then come back and make off with his biggest cocoanut."

"It's the little things that count, after all," said I.

"It's your little bed that counts with you just now," said the doctor. "You come with me at once, or I'll throw up the case. You're as loony as a loon."

So I got no cocoanut pudding that evening, but I conceived a distrust as to the value of the method of head hunters. Perhaps for many centuries the maidens of the villages may have been looking wistfully at the heads in the baskets at the doorways, longing for other and lesser trophies.

FU-MANCHU & CO.

By SAXE ROHMER

The Fiery Hand

IN looking over my notes dealing with the second phase of Dr. Fu-Manchu's activities in England, during which it was my lot to experience things stranger and more acutely horrible than those which ordinarily fall to the lot of man, I find that one of the worst hours of my life was associated with the singular and seemingly inconsequent adventure of the fiery hand.

Inspector Weymouth called one morning and entered upon a surprising account of a visit to a house at Hampstead which enjoyed the sinister reputation of being uninhabitable.

"But in what way does the case enter into your province?" inquired Nayland Smith, idly tapping out his pipe on a bar of the grate.

We had not long finished breakfast, but from an early hour Smith had been at his eternal smoking, which only the advent of a meal had interrupted.

"Well," replied the Inspector, who occupied a big armchair near the window, "I was sent to look into it, I suppose, because I had nothing better to do at the moment."

"Ah!" jerked Smith, glancing over his shoulder.

The ejaculation had a veiled significance, for our quest of Dr. Fu-Manchu had come to an abrupt termination by reason of the fact that all trace of that malignant genius and of the group surrounding him had vanished.

"The house is called the Gables," continued the Scotland Yard man, "and I knew I was on a wild-goose chase from the first"——

"Why?" snapped Smith.

"Because I was there before, six months ago or so—just before your present return to England—and I knew what to expect."

Smith looked up with some faint dawning of interest perceptible in his manner.

"I was unaware," he said with a slight smile, "that the cleaning up of haunted houses came within the province of New Scotland Yard. I am learning something."

"In the ordinary way," replied the big man good-humoredly, "it doesn't. But a sudden death always excites suspicion, and"——

"A sudden death?" I said, glancing up. "You didn't explain that the ghost had killed anyone!"

"I'm afraid I'm a poor hand at yarn spinning, doctor," said Weymouth, turning his blue, twinkling eyes in my direction. "Two people have died at the Gables within the last six months."

"You begin to interest me," declared Smith, and there came something of the old, eager look into his gaunt face, as, having lighted his pipe, he tossed the match end to the hearth.

"I had hoped for some little excitement myself," confessed the Inspector. "This dead end, with not a ghost of a clew to the whereabouts of the yellow fiend, has been getting on my nerves"——

Nayland Smith grunted sympathetically.

"Although Dr. Fu-Manchu has been in England for some months now," continued Weymouth, "I have never set eyes upon him; the house we raided in Museum street proved to be empty; in a word, I am wasting my time. So that I volunteered to run up to Hampstead and look into the matter of the Gables, principally as a distraction. It's a queer business, and more in the psychical research society's line than mine, I'm afraid. Still, if there were no Dr. Fu-Manchu, it might be of interest to you—and to you, Dr. Petrie—because it illustrates the fact that, given the right sort of subject, death can be brought about without any elaborate mechanism—such as our Chinese friends employ."

"You interest me more and more," declared Smith, stretching himself in the long white cane rest chair.

"Two men, both fairly sound, except that the first one had an asthmatic heart, have died at the Gables without anyone laying a little finger upon them. Oh! there was no jugglery! They weren't poisoned, or bitten by venomous insects, or suffocated; or anything like that. They just died of fear—stark fear."

With my elbows resting upon the table cover and my chin in my hands, I was listening attentively now, and Nayland Smith, a big cushion behind his head, was watching the speaker with a keen and speculative look in those steely eyes of his. "You imply that Dr. Fu-Manchu has something to learn from the Gables?" he jerked.

Weymouth nodded stolidly.

"I can't work up anything like amazement in these days," continued the latter; "every other case seems stale and hackneyed alongside this case. But I must confess that when the Gables came on the books of the Yard the second time I began to wonder. I thought there might be some tangible clew, some link connecting the two victims; perhaps some evidence of robbery or of revenge—of some sort of motive. In short, I hoped to find evidence of human agency at work, but, as before, I was disappointed."

"It's a legitimate case of a haunted house, then?" said Smith.

"Yes; we find them occasionally, these uninhabitable places, where there is something, something malignant and harmful to human life, but something that you cannot arrest, that you cannot hope to bring into court."

"Ah," replied Smith slowly, "I suppose you are right. There are historic instances, of course; Glamsy Castle and Spedlins Tower in Scotland; Peel Castle, Isle of Man, with its Maudhe Dhug; the gray lady of Rainham Hall; the headless horses of Caistor; the Wesley ghost of Epworth rectory, and others. But I have never come in personal contact with such a case, and if I did I should feel very humiliated to have to confess that there was any agency which could produce a physical result—death—but which was immune from physical retaliation."

Weymouth nodded his head again.

"I might feel a bit sour about it, too," he replied, "if it were not that I haven't much pride left in these days, considering the show of physical retaliation I have made against Dr. Fu-Manchu."

"A home thrust, Weymouth!" snapped Nayland Smith with one of those rare boyish laughs of his. "We're children to that Chinese doctor, Inspector, to that weird product of a weird people who are as old in evil as the pyramids are old in mystery. But about the Gables?"

"Well, it's an uncanny place. You mentioned Glamys Castle a moment ago, and it's possible to understand an old stronghold like that being haunted; but the Gables was only built about 1870—it's quite a modern house. It was built for a wealthy Quaker family, and they occupied it uninterruptedly and apparently without anything unusual occurring, for over forty years. Then it was sold to a Mr. Maddison—and Mr. Maddison died there six months ago."

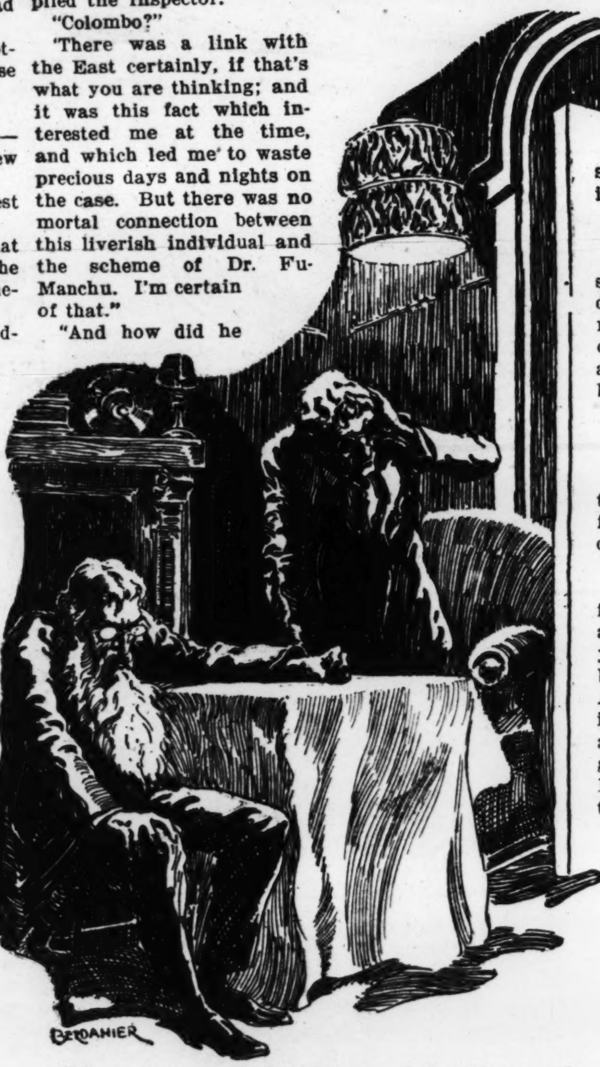
"Maddison?" said Smith sharply, staring across at Weymouth. "What was he? Where did he come from?"

"He was a retired tea planter from Colombo," replied the Inspector.

"Colombo?"

"There was a link with the East certainly, if that's what you are thinking; and it was this fact which interested me at the time, and which led me to waste precious days and nights on the case. But there was no mortal connection between this liverish individual and the scheme of Dr. Fu-Manchu. I'm certain of that."

"And how did he die?" I asked interestedly.



"There it is again," whispered Smith tensely.

"He just died in his chair one evening in the room which he used as library. It was his custom to sit there every night, when there were no visitors, reading until 12 o'clock or later. He was a bachelor, and his household consisted of a cook, a housemaid and a man who had been with him for 30 years, I believe. At the time of Mr. Maddison's death his household had recently been deprived of two of its members. The cook and housemaid both resigned one morning, giving as their reason the fact that the place was haunted."

"In what way?"

"I interviewed the precious pair at the time, and they told me absurd and various tales about dark figures bending over them in bed at night, whispering; but their chief trouble was a continuous ringing of bells about the house."

"Bells?"

"They said that it became unbearable. Night and day there were bells ringing all over the house. At any rate they went, and for three or four days the Gables was occupied by Mr. Maddison and his man, whose name was Stevens. I interviewed the latter also, and he was an altogether more reliable witness, a decent, steady sort of man whose story impressed me very much at the time."

"Did he confirm the ringing?"

"He swore to it—a sort of jangle, sometimes up in the air, near the ceilings, and sometimes under the floor like the shaking of silver bells."

Nayland Smith stood up abruptly and began to pace the room, leaving great trails of blue-gray smoke behind him.

"Your story is sufficiently interesting, Inspector," he declared, "even to divert my mind from the eternal contemplation of the Fu-Manchu problem. This would appear to be distinctly a case of an 'astral bell,' such as we sometimes hear of in India."

"It was Stevens," continued Weymouth, "who found Mr. Maddison. He (Stevens) had been out on business connected with the household arrangements and at about 11 o'clock he returned, letting himself in with a key. There was a light in the library, and getting no response to his knocking Stevens entered. He found his master sitting bolt upright in a chair, clutching the arms with rigid fingers and staring straight before him with a look of such frightful horror on his face that Stevens positively ran from the room and out of the house. Mr. Maddison was stone dead. When a doctor, who lives at no great distance away, came and examined him he could find no trace of violence whatever; he had apparently died of fright, to judge from the expression on his face."

"Anything else?"

"Only this: I learned indirectly that the last member of the Quaker family to occupy the house had apparently witnessed the apparition, which had led to his vacating the place. I got the story from the wife of a man who had been employed as gardener there at that time. The apparition—which he witnessed in the hallway, if I remember rightly—took the form of a sort of luminous hand clutching a long, curved knife."

"Oh, heavens!" cried Smith, and laughed shortly, "that's quite in order!"

"This gentleman told no one of the occurrence until after he had left the house, no doubt in order that the place should not acquire an evil reputation. Most of the original furniture remained, and Mr. Maddison took the house furnished. I don't think there can be any doubt that what killed him was fear at seeing a repetition"——

"Of the fiery hand?" concluded Smith.

"Quite so. Well I examined the Gables pretty closely, and with another Scotland Yard man spent a night in the empty house. We saw nothing; but once, very faintly, we heard the ringing of bells."

Smith spun around upon him rapidly.

"You can swear to that?" he snapped.

"I can swear to it," declared Weymouth stolidly. "It seemed to be over our heads. We were sitting in the dining room. Then it was gone, and we heard nothing more whatever of an unusual nature. Following the death of Mr. Maddison, the Gables remained empty until a year ago, when a French gentleman named Lejay leased it"——

"Furnished?"

"Yes, nothing was removed."

"Who kept the place in order?"

"A married couple living in the neighborhood undertook to do so. The man attended to the lawn and so forth, and the woman came once a week, I believe, to clean up the house."

"And Lejay?"

"He came in only last week, having leased the house for six months. His family were to have joined him in a day or two, and he, with the aid of the pair I have just mentioned, and assisted by a French servant he brought over with him, was putting the place in order. At about 12 o'clock on a Friday night this servant ran into a neighboring house screaming 'The fiery hand!' and when at last a Constable arrived and a frightened group went up the avenue of the Gables, they found M. Lejay dead in the avenue, near the steps just outside the hall door! He had the same face of horror." * * *

"What a tale for the press?" snapped Smith.

"The owner has managed to keep it quiet so far, but this time I think it will leak into the press—yes."

There was a short silence, then: "You have been down to the Gables again?"

"I was there on Saturday, but there's not a scrap of evidence. The man undoubtedly died of fright in the same way as Maddison. The place ought to be pulled down; it's unholy."

"Unholy is the word," I said. "I never heard anything like it. This Mr. LeJay had no enemies? There could be no possible motive?"

"None whatever. He was a business man from Marseilles, and his affairs necessitated his remaining in or near London for some considerable time; therefore he decided to make his headquarters here temporarily, and leased the Gables with that intention."

Nayland Smith was pacing the floor with increasing rapidity; he was tugging at the lobe of his left ear, and his pipe had long since gone out. * * *

I started to my feet as a tall, bearded man swung open the door and hurled himsely impetuously into my room. He wore a silk hat which fitted him very ill, and a black frock coat which did not fit him at all.

"It's all right, Petrie!" cried the apparition; "I've leased the Gables!"

It was Nayland Smith. I stared at him in amazement.

"The first time I have employed a disguise," continued my friend rapidly, "since the memorable episode of the false pigtail." He threw a small brown leather grip upon the floor. "In case you should care to visit the house, Petrie, I have brought these things. My tenancy commences tonight!"

Two days had elapsed and I had entirely forgotten the strange story of the Gables which Inspector Weymouth had related to us; evidently it was otherwise with my friend, and, utterly at a loss for an explanation of his singular behavior, I stooped mechanically and opened the grip. It contained an odd assortment of garments, and among other things several gray wigs and a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles.

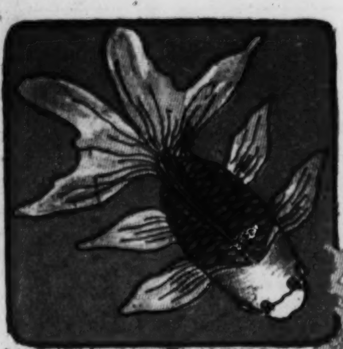
Kneeling there with this strange litter about me, I looked up amazedly. Nayland Smith, with the unsuitable silk hat set right upon the back of his head, was pacing the room excitedly, his fuming pipe protruding from the tangle of a fictitious beard.

"You see, Petrie," he began again rapidly, "I did not entirely trust the agent. I've leased the house in the name of Prof. Maxton" * * *

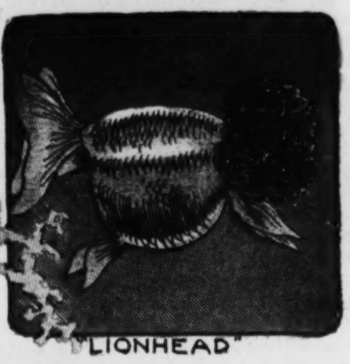
"But, Smith," I cried, "what possible reason can there be for disguise?"

How the Goldfish Fad Holds St. Louis

Men of wealth have taken up the hobby and spent large sums to procure rare specimens, stores where they are sold are crowded and the libraries are having difficulty providing books about them—One man has been cultivating Oriental breeds here for half a century :: ::

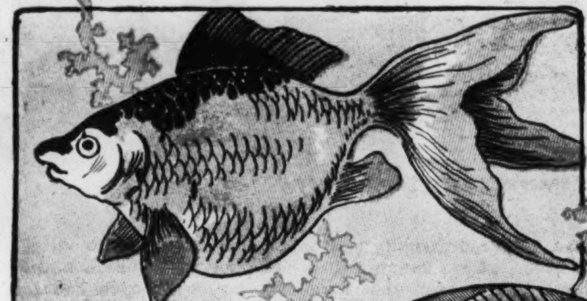


HIGHLY CULTIVATED "RUYKIN"



"LIONHEAD"

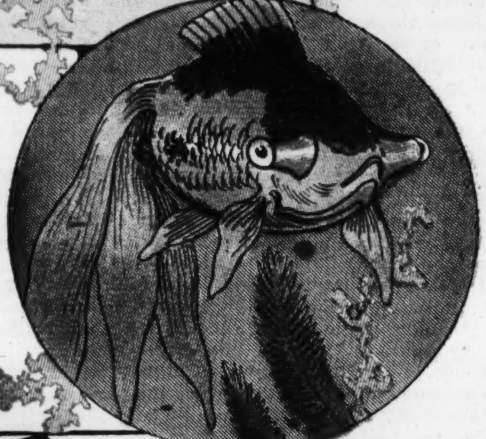
ST. LOUIS is obsessed with the goldfish fad. Without any boosting, without publicity, quietly, almost unobserved, the hobby has spread until its devotees are numbered by the hundreds. Stores where the fish and accessories to their cultivation are sold are doing a big business. Books about goldfish are in great demand at the libraries. They have become more than pets for the children or part of the decorative scheme of the home. Men of business, men of wealth, men of all callings have become interested in them.



"JAPANESE FANTAIL"

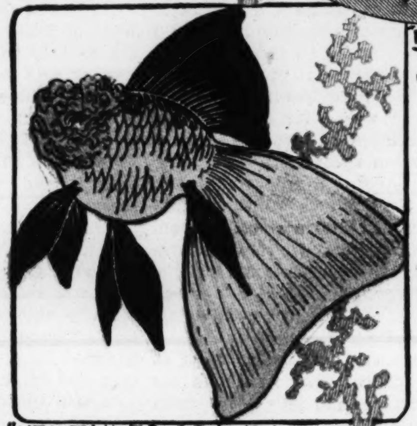
When goldfish and men are mentioned in the same breath at once the listener stands at attention to hear a joke; nothing serving better as a symbolic antithesis to man than a fish. Yet the gentlest of all fish, the ornamental branch of the carp family, is being cultivated, cherished and loved, individually and collectively, by real muscular men, men who do things in life, who love the prowess of the field, who scorn the inane.

The culture of goldfish was a pastime in the Orient before Columbus navigated the Western Hemisphere. The Japanese, Chinese and East Indians bred goldfish of fantastic shape and variegated colors as a fad, an art and semi-religious practice and are still engaged in the fascinating pursuit. In fact, some of the most expensive fish come from Japan and some are happy in St. Louis aquaria.



"FRINGETAIL TELESCOPE"

Primarily men of the Occident emulated the East through a development of the artistic: an aquarium of brilliantly colored and peculiarly shaped fish scintillating in a sunny window corner not only pleases the eye; but serves as a nerve tonic, a thing conducive to peaceful thoughts. Dr. F. J. Artz has been rearing goldfish, in the beautiful rustic pond that dots the ground surrounding his home at Twelfth and Lami streets, for the past 50 years and is, no doubt, the most experienced native pisciculturist in St. Louis. He vouches for the mental blessings that fall to him who cultures the goldfish.



"VEILTAILED ORANDA SHISHIGASHIRA"

The spirit of competition pervading the United States has injected a new element into the culture of goldfish and it has become a gentle game.

Who might evolve the most beautiful type, the most fantastic?

The instant competition entered into the spirit of fish culture the fad became one for men, entirely out of the realm of the endemic; go to the four corners of the earth in this day and you will find aquarium societies whose memberships are comprised mostly of men.

Every man likes to outdo his fellow, whether it be in the winning of a particular woman or in rolling a cigarette.

But hist! a little digressive confession in the going: Any man will talk baby-talk to a mute pet if he thinks no one is in earshot, such outbursts of affection have been heard even in the practice of pisciculture right here in St. Louis. This is to show the lowbrow who thinks fish culture is for the mollycoddle that big men can be tender and affectionate.

More than 100 names of local men and women breeding ornamental goldfish as a pastime are listed on the books of S. Chichester Lloyd, president of the National Aquarium Society of America, and the St. Louis branch, in its infancy, has more than half that number for its active membership.

St. Louis has been somewhat tardy in its appreciation for really expensive fish and possibly Lloyd is the only possessor of fish valued above $100 each. In many Eastern cities fanciers own fish ranging from $50 to really $2000 each.

New York has a public aquarium replete with highbrow fish and these aristocrats of the depths attract more attention during the course of a single year than do the rare and beautiful flowers in the famous gardens of Henry Shaw in 10 years. And this is taking into consideration the overwhelming resident population of New York and the high number of transient visitors, too.

St. Louis is not only willing to be shown the value of pisciculture in its most artistic consummation, but is in the very act of looking in! And be it known, goldfish culture is not a game for the rich alone—its pursuit is inexpensive. Indeed, its offers possibilities for earning money, not trifling sums either, but great mortgage-devouring sums. Patience and care are the essential capital stock. Some of the best baby goldfish can be had for 50 cents each and with patient rearing earn an interest which runs rapidly into the decimals of dollars and—beyond!

The St. Louis society is advocating a public aquarium. In this movement it will have the aid of the Zoological Society, co-operation having been offered by George Dieckmann, president of the latter. All aquarium owners are interested in the movement.

Thinking of goldfish the majority at once pictures one of those dinky glass globes reposing on a window sill or hanging from a brass chain and containing a few common goldfish bought at the dime store, which swim everlastingly in circles and misery. These constitute the goldfish hell, and, to these there is no further reference than to deplore the practice and express the hope the S. P. C. A. will enlist more active members.

Probably Dr. Artz has maintained the most ideal aquaria and outdoor pool in St. Louis. At present the pool is empty, a temporary condition, obviously because of weather changes. Dr. Artz, however, will shortly stock his pond, start his miniature waterfalls and begin the rearing of fancy fish as has been his wont for these 50 years.

Adolphus Busch III is interested deeply in his splendid aquarium at Grand View Farm, St. Louis County. He is owner of valuable specimens. Wallace C. Capen has an invaluable collection of finny aristocrats—so have Emile R. Cramer, E. A. Faust, C. B. Nicholson—but Capen, perhaps with the exception of Chichester Lloyd, owns the finest fish in St. Louis.

A list of goldfish owners would include Louis C. Koehler, F. H. Wood, Fred C. Lake, Mrs. James Livingston, Theodore Benoist, Miss Julia Papin, Miss Kathleen Murphy, Edward M. Flesh, Mrs. J. T. Drummond, Edwin A. Lemp, August C. Erker and T. H. Gerhart.

Chichester Lloyd, leader of piscicultural art in this country, says he rears annually more than 20,000 baby Chinese, Japanese and East Indian goldfish in his back yard in anything that will hold water, from dish pans to discarded concrete wash tubs and casks.

There is much talk among fish fanciers of the "balanced aquarium." To those who purchase bargain fish globes this might mean an aquarium balanced on a chain. The term is unfortunate, "reciprocating aquarium" would be more accurate. Lloyd says that in the balanced aquarium there should be a gallon of water to each half inch of fish exclusive of tail, five saggittaria plants or two bunches of myriophyllum, or one of anacharis to each fish. The gallonage of the tank may be determined by multiplying the length in inches by the depth and this by the width and dividing by 231, the answer being the number of gallons. There should be one tadpole and three snails to each fish. Tanks so arranged will be reciprocating and need no change of water. Animals consume oxygen and give off carbonic acid gas and plants consume carbonic acid gas and give off oxygen, therefore unless oxygen is added to the water by plants or artificial aeration, animal life must cease. Tadpoles and snails act as scavengers for the fish and keep the aquarium free of slime.

The highest development of goldfish was not introduced into America until about six years ago when the Philadelphia Aquarium Society imported by way of Germany some rare specimens of the veiled tailed dragon-eyed goldfish. A man to whom a goldfish was simply a goldfish and nothing more and had brought home one that cost him a quarter of a dollar in a paper pail, might have learned with amazement that a perfect specimen of this fish cost from $100 to $2800.

Today they may be had at prices ranging from $5 to $50, because of the breeding of several thousand in the United States. These prices are for baby fishes but an inch long! The demand exceeds the supply. As fanciers gobble up these aristocratic finny infants the general public knows nothing of them.

Odd variations in form obtained through scientific breeding are not more amazing than the exquisite color schemes intermingling with the scintillating texture of the skin. These highbrow fish are practically free of scales, a few remaining here and there, like spangles of gold, to make the design more striking against marvelous tones of crimson, purple, blue, orange and pearl. There are occasional black dots not unlike purposeful beauty spots.

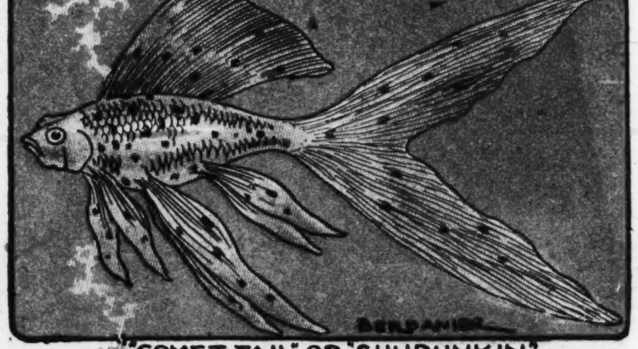
But one fish in five million, it is estimated, is perfectly marked and the one might be worth actually twice its worth in gold! So after all goldfish and goldmines might be somewhat analogous. There are two, three and even four, long, sweeping tails to a fish, each separate and distinct. The eyes measure a trifle over a third of an inch in diameter and are often turned upward.

The Oranda Shishigashira, or lion-headed fringe-tail, has recently been bred in America. After its second year this fish grows a hood and long tail. A pair might be had for $1000.

To enumerate and describe the variations of aristrocratic goldfish would lend to these paragraphs the air of an essay and at once be a digression. The intent is to throw illumination upon a fastly growing and misinterpreted fad, showing why men are interested in what, to many, seems to be an attraction for children.

A much more attractive scavenger for the aquarium than the snail or tadpole recently has been introduced into this country and he is worthy of mention in that he is luring considerable interest that rightfully belongs to the goldfish, this busy creature is the Takanohadojo, familiarly styled Dojo. He comes from Japan.

The Dojo is much like an eel in shape, and in Japan is used for food. In the aquarium he is of interest every minute. Not a fragment of food is allowed to decompose, for the Dojo eats everything that might be eaten. In his frantic pursuit of food the Dojo has a habit of plowing through the sands of the aquarium with his face. He moves rapidly, passing the sand through his gills as he goes. This queer antic is at times extremely comical. No matter how secretly food is dropped into the tank, the Dojo discovers it instantly. Sight of the food does not seem necessary, the odd fish having some secret method of gathering news.



"COMET-TAIL" OR "SHUBUNKIN"

The Dojo may be kept out of water for considerable time with no fatal result, indeed, he is shipped from Japan, packed in moist grass only, and is kept alive in his container for weeks.

The head of the fish greatly resembles that of the carp and is well provided with barbes, in fact, it has a well developed mustache.

The actions of the Dojo are graceful and he appears like a waving band of ribbon as he swims here and there among the plants. The skin is smooth and slippery to the touch and shines with a dull, golden sheen. They do not molest goldfish or other creatures of the aquarium. They have a curious habit of resting the forepart of the body on the pectoral fins and staring at the observer out of bright red eyes.

The Dojo seems to be somewhat of a thinker and will sit for hours on the tip of his tail—buried in thought, perhaps. About the head his appearance is not unlike the walrus.

The Dojo promises to hold an interest all his own, most particularly because of his business-like characteristics, and also because of the spectacular character of his antics.

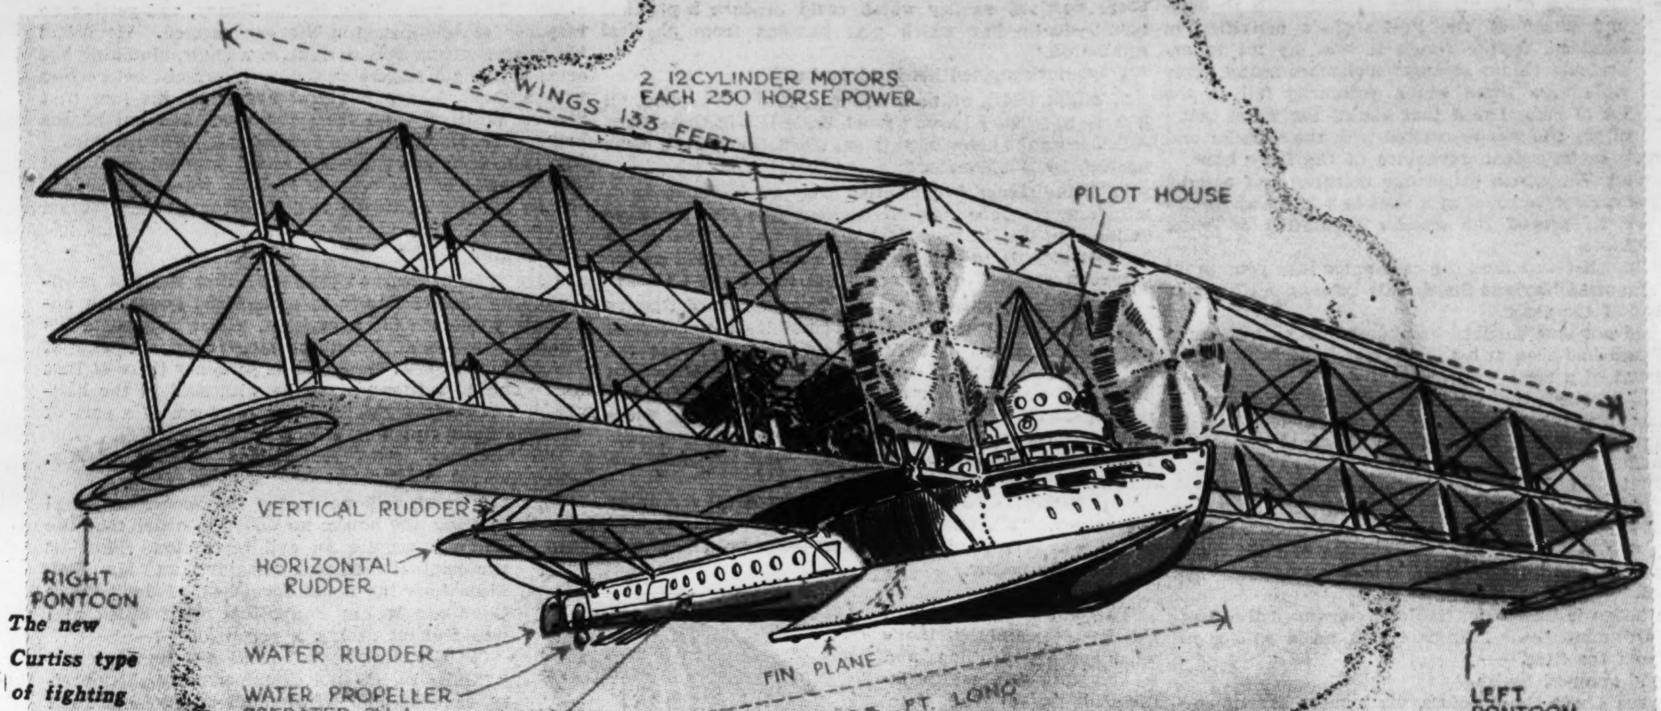
Japan has been the source of our fancy fish supply for centuries and probably will continue to be so. Her annual exportation of goldfish alone, runs far into the millions of fishes and since the European war has severed abruptly the supply of tropical and other varieties of aquarium fish, American fanciers have been paying attention to the more easily obtained species of America and the Orient.

Lloyd says the great mistake made by the neophyte in fish culture is feeding the fish anything and everything. Foods containing flowery substance are decidedly indigestible.

UNCLE SAM'S "LAST WORD" IN FIGHTING MACHINES

Detailed views and descriptions of the powerful new triplane battleship which carries a crew of twenty men.

The newest super-torpedo boat, both under construction here as a result of lessons learned from the great world war.



The new Curtiss type of fighting triplanes, sketched from photograph.

TROUBLOUS times like these (and painful necessity) were required to bring forth the last word in fighters of the upper skies and underseas. The 1000 horsepower armored battle cruiser of the air is here; likewise the 600-foot torpedo battleship of the subseas. Both are pictured on this page from actual photographs and detailed drawings.

Since war flared across the horizon Uncle Sam has been busy in filling orders for fighting machines from abroad. But he has saved some of the best of his ideas for himself. Developing, improving, revolutionizing. Yankee ingenuity is now turning out war engines such as no one dreamed of a brief decade gone.

Look at the fragile plane of but a scant five years ago—who ever dreamed of its successor of today? Once it had difficulty in struggling aloft, and more in staying there—now it takes up 20 men and a battery which would put to the shame the modest armament of a gunboat in the days of the Civil War.

And the submarine—uncertain, and just as apt to go down as to come up but a few years ago, refusing utterly to function any further. Now her ultimate will scorn to sink at all, lying awash on the waves and pouring out her salvos of torpedoes, unmindful of the great guns of her thundering enemies pounding away in vain at her slippery elephantine sides.

Glenn H. Curtiss is building the new type warship of the air at Buffalo. It weighs 10 tons and carries five tons more—a total lifting capacity of 30,000 pounds, including 20 in crew. The sky fighters will be armored beneath, to protect the occupants from the fire of machine guns and flying bits of shell from anti-aircraft weapons, and will themselves carry a powerful battery of guns heavier than has ever been placed on an aeroplane before. Henry Woodhouse, governor of the Aero Club, has been privileged to see the prototype of all the fleet, and he describes it as follows:

"This giant (without wings when I saw it) looks not unlike a whale with windows, and with extending fins on the fore part of the body. Without the rear rudders this hull is 55 feet long and 10 feet wide in the extreme. On each side of the body are fin-like planes extending out five feet, and about 15 feet long, which will, when the machine is driven at the proper speed, make it rise freely from the waves.

"I went inside the hull and stood in each of the three compartments. The main cabin is 19 feet long, 8 feet wide and 7 feet from floor to ceiling. Over the boat body is the inclosed pilothouse. There is a false keel with bilge pumps, and three water-tight compartments at the stern and two at the bow.

"I saw the wings of this battle cruiser of the sky assembled in another department. Being a triplane, there are three wings superimposed, each about 133 feet over all. Elsewhere I saw the making of the four 12-cylinder motors of 250 horsepower each, which are to drive the two huge propellers. An additional 80 horsepower motor will operate a screw propeller for use on the surface when it is unnecessary to set the big motors going."

This is as much as the Curtiss concern will allow to be told about their new fleet of fighting triplanes.

The subsea battleship, as described before a Congress committee by Capt. William W. Sims, U. S. N., commander of the new superdreadnought Nevada, was first suggested in this country, but there is reason to believe that both Germany and Great Britain are also building such vessels with a speed of 35 knots—a sort of monster submarine that can stay on the surface because of its heavy armament. There are to be no guns except a few torpedo defense guns, as little upper works as possible and a displacement in the neighborhood of 20,000 tons. As Capt. Sims says:

"Such a subsea battleship is to have one conning tower forward and one aft, both small in diameter but very thick in metal. She is also to have heavily armored smoke pipes for her oil-burning engines and the protective deck is to be so thick as practically to insure her machinery's protection.

"The defensive power of the ship is to consist of 16 under-water torpedo tubes. She is not to operate in the line of battle with the main squadron, but in such a manner as to be able to charge the enemy's line on the unengaged side and fire her torpedoes from a distance at which hits would be practically assured. She would be perhaps 600 feet in length and lie so low in the water that with a heavy sea running her armored decks would be awash."

Uncle Sam also has a supersubmarine building now, but nothing like this monster of the deep—a new idea for the United States navy from Commander Schofield. She is not intended to sink, but to lie so low in the water as to offer hardly any target at all, and that target to be of whale-back type and so heavily armored that the enemy's shots will ricochet off like bullets from a steel shield.

Such a vessel, in short, would be a kind of modern monitor, including the salient advantages of the submarine with the sturdiness of a type of warship that has almost become extinct because its mobility and carrying powers were not suitable for new sea warfare methods. To co-operate with a fleet, a gunboat must combine great speed and destructive power with a wide cruising range.

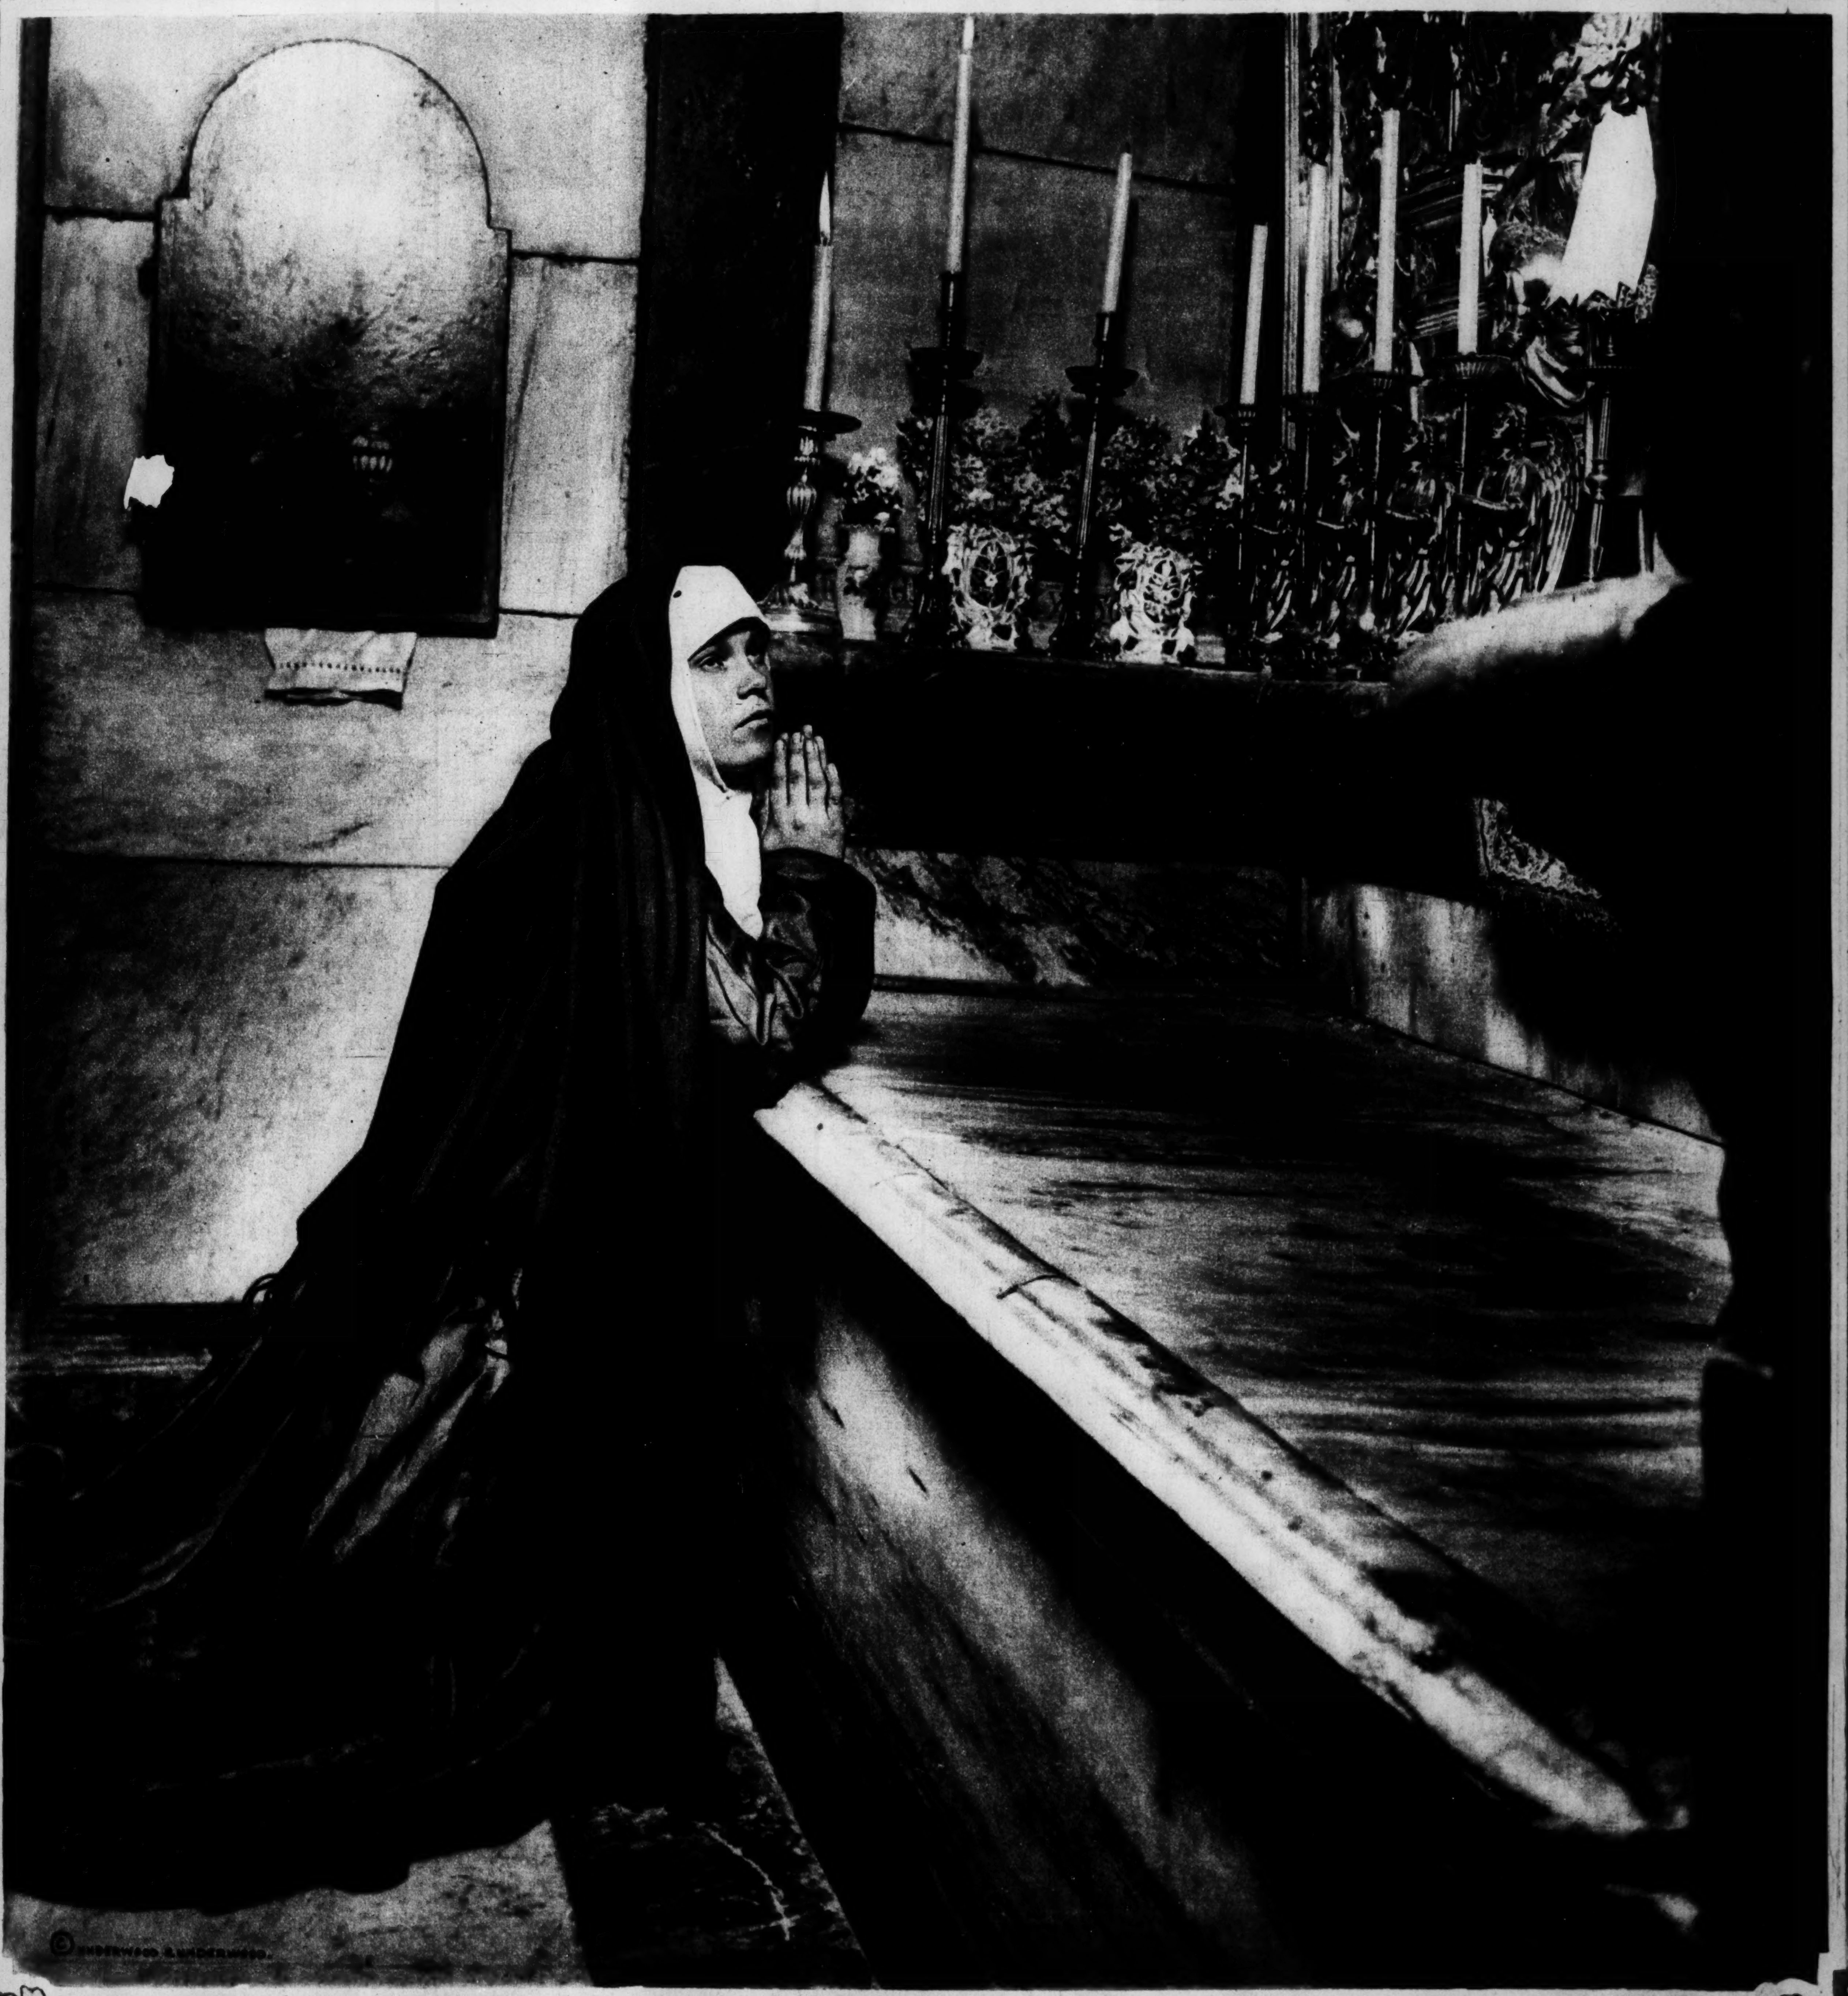
A PRAYER at the TOMB OF CHRIST

First photograph ever made showing a pilgrim in the attitude of worship at the world's most sacred altar.



© UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD.

TO the Tomb of Christ, the most sacred shrine in Jerusalem, Emperors, Kings and pilgrims the latter by the thousands come from all parts of the world to say their fervent prayers. To the majority of the pilgrims this means the fulfillment of a long and zealously cherished dream. The Russian nun, seen in the picture, as she kneels before the lamp with a prayer on her lips and her eyes looking upward, symbolizes thousands of others who, like her, become religiously inspired by the sanctity of the place. The Sultan of Turkey exercises a sovereign's right of ownership of the Tomb of Christ, and hence enforces from the Greek Orthodox, Catholic, Armenian and Copt priesthoods an annual contribution of about $200,000 for the sole right of holding services thereon. The task of making this photograph was a difficult one and required considerable tact and diplomacy on the part of the photographer. He was first obliged to work himself into the good graces of the priests of the various denominations who have access to the shrine so that there might be no objection made. The place is usually crowded by pilgrims. He finally obtained permission to make the photograph between the hour of 12 and 1, when the Holy Sepulchre is closed to the public. The picture was made by flashlight. The entrance to this Tomb is by a low door from the main Chapel of the Holy Sepulchre. The Tomb is but 6½ feet long by 6 feet wide, and the photograph is the first one to show a person before this sacred altar. The tombstone which is covered with marble slabs is about 5 feet long and 2 feet wide and 3 feet high. This cavern in the rock was discovered by Emperor Constantine early in the fourth century and a chapel was soon erected over the spot. It has ever since been considered the rock sepulchre where the body of Christ was laid, the same referred to in Luke 23, 53. The slab on the north wall is a relief in white marble representing the Saviour rising from the grave and belongs to the Greek Church. The long slab to the right of it belongs to the Armenian Church.

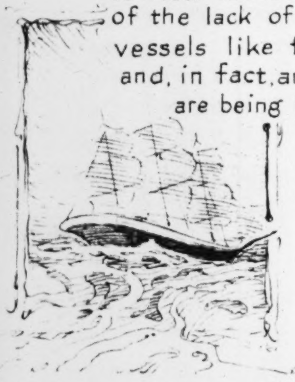
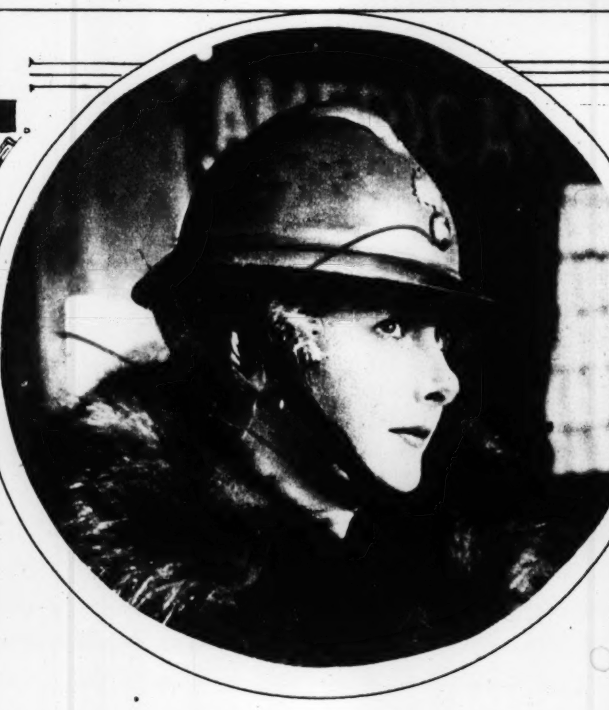
The war has brought old sailing ships back to New York's water front. Because of the lack of steam merchantmen, vessels like the one in the picture and, in fact, anything that will float, are being pressed into service.





American women, too, are adopting the French war helmet for their Easter headgear. It is all the vogue among the women of Paris this spring.

The New Way In Typewriting

A revolutionary new method, totally different from anything known heretofore, is doubling and trebling salaries of typists in all parts of the country. Already, hundreds formerly earning but $8 to $15 a week are drawing $25, $30 and even $40 weekly, and their work is easier than ever before. A wholly new idea. Greatest step since invention of typewriter itself—based on Gymnastic Finger Training!

AMAZING SPEED EASY FOR ALL

Results felt from first day's use. Entire system quickly learned at home in spare time. No interference with regular work. Speed and accuracy are what business men want and they will pay worth-while salaries only to those who have them. This new system enables anyone to write
